U. S. PREVENTS STATE TRIALS OF DRY KILLERS

Coast Guards Slay Four in Florida.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., May 14.—[Special.]—The policy of the United States coast guard forces stationed in Florida to shoot and kill prohibition law violators or suspects upon impulse has led to a rather perilous situation in east coast waters where pleasure yachting and tourist cruising has become as dangerous almost as travel in the submarine zones during the world war.

It has now developed that in the case of the killing of suspects by the coast guard, the state courts will not be permitted to try those accused and indicted for murder. The United States court for the district had laid down the rule that such trials are to be held before the federal tribunal and that the United States attorney shall defend the accused, who may be prosecuted by the state's attorney of the county in which indictment was returned.

Four Cold Blooded Murders.

There are four instances of cold blooded killing of suspected violators of the prohibition law now in the public eye. One of the victims, it was afterward found, was innocent of any connection with prohibition violation and reputed to be of dry sentiments. He was E. H. Jones, a citizen of Richmond, Va., who was fatally wounded by coast guardsmen while navigating his power boat in Biscayne bay off Tahiti beach with a party of guests.

The list of those killed by gunfire or otherwise are:

Duncan E. Shannon, shot dead on the forward deck of his own boat while he stood with both hands raised above his head in token of surrender. The bullets were fired into his back. The incident took place in the yacht basin at the Flamingo hotel, Miami Beach.

Ermon H. Jones, Richmond, Va., struck at the base of the brain by a well aimed rifle ball as he piloted his own yacht in Biscayne bay off Coral Gables.

Feed Prisoners to Sharks.

Charles Waite, Miami, heaved overboard from a coast guard boat on which he was a prisoner, shot through the head, according to a surviving witness, and left to sink in the shark infested waters.

George Smith, arrested with Waite, thrown overboard from coast guard cutter and pitched back into the water when he managed to grasp the boat's rail in an effort to save himself.

Numerous instances of the coast guard firing upon private yachts in the vicinity of Miami have been reported to local authorities and some to the treasury department, without any particular results, and incidents of search and seizure at sea of private and law abiding craft have been so frequent as not to cause much interest.

Executed Without Trial.

In the case of the four killings, however, three victims had been suspected of law violations, though not formally accused, previous to their executions without trials. The fourth victim, Jones, was conducting himself in a manner, according to witnesses, which would lead no one not afflicted with fanatical zeal, to even suspect he might have been a law violator.

It was the maneuvers by federal authorities to get the coast guard crew which did the shooting, three of whom later were indicted for murder, out of the hands of local authorities, which revealed the approved practice of the federal authorities for handling such cases only in federal court.

The three guardsmen indicted for the Jones death are charged with first degree murder, for which no bond is allowed. When the sheriff went to the coast guard station at Fort Lauderdale to apprehend the men he was informed by Commander P. W. Lauriat that they were at sea.

U. S. Frees Them on Bond.

A day or two later local authorities were notified by the federal court clerk at Jacksonville that the case had been transfered to the United States court there and a few hours later the accused appeared at Jacksonville, surrendered, and were released on bond in custody of subpoenaed officers.

The federal action called from Carl T. Hoffman, county prosecuting officer at Miami, a bitter arraignment of the government's practice of "hiding out" federal operatives charged with murder in connection with prohibition enforcement. He accused the federal authorities of deliberately "spiriting away" the men.

"Those men should be surrendered

MONDAY MORNING IN THE PARK

At a cost of four bullet wounds to himself, Sergt. William Schultz of Sheffield avenue police frustrated a robbery early last evening in a soft drink parlor at 3017 Armitage avenue and seriously wounded one of a pair of bandits. The wounded robber escaped, but was captured several hours later.

Schultz was in a rear room of the saloon when the robbers entered and compelled the proprietor, Samuel Ruddy, his wife and four patrons to raise their hands. As the policeman, unaware of their presence, stepped into the front room one of the men opened fire on him.

Wounded but Battles On.

Although wounded, Schultz drew his own pistol and fired back, emptying the gun. One of the men fell. So did Schultz. He had been struck twice in the head, once in the arm and once in the leg. The wounded robber then staggered to his feet, kicked the policeman's gun, picked it up and tried to fire it. Failing in this, he joined his companion and fled.

He was taken into custody by Deering street police when he appealed to a physician for treatment of three wounds in the body. At Bridewell hospital the robber gave his name as Ignatz Strozdas, 17 years old, of 3253 Normal avenue. The police found he was still carrying Schultz's pistol.

"Lone Bandit" of Loop.

Later Strozdas admitted that he was the lone bandit who had held up dozens of loop stores recently and to whose capture 100 policemen were especially assigned yesterday. He also told the police that Harold Crocker, 23, was his confederate in the saloon robbery. Crocker was arrested at 2022 North Halsted street.

He also made admissions that resulted in the capture by Sergt. Ernest Deliege and his squad of four men and a woman at 2013 Canalport avenue. The police assert that they have committed more than 100 stickups. Those arrested in the raid are Charles Hanson, Frank Blacka, Thomas Nash, Edward Brewer and Marie Wilkins. The girl is said to have accompanied Strozdas on his loop robbery expeditions.

MRS. J. S. CURREY DIES IN BLAZE AT EVANSTON HOME

Mrs. Mary E. Currey, 74 years old, wife of J. Seymour Currey, secretary of the Evanston Historical society, was suffocated by smoke last night when her clothing caught fire in her home at 1308 Judson avenue, Evanston.

The Curreys were preparing to move to another home and were burning papers in a living room grate when Mrs. Currey's dress was ignited. Her husband attempted to extinguish the flames, but she was unconscious before he succeeded.

Firemen and the police were summoned. When they arrived they found Mrs. Currey's body lying at the door of the living room. She was taken to the St. Francis hospital, where physicians pronounced her dead. The burns she had suffered were not sufficient to cause death, it was said, the physicians attributing asphyxiation as the cause.

Eight Chicago Priests Feared Slain in China

Tales of torture and suffering and a lurking menace of death written to friends in Chicago by Chicago Catholic missionaries to China—several of them reported missing at the same time that dispatches told of massacres in which 3,000 perished—were given to THE TRIBUNE last night.

Out of a dozen priests who left the Passionist monastery in Norwood Park, northwest of the city [educated for the priesthood there], eight were reported missing in the West Hunan district of China, and friends fear they have been tortured and put to death.

It was just one year ago that the eager band of a dozen youthful crusaders — the youngest was twenty-three and the eldest among them only 27—left Chicago to go forth and spread their Christianity in China. They were, in fact, the youngest group of missionaries ever to be sent forth from the Passionist monastery in Norwood Park, and they went forth with youthful zeal in the missionary cause and yesterday the story of their probable martyrdom was told.

Names of the Missing.

Among the missing Chicago Passionist Fathers are Rupert Langenbacher, Basil Bauer, Clement Seybold, Gregory McEttrick, Ernest Cunningham, Jeremiah McNamara, Terrence Connelly and Theophane McGuire.

Fathers William Westhoven, Anthony Maloney, Cyprian Frank, and Godfrey Holbein went away with the missing ones, and their fate is almost as much in doubt as the others', although no positive word that they are missing like the others has been received.

Father McEttrick, as far back as Feb. 13, wrote what was to happen, when he said in a letter: "We are on the eve of a terrible time. China is in the throes of a fearful civil war. One side is backed by Soviet Russia. Unfortunately that is the winning side.

Says Reds Have Control.

"How long we will hold out is hard to say, since the Reds have control of the land and the soldiers are helpless against the mob.

"The American consul has ordered all Americans to leave this section. Three urgent telegrams have been received to that effect. But we are helpless. As Catholic priests we have to stand our ground. We cannot in conscience flee, even if the government has warned us out.

"We have to stand by our post and see it through, although it is going to mean more than I will tell you. The branding iron is being prepared for us if we don't turn traitor."

Once, Father McEttrick said, in another letter, the bandits roamed over China in a horde, had captured Father Ernest Cunningham. They demanded $75,000 ransom for him. The fathers got together all the American silver they could, some $88 in many pieces, and with it deceived the bandits into giving their colleague up.

"When the bandits had Father Cunningham, before we conceived the idea of giving them American silver," the letter stated, "they cut off one of Father Cunningham's ears."

Hydromel 4th, Best West Can Do.

A page of pictures of the running of the Kentucky Derby yesterday taken by Tribune staff photographers and brought to Chicago by special airplane will be found on page three of the sports section

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., May 14.—Out of the east from the stable of Harry Payne Whitney, who has been trying since 1915 to duplicate the victory of Regret, came Whiskery, a brown son of Whisk Broom II. In turf annals of 1927 will be written that Whiskery gallantly, gamely, convincingly established his supremacy today over the fourteen picked colts that opposed him in the Kentucky Derby's fifty-third annual renewal before 90,000 spectators.

In those annals will be recorded that only a short head behind the winner was Osmand, with Earl Sande astride; that Sande used his consummate skill to such purpose in a brilliant finish that a tired colt, measurably inferior today to the one which passed him in the last hundred yards, nearly lasted long enough to win.

Back in third position, a length and a half from the leaders, was Jock, one of those despised outsiders which so often achieve fame in this greatest of 3 year old races. Jock, forlorn hope stablemate of War Eagle, from his post position, went to the front and outstepped the vaunted front runners until Osmand displaced him around the stretch turn.

Laurels All for the East.

The result was a clean cut victory for the east, this greatest Derby of recent years in point of contention. It made good the proud boast of those from that section that not a Kentucky horse would be in the first three. Rolled Stockings, second choice in the speculation, was prominent only in the early stages and finished twelfth. Hydromel was fourth.

That was the best old Kentucky could do.

Whiskery paid the surprisingly liberal odds of $6.80, $3.80, and $3.40 for each $2 invested for straight, place, and show respectively.

Osmand rewarded backers with $6.40 and $5.80, while Jock yielded $14.20 for third position. Time for the race was 2:06, although the early pace was fast. The race was worth $51,550 to the winner, $6,000 to second, and $3,000 to third and $1,000 to fourth.

In Whiskery's victory was a bit of fate's irony for Owner Harry Payne Whitney, who was in Louisville for the classic but did not see his colt win. Not since Regret in 1915 has a Whitney color bearer been first, although the best of his string have been sent west each year. Never had his chances seemd more rosy.

Illness Keeps Him Away.

But illness steped in and kept him in his private car on the railroad siding. Trainer Freddie Hopkins, who saddled the winer, received from Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago the gold plate donated by the Kentucky Jockey club to the winner's owner.

Standing beside Big Bill as he made the presentation was Mayor Jimmie Walker of New York, who officiated last year. Mr. Whitney's indisposition was a case of grip, which is not considered serious.

Into the bright clear sky of the morning floated threatening clouds. Toward Derby time several showers sent spectators scurrying to shelter. As the field of fifteen paraded to the post, however, it was dry and the track had not been affected.

Stepping along with the lead pony was Rolled Stocking, because of his nervousness. Then in order were Jock, Royal Julian, Buddy Bauer, Hydromel, Black Panther, Whiskery, Kiev, Bewithus, Osmand, Rip Rap, Bostonian, Fred Jr., War Eagle and Scapa Flow. Most impressive in appearance were the chestnut Osmand, Whitney's pair, Hydromel, Bewithus, and the brown picture colt, Scapa Flow.

Hydromel Breaks Through.

There was only a slight delay at the post. It was caused by Hydromel breaking through the barrier and cantering a sixteenth before his jockey regained control. On his return to the post, they were sent away to a start in which all seemed in perfect alignment. There was crowding right after

Movie Queen Pola Becomes Prince's Wife

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 14.—Pola Negri became a princess and Serge Mdivani the custodian of a $520,000 a year salary—the movie queen's income—at 5 o'clock this afternoon in the historic château at Seraincourt, thirty miles from Paris.

According to the French custom, the couple were married with a marriage contract stipulating in advance that in case of death, divorce or anything else, Pola retains her property unless specially deeded to her husband, and Prince Serge keeps whatever he has, unless he specifically bequeaths something to his wife.

Prince's Family Stays Away.

The noble Georgian Mdivani family was largely absent.

Brother David could not come because his wife, Mae Murray, also a movie queen, would not let him, as Mae and Pola do not move in the same social set in Hollywood, and Mae is a bit put out about having another movie star as a sister in law and sharing the princely title.

Finally, the sister, Roussadana, a famous sculptress, who once was reported engaged to Clifford Harmon, a former New York realtor, was absent because she was "sick."

Daddy Mdivani, who had Pola worked up to a feverish froth by his delay in arriving, was late because he vainly tried to persuade Roussadana to attend.

Aged Mayor Performs Ceremony.

The bridal party, including Mama Negri, known in private life as Eleanor Chalupec, Gen. Mdivani, and the witnesses, Prince Dmidoff, M. Houlewics and Clifford Harmon, motored to the town hall at Seraincourt—a tiny room over the local public school, where the aged Mayor Mercier said the marriage ceremony.

Pola, deathly pale, wore a silver band in her blue blank bobbed hair and a long trained, ivory colored gown, armless and cut low. A sable edged ermine cloak was draped about her shoulders. The giant solitaire diamond which once caused certain unpleasantness with the New York customs inspectors, two diamond bracelets, studded with emeralds bigger than hickory nuts, and enormous pearl drop earrings constituted her jewels.

The tall, slender princeling wore a cutaway, white spats and a shiny silk hat, and had his hair cut shorter. He perspired profusely.

And So They Were Married.

"Gen. Mdivani, do you permit your son to marry Apolonja Domski-Chalupec?" asked the mayor.

"Oui, monsieur," murmured papa.

"Eleanor Chalupec, do you consent that Apolonja marry Serge Mdivani?" asked the mayor.

"Oui, monsieur," whispered mama.

"You hereby witness the marriage contract regulating all property rights and communal goods belonging to you both—the pledge of fidelity—you, Serge, promise to support and live with your wife—you, Apolonja, promise to obey and remain with your husband," the mayor intoned. Then Serge planted a kiss on the bride's scarlet lips, Mama Chalupec embraced Papa Mdivani, the parents embraced both offsprings and then the witnesses got in their deadly work of kissing the bride.

The mayor made a cute speech wishing them a long life and lots of kids and the party was whisked back to the château, while the cameramen and movie operators snapped and ground.

"Kiss her!" yelled the camermen when the couple posed at the château.

"Kiss me, princess," Serge murmured tenderly, and Pola did—and how!

While the nondescript gang of guests raided the buffet and the champagne, Serge and Pola left for Deauville in the big limousine that Rudolph Valentino left the bride.

"No, I won't play baccarat or gamble any more," Prince Serge said as they drove off.

"Strictly honest by nature" was Holleran Yell as a prize fight manager. Suspicion never entered his mind when his new found friend took his pistol and returned shortly plus $300. . . .

FIND NEW CLEW IN SEARCH FOR FRENCH FLYERS

Tell of Explosion in Newfoundland.

St. Johns, N. F., May 14.—(AP)—The Newfoundland constabulary tonight began investigation of a report that a loud explosion was heard at Whitbourne, in the interior of Newfoundland, soon after the droning of an airplane engine had been noticed above the place last Monday morning.

Inspector General Hutchings of the colonial constabulary received a message from Sergeant Dwyer, stationed at Bay Roberts on Conception bay, informing him of this latest development in the search for the missing French flyers, Capts. Charles Nungesser and Francois Coli.

The message said that Dwyer had heard that a man who was at Whitbourne Monday morning heard a noise in the clouds like a passing plane and shortly afterward a heavy explosion.

SAY THEY SAW PLANE

BY SIR PATRICK McGRATH.
[President of the Legislative Council of Newfoundland.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The New York Times.]

St. John's, N. F., May 14.—Three persons who say they saw an airplane passing overhead near Harbor Grace last Monday forenoon, have been added to the five residents of Harbor Grace itself who have reported that they heard a plane, now supposed to be the missing Nungesser-Coli craft, droning over them at about the same time.

Mrs. Ann Kelly, 70, living at Otterbury, west of Harbor Grace, states that on Monday morning between 9:30 and 10 o'clock she heard a loud noise overhead. She looked up and saw what she took to be two large, white birds, going southward.

Two men, Ebenezer Peddle, 56, and his son, James, 18, both residents of Bear Cove, one mile east of Harbor Grace, reported both seeing and hearing the machine.

Looking up they described a large, white machine bearing about northwest from them. They heard the noise of the engine for nearly fifteen minutes before the sound died out.

DELAY AMERICAN RACE

New York, May 14.—[Special.]—The New York to Paris flight was still blocked by bad weather of the Atlantic today. Tonight the pilots said that the weather was worse than the day before and showed little sign of clearing up before Monday. That was the belief of James H. Kimball of the weather bureau, also, and he said that a flight for the next day or two would be inadvisable.

All three of the contending planes were in the air today. Commander Richard E. Byrd, who said he had several days of tests ahead of him before he would be ready to leave, flew his big plane for the first time and tested his instruments. He said he was greatly pleased with the ship, but that he would not know just what it would do until he had run load and consumption and speed tests.

Lindbergh Tests Instruments.

The Bellanca was flown once by Clarence Chamberlin, with Charles A. Levine, owner of the plane, as passenger, and Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh took his plane up twice on instrument tests. His plane and the Bellanca are all ready now to take off at any moment, and Lindbergh may fly his plane over to Roosevelt field tomorrow so it will be near the runway.

Meanwhile searchers for the two French flyers, Capts. Charles Nungesser and Francois Coli, had virtually abandoned hope of finding them. They have not been heard from since shortly after they left France for New York in their plane, the White Bird, last Sunday morning.

A report during the day from Atlanta, Ga., that an amateur radio operator had received a code message from Trinity bay, N. F., stating that the French aces had been found, was generally discredited. St. Johns, N. F., declared that no basis for the report could be found.

Navy Gives Up Search.

Tonight it was announced from Washington that the dirigible Los Angeles would not be sent to Newfoundland, as it was not considered feasible. The distance, according to naval experts, is too great for the cruising radius of the ship. It also was reported from Washington that naval and coast guard vessels were giving up the search in northern waters.

A huge crowd was around the planes of the American flyers all day. Spaces in front of the hangars were roped off, and about forty Nassau county policemen kept the crowds back.

There was little confusion and the people learned very quickly that it was not safe to go too close to a whirling propeller while a plane is warming up.

There were at least 4,000 cars and 7,500 people on the two fields during the day. Capt. Rene Fonck, who piloted the Sikorsky when it crashed last year in the first attempt to get off for Paris, and Lieut. Alvord J. Williams, winner of many speed races, visited the field today.

Lindbergh was the center of attraction all day. The Bellanca had been so long in preparation that people have got used to reading about it and seeing it, but the tall lad from the west, whose rapid flight here from the coast attracted so much attention, is brand new and has made friends of every one by his good nature and modesty. He was besieged by all sorts of people until he took refuge in his hangar with a rope across the front door to keep them out. He made an exception of some small boys, who gazed at him with open eyed admiration and envy.

Breaks Tail Skid.

The feeling toward Lindbergh was evident when he went out to climb into his plane during the afternoon on his second flight of the day. As he appeared in the open space alongside the ship, the crowd began to clap and kept it up until Lindbergh ducked into his box of a cockpit and out of sight. After warming up his motor the plane was turned about and quickly started off.

The plane lifted easily after a short run and Lindbergh shoved its nose sharply for a climb that showed its speed and maneuverability. He made a short flight in a wide circle while his compass was tested, and then came down and the plane was wheeled back into the hangar.

In the first test during the morning Lindbergh was forced to turn his plane quickly on the ground to avoid hitting some photographers, showing that he can see even through his periscope. But the sudden swerve broke his tail skid and he had to have a new one installed.

Lindbergh Is Cautious.

A slight crack was also found in the cap over the center of the propeller, and it was taken off and repaired. This cap is merely for streamlining purposes so the crack was of no importance.

The plane is very graceful in the air and is streamlined as well as any of the planes in the race. It is a stock Ryan monoplane with a Wright motor, except that five feet have been added on each side of the wing to lift the extra load of gasoline.

Capt. Lindbergh has not decided yet whether or not to take an emergency radio set. If he does so it will be a very light, and not one with a generator. It would send for only a few miles. He said today that he would not take off until the weather maps showed that he had a clear road to Paris, and that nothing anyone else might do would swerve him from that decision.

Mother Pays Visit.

Capt. Lindbergh's mother came in from Detroit today and met her son at Garden City. She passed the most of the day in his company and looked his plane over with great pride. This afternoon the youth accompanied his mother to the Long Island railroad station at Garden City. She patted him on the back and stepped aboard the train.

"Well, son," she said, smilingly, "good-by and good luck."

That was Mrs. Evangeline L. Lindbergh's farewell to her son, Charles, who in the next day or two will be winging his way over the broad Atlantic on the venturesome trip to Paris. She might have been bidding him good-by on one of his mail flights, on two of which she flew with him, so lacking in demonstrativeness was her parting. There were no tears.

Commander Byrd's big Fokker had three tests today after it had been formally accepted by Grover Whalen for Rodman Wanamaker. On all three tests it was flown by Bert Acosta.

The theory of his invention is that of adding 93% air to 7% gasoline in such a way as to create perfect combustion. The device by actual tests on various makes of cars, including Fords, Chevrolets, etc., has cut gasoline consumption unbelievably. The Whirlwind Company, 1041, 385 Winnebago St., Milwaukee, Wis., is acting as sole distributor for the inventor. They are appointing men in each locality to take care of the enormous demand that is being created. This offers an opportunity to make $5,000 or more a year. Write them today for full particulars and free sample offer.—Adv.

MATINEE BANDIT, WAR HERO, FACES PUZZLED COURT

Held Sane, Responsible for 21 Robberies.

What bids fair to become a cause célèbre now puzzles the authorities in the case of Otto Bjorkman, who came home from the war badly wounded and with highest honors for amazing deeds in battle, and who recently became a burglar—confessed burglar of twenty-one Chicago homes.

He is to be arraigned before Judge Emanuel Eller in the Criminal court tomorrow.

For weeks since Bjorkman was caught with a load of loot the courts, prosecutors, the American Legion, veteran's bureau and other patriotic agencies have investigated his case, but the problem is still unsolved, the question being:

What shall be done with a man, gassed and wounded in heroic combat for his country, who is legally sane, physically fit for reasonable labors, and still turns to crime for a livelihood?

Loses Teeth, but Goes On.

Behind Bjorkman's war days is just a colorless career—he enlisted from a gas engine shop of the International Harvester company. He had never been arrested.

Official citations and the memories of a number of Chicagoans who were with Bjorkman in the 28th infantry, First division, testify to his war record. These sources take the soldier through bloody Cantigny and other engagements, and then pursue the main narrative, in the battle of Soissons in the summer of 1918.

Corporal Bjorkman went over the top with his comrades on July 18. A German swung his rifle butt to the American's jaw and knocked a dozen upper teeth out. The drive advanced, Bjorkman stepping out with his squad of seven.

Finishes Nest Alone.

They came to a machine gun nest, with twelve of the enemy gathered about the lead spitting machine. The Americans' rifles, side arms and hand grenades came into play. But one by one Bjorkman's companions fell until the seven in his squad were dead and he alone lived. He plunged on, hurling a grenade into a group of Germans. They were all killed. Some of them had been downed by Bjorkman's comrades, some by himself—he doesn't claim he killed them all. And then Bjorkman took possession of the gun and held it.

Still the Americans advanced. Bjorkman went with them. In the afternoon of the next day, charging a trench with a new squad, Bjorkman fell before machine gun fire, with bullets in his stomach, neck, hip and knee.

Awarded Rare Medals.

Then it was a story of hospitals, over there and over here, with a final discharge from Fort Sheridan hospital in 1920. The government paid him $20 a month compensation at first, then $8, then $12, and later nothing.

Bjorkman won regimental citations. A French general pinned the croix de guerre with palm upon his coat over there, and later France sent to him in America the médaille militaire, a decoration seldom given, and most rarely to foreign soldiers.

For a while the ex-corporal went back to work for the International Harvester. He says he couldn't stand the gas fumes and he quit. He didn't try hard to find work he could do, Bjorkman admits.

When he comes to talk of this he grows sullen. He never smiles, this tall blonde son of the Norse, and jail officials say he appears "sore at the world."

Soon after he came back Bjorkman was married and the arrival of a son brought more cares. Then his wife divorced him and he hasn't seen her or his son since.

While out of work Bjorkman met another unemployed veteran, who gave him, he says, the urge to steal. And he did.

Starts Crime Career.

Last July 23 Bjorkman entered the home of M. L. Christman of 6435 Harper avenue and took clothing valued at $453. He remembered a colored tailor on the west side, so he took the stuff to him and was given a meager price.

The proceeds kept him for a while in his furnished room on the north side. When the money was gone he robbed another place. He worked always in the afternoon and was ticketed the "matinée burglar." Always he took his loot to the colored tailor, Walter Luckett, 2251 West Lake street, who is jailed also for receiving stolen goods.

But Finally Is Caught.

At last, just as Bjorkman left the home of Laura Conroy at 1364 East 53d street with a suitcase, Policeman Jeremiah Griffin stopped him to examine the case. It was full of loot. Then he took Bjorkman to the Hyde Park station, where he confessed to 21 crimes. Much of the loot was recovered.

The American Legion heard of the case and Judge Advocate Henry Gano with John Hartman, liaison officer of the American Legion assigned to the veterans' bureau, went to see Bjorkman. They decided his wounds had turned his mind. So Dr. Francis P. Gerty, superintendent of the psychopathic hospital, was called in by Judge Eller. Assistant State's Attorneys Harry Klatzco, himself a war veteran, and Harry Ditchburne were sympathetic.

Then Dr. Gerty, after hours of examination, declared Bjorkman was sane. His wounds had left no infirmities to prevent him performing light tasks.

YOUTH IS SHOT IN QUARREL OVER A BICYCLE; MAY DIE

John Calindo, 16, of 923 Aberdeen street, was shot below the heart last night, he told police, by Joseph Rusendo, also 16, of 700 Norton avenue, during a quarrel over a bicycle at the entrance to the Sheridan playground, Polk and May streets. Police rushed Calindo to Mother Cabrini hospital, where physicians said he may die. Search for Rusendo, who fled, was at once started.

Young Calino first told police he had been hit by a stray bullet, but when powder marks were seen about the wound, indicating he had been shot at close range, he admitted Rusendo had shot him. Police had to question the wounded youth for some time before he would tell what the quarrel was about.

The girl victim was identified late tonight as Yetta Abrahamowitz, daughter of Louis Abrahamowitz.

SON OF CUDAHY ON STRETCHER AS HE ARRIVES HERE

John R. Cudahy, son of the late John Cudahy, millionaire packer, arrived in Chicago yesterday on a special car attached to a Santa Fé train still suffering from injuries suffered in an automobile accident in Pasadena, Cal., early this month. Mr. Cudahy was carried from the Dearborn street station on a stretcher and taken to the Ambassador hotel in an ambulance.

Members of the family said Mr. Cudahy's pelvic bone was fractured in the accident but that his condition was not regarded as critical. A nurse accompanied him on the journey from California.

In 1922 Mr. Cudahy received considerable publicity when he failed to appear for his scheduled wedding to Miss Louise Chenier Francis, a St. Louis society girl. It was later explained that he was ill and that physicians had advised against his marrying. Mr. Cudahy is still a bachelor.

CHICAGO WAITS ATLANTIC FLYER, PINEDO, TODAY

Army, Navy Airmen Will Greet Italian Ace.

Commander Francesco de Pinedo, lone continent Italian flyer, and his crew of three, expected in Chicago today, weather permitting, are to be the city's official guests.

They are to be met on their arrival at the foot of Monroe street by an escadrille of flyers from the Great Lakes Naval Training station and army fliers from Rantoul field. A full military salute will be fired.

Starts from Memphis Today.

The Italian airman, who left New Orleans yesterday morning with the intention of making a nonstop flight to St. Louis, was forced to land at Memphis at 1:55 p. m., standard time, when strong cross winds were encountered and caused unexpected consumption of fuel. He announced that he would leave Memphis at 7 this morning.

According to schedule, Commander de Pinedo will attempt to fly to Chicago without stopping at St. Louis, probably reaching here shortly before noon today. If fuel becomes short he will refuel at St. Louis, then come to Chicago.

His tentative plan is to leave here tomorrow for a flight to Montreal. Thence he goes to Newfoundland and hops off for his trip across the Atlantic. He hopes to reach Rome by May 24, when Italy celebrates the anniversary of its entrance into the world war.

Coast guard, naval, fire, and police units are to meet De Pinero's hydroplane, which will be escorted into Chicago by naval and army flyers. The Italian plane will be anchored near the coast guard station, outside the mouth of the Chicago river, during the flyers' stay in Chicago.

Commander de Pinedo and his crew will be housed at the Chicago Athletic club after being greeted by Cardinal Mundelein at his home. The four flyers will then attend services at Holy Name Cathedral.

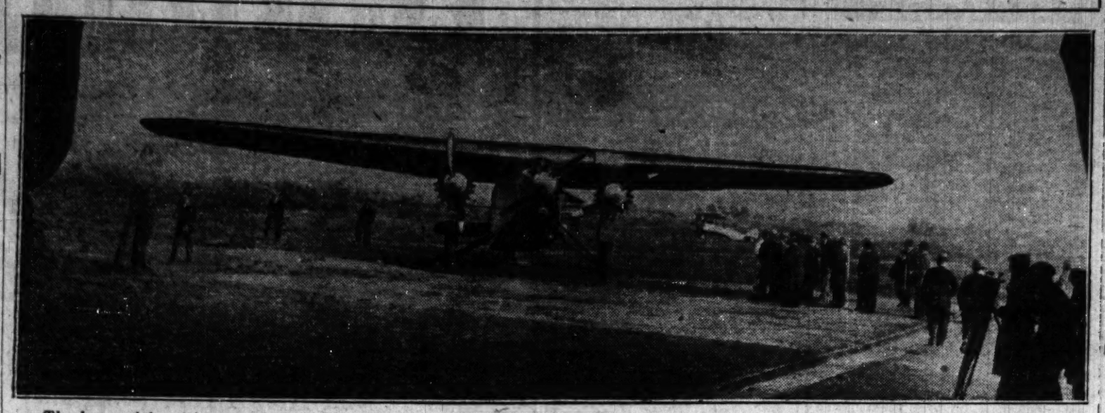
Here Are Official Plans.

Leopoldo Zunini, Italian consul, has planned a series of receptions for prominent persons to meet the flyers during the day. A banquet at the Palmer house is set for tonight after the Italian flyers place wreaths at the statues of Lincoln and Garibaldi in Lincoln park.

Officially greeting the flyers will be Consul Zunini, Anthony Czarniecki, collector of customs, on behalf of the federal civil authorities, and Alderman Dorsey Crowe [42], heading a committee of 100 citizens appointed by former Mayor Dever.

Maj. Gen. William Lassiter, in command of the sixth corp area, and air service officers of army and navy will represent the government's war forces.

BYRD PLANE READY FOR RACE ACROSS ATLANTIC



The huge triple-engined Fokker monoplane America, in which Commander Richard Byrd will attempt to span the Atlantic ocean, as it appeared near its hangar at Teterboro airport, near Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., before being flown to Roosevelt field, Long Island, for final tests. Commander Byrd is now ready for flight when weather conditions permit. [Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

BROTHERS HELD IN COUNTERFEIT CASE.

CHARGE 100 AUTO THEFTS TO 5 MEN UNDER ARREST

Five men are under arrest at the detective bureau suspected of having stolen more than 100 cars in Chicago during the last year and disposed of them to residents of Orland and Peotone, Ill., according to Lieut. John J. Farrell, head of the automobile detail.

They are Arthur Flood and Walter Neebe, 4239 Broadway; Thomas Ackerman and William Hewson, farmers living near Orland, and Paul Meier, a garage owner of Peotone. Flood and Neebe, it is charged, stole the cars in Chicago and took them to the farmers, who changed the motor numbers and sold them through Meier.

Ackerman, who is also known as Thomas Francis, is said to be a former convict. According to Lieut. Farrell, many of the prominent business men of Orland and Peotone are now riding in cars stolen by the ring.

ACTRESS STABS ARCHITECT FOR STRIKING HER

Mrs. Stella Talbot, actress, was being questioned last night by Capt. Hugh McCarthy of the Sheffield avenue station after she had seriously wounded Walter Huenemoerder, an architect, with offices at 30 North La Salle street, with a butcher knife during a quarrel in a flat at 1810 North Clark street, where, she said, they had been living.

Mrs. Talbot said she and Huenemoerder had quarreled while drinking and she stabbed him after he had struck her.

Huenemoerder was taken to the Chicago General hospital, where it was stated he is in a grave condition.

EUROPE'S LITTLE ENTENTE TAKES HEALTH "BATHS"

Envoys Discuss Serbia's Row with Italy.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

JOACHIMSTAHL, Bohemia, May 14.—In a hotel crowded with patients from all parts of Europe trying, in the "magic radium waters," to renew their youth, cure rheumatism, neuroses, and other ills, the little entente conference, which was reported all but wrecked by Premier Mussolini's agreement with Roumania, opened yesterday, defying the superstition of Friday the 13th.

The Jugo-Slavian and Roumanian delegations arrived by special train at the small station six miles from here, where they were met by automobiles that brought them over a road well picketed by troops, to the hotel, where they were received by Foreign Minister Eduard Benes of Czecho-Slovakia.

The ministers were closeted for four hours, after which a communique was issued. It indicated that each government had explained its attitude regarding the trouble between Italy and Jugo-Slavia and Italy's action in bolstering up Hungary, the little entente's bête noire, through the recent treaty between Hungary and Italy.

Besides admitting that each minister has explained the foreign policies of his government, the communique promises that "a decision will be taken."

"While it is too early to say what the decision will be, it is already quite clear that the reports that the little entente is not functioning are far from the truth, as it is generally agreed that only with Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, and Roumania working together and uniting their armed forces can the status quo of central Europe, as provided in the peace treaties, be maintained.

CHARGE U. S. DRY AGENT LAUGHS AS BOAT KILLS TWO

Officer Is Held on Charge of Manslaughter.

Detroit, Mich., May 14.—[Special.]—August Lottner, federal border patrol officer who drove the speed boat that killed James R. Lee, 36, and his daughter, Mildred, 12, on the Detroit river late Friday afternoon, pleaded not guilty to a charge of involving manslaughter when arraigned in Recorder's court this afternoon and was released under $5,000 bonds provided by his mother, Mrs. Pauline Lottner. Examination was set for next Thursday.

"I didn't know we had hurt anybody," Lottner said in court. He and other federal officers declined to add to this statement.

Witness Blames Agent.

"The man who operated that government boat, it seems to me, rammed the launch deliberately and I would like to testify to that effect," Joseph R. Owens, stock broker, who witnessed the tragedy from his sail boat, a hundred yards away, said today.

"I called to him to stop when he started away," Owen said. "But he laughed and speeded up his craft, although Charles Stringari, a passenger in the boat was struggling for his life in the water nearby and the wreckage of the Lee boat so impeded the getaway of the other pilot that he was several minutes extricating his propeller.

"The federal boat passed right over the other one and the sweater of the little girl was wound around its propeller. After it tore itself loose the agent drove up the river, then shortly came back. When I and others, who had gathered around the scene, called to him and threatened him, he drove away again."

Man Jumps After Crash.

Stringari, who jumped from the Lee boat just before the crash was in a serious condition in Receiving hospital today. He has a fractured collar bone and five fractured ribs.

James E. Chenot, chief assistant prosecuting attorney said that two police officers he sent to arrest Lottner at the federal boat well Friday night reported to him that they were refused admittance for considerable time, Lottner finally appearing in company with his companion on the death ride, James M. Fitzsimmons, also attached to the border patrol of the United States customs office.

"Apparently Lottner and Fitzsimmons took plenty of time to confer before they presented themselves," Chenot said. "The police officers said the shreds of the child's sweater, still was twisted around the propeller of the prohibition boat. Lee's boat, I understand had just been delivered to him. He had paid $8,500 for it."

Lottner was accompanied to court by his mother and wife. He refused to say anything beyond asserting that he and Fitzsimmons did not know their boat had hit anyone. On this point, Owens, the eye witness said:

"They struck Lee's boat going at a rate of thirty miles an hour and stopped dead after the crash. It took them quite a while to get free of the wreck after the ramming and before they had got ten feet away I was right near them and called on them to stop."

Carey D. Ferguson, collector of customs declined to make any statement, saying he wished to investigate the case fully before discussing it.

GIBSON, U. S. DELEGATE TO ARMS CONFERENCE, WILL SEE COOLIDGE

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—Ambassador Hugh Gibson, designated chief of the American delegation to the three power naval disarmament conference to be held at Geneva beginning June 20, will arrive in Washington within the next few days for a conference with President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg. Mr. Gibson will receive his instructions while in Washington and will also confer at length with Secretary Wilbur and high ranking naval officials.

COAST GUARDS KILL SUSPECTS IN DRY LAW CASES

U. S. Won't Let State Try Accused Murderers.

to the state authorities," he said, "and the manner in which the federal officers are conspiring in an evasion of the process of Florida courts is inconsistent with the proper policy of any such government official.

Disregard State Laws.

"The coast guard officers have shown flagrant disregard for the laws of the state. It is not in accord with their oath of office. I will be in favor of the indictment of officers who have made this evasion of the law possible."

The incident also had the effect of opening up interest in the trial for murder of the men who killed Shannon and were arrested and indicted last spring, which never has achieved a place on the court calendar. Two witnesses to the shooting were Miss Liebe Daniels and Thomas Meighan, motion picture celebrities, and it was claimed that one reason why the trial did not proceed was because of the difficulty of apprehending them and getting them to testify at the trial.

This explanation drew a smile from local officials, who pointed out that Mr. Meighan was in Miami most of the winter and Miss Daniels easily could be located.

Assails Government Policy.

"The policy of the government," Mr. Hoffman continued, "seems to be to protect their men to the limit regardless of our laws, to football and pigeonhole cases until all witnesses have died or have left the country."

Disregard for the state courts by the coast guard bobbed up in another liquor case, when guards sought as witnesses resisted bailiffs by holding them at bay with pistols. Judge Tom Norfleet, with some diplomacy, induced the commander and culprits to appear before him later. He then lectured Commander Lauriat thus:

"I believe," said the court, "you are trying to carry out the government policies. But we are going to see that it is done legally.

"If in enforcement of one law (prohibition) you have to violate another law to enforce it, then you become just as much—I mean just as bad—as the man who violates the other. The people of the state have constitutional rights that should be protected. We are going to try to do this, in spite of the government's show of force and arms."

Think U. S. Condones Murder.

In Florida it seems to be the opinion that the coast guard is going to the lengths of frequent summary killings of Volstead suspects because of nagging by northern prohibitionists at Washington and the promise that any method, including murder, necessary to abate rum running will be condoned officially, even if a few mistakes are made in which innocent citizens are killed.

Local officials assert that the supply of imported liquor in Florida is now about twice what it was before the advent of the alleged campaign of terror, a year ago.

Still He Tends Explodes and Sends Him to Hospital

Vito Venano, 42, of 1143 West Grand avenue was tending a moonshine still in a barn at 943 West Grand avenue last night when the machine exploded. Boiling alcohol was hurled over him and he was possibly fatally burned. Neighbors took him to the county hospital.

FIRE ON WARSHIPS

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, China, May 14.—A ish wireless report says the United s destroyer Pillsbury was fired with machine guns and rifles by inese soldiers near Nanking today. e British destroyer Sirdar, anchored Nanking, also was struck by rifle , but was not damaged.

Brig. Gen. Smedley Butler's depar- e for Tientsin today aboard the stroyer General Alava supposedly to investigate the facilities for tection of American citizens in rth China.

It became known today that the erican marine and naval forces e have formed a so called "mobile" tingent capable of being sent any- re on the China coast on four rs' sailing notice. The force, which sists of several hundred men, is amped on property of the Standard l Company of New York. It is be- given intensive drill and is held dy for momentary action.

Report U. S. Ships May Leave.

An unconfirmed rumor in Shanghai day says Rear Admiral Clarence Williams may withdraw a part of the erican naval force from Hankow, ere a large force is not considered cessary, as only sixty Americans re- main there. About a dozen American warcraft are anchored in the harbor at Hankow now.

That the United States is likely to be called on for vast famine relief in China before the year is out is indicated in reports from interior areas, where the political and military disturbances are causing the farmers to neglect their planting. Owing to the communistic activities in Hunan province the farmers are not planting rice. This already is causing food prices to soar in the thickly populated Hankow district, which is dependent on the Hunan food supply.

Dr. C. C. Wu, foreign minister of the government set up at Nanking by moderate Cantonese, in a statement today declared China will be delivered from militarism, communism and misgovernment soon. Complete solidarity, he said, will be established in the ranks of the Kuomintang [Cantonese political party] which is molding the mind of young China and is responsible in the brief period of two years for establishing the jurisdiction of Canton in the Yangtze valley. The rule of the Cantonese soon will be extended to the rest of the country, he asserted.

"The installation of the Nationalist government at Nanking affords an opportunity to make a declaration on foreign policy to the effect that Dr. Sun Yat-sen's principles are the guiding motive to emancipate the Chinese people from the state of international bondage and secure an equal status in the world family, to which the nation is entitled, due to its civilization, population and resource," Dr. Wu declared.

"Fettered by Treaties."

"China now is fettered on every hand by treaties and conventions modeled by the foreign powers nearly a century ago. This is practically the only case in human history where the treaties were not modified over a period of 100 years. Therefore, it is unreasonable to insist on China's observance of the antiquated, unequal treaties, when the political, social and economic conditions affecting both the Chinese and foreigners have undergone fundamental changes."

Dr. Wu said the Nationalist government intends to employ all legitimate means for accomplishing the abrogation of the treaties.

British Envoy to Shanghai.

The British minister, Miles Lampson, will come to Shanghai soon. It is believed he intends to discuss the treaty situation with the Nanking government leaders and possibly the question of changing the status of the international settlement.

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, Cantonese army commander and chief of the Nanking faction, has definitely launched a drive against Gen. Chang Chungchang, Fengtien tupan of Shantung province, by advancing considerable forces across the Yangtze from Nanking and from Chinkiang. The force which crossed the Yangtze from Chinkiang now is besieging the town of Yangchow, on the Grand canal. The early fall of the city is predicted. Gen. Chiang says he has more than 30 000 troops at Nanking. Gen. Chen Tiaoyuen also is advancing northward through Anhwei province for the purpose of attacking the Tientsin-Pukow railway north of Nanking.

Local American consular authorities are worried over the tendency of American missionaries to return to their posts in Kiangsu and Chekiang provinces. Several already have departed in violation of consular instructions. It is reported that five missionaries returned to Ningpo, one to Hangchow, and several to Soochow, including W. D. Nance, president of the Soochow university. President F. J. White of the Shanghai Baptist college, which is in Chinese territory outside the foreign settlement, also returned to his post. St. John's university, a local Episcopal school, announces a complete closure until the fall of next year, owing to continued trouble with the students.

FEAR CHICAGO PRIESTS SLAIN IN CHINA

These twelve priests were sent out a year ago from the Passionist monastery in Norwood Park to spread Christianity in China and are now feared by friends to have been slain. Eight are definitely reported missing. Rear row, left to right, are Fathers Theophane Maguire and Basil Bauer, missing; Father Anthony Maloney, fate unknown; Father Gregory McEttrick, missing; Father Cyprian Frank, fate unknown, and Fathers Terrence Connelly and Jeremiah McNamara, missing. Front row, left to right: Father William Westhoven, fate unknown; Fathers Rupert Langenbacher, Clement Seybold, and Ernest Cunningham, missing, and Father Goedfrey Holbein, fate unknown.

WHEELER ASKS PRESIDENT TO OUST ANDREWS

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—Indications that the Anti-Saloon league is attempting to replace Lincoln C. Andrews with a man more in sympathy with its views on law enforcement developed at the White House today.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the dry league, stated after a prolonged conference with President Coolidge that he mentioned the name of Seymour Lowman, former lieutenant governor of New York, as a possible successor to Mr. Andrews.

Andrews has been opposed to the selection of Roy A. Haynes, the acting commissioner of prohibition, to the permanent job, and this is understood to be one of the big reasons why the Anti-Saloon league would like to see him shoved aside in favor of a hand picked dry.

Wheeler told newspaper men that he had urged the President to use his influence in having Haynes appointed permanent commissioner.

While the White House maintained silence on Wheeler's visit, it was stated authoritatively in other sources that President Coolidge has definitely decided to back up Secretary Mellon's decision not to appoint Mr. Haynes.

102 ENLISTED MEN PASS TEST FOR ANNAPOLIS

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—Five Illinoisans are included in a list of 102 enlisted men of the navy and marine corps who have successfully passed mental examinations for admission to the United States Naval academy, it was announced today by the navy department.

The five are W. H. Adams, Danville, Ill.; I. Fawcett, Marion, Ill.; H. E. Ferrill, Carbondale, Ill.; R. G. Lindle, Marion, Ill., and R. W. Mackert, Peoria, Ill.

Two of the 102 successful candidates held appointment from members of congress, so that the remaining 100 are eligible for entrance under the law authorizing the annual appointment to the academy of 100 of the enlisted personnel of the navy and marine corps. The candidates will be subjected to the usual physical examinations.

THE BEST OF EVERYTHING IN THE BEST OF THE WEST!

—and elsewhere in the world of music Lyon & Healy Also Shines!

HARPS

Contrary to popular belief, perhaps, it was the celebrated Lyon & Healy Harp that first spread the Lyon & Healy fame for excellence in all things musical, from coast to coast and around the world.

RARE VIOLINS

Some of the most valuable collections in the world, from time to time find their way to Lyon & Healy's, which has become famous as "The World's Treasury of Rare Old Violins."

SAXOPHONES

World supremacy in Saxophones is a comparatively recent acquisition. But now, no other Saxophone made is even comparable with the Lyon & Healy Balanced Action Saxophone. Ask the stars who are playing it! They are legion.

WASHBURN Stringed Instruments

Washburn Guitars, Banjos, Mandolins and Ukuleles would have made Lyon & Healy famous if nothing else had! Everywhere, they stand for the finest of the fine.

SHEET MUSIC

Nowhere in all the world, we are told, is there more amazing completeness. Lyon & Healy's is more than a Sheet Music Store, it is a Library of "Everything Known in Music," any one of 175,000 titles instantly and constantly procurable!

Leadership that has become almost Monopoly

KIPLING'S RINGING WORDS—"They copied all they could follow but they couldn't copy my mind and I left 'em sweating and stealing a year and a half behind"—well might such words have been inspired by the irresistible, eclipsing onward march of the

Steinway

YET who will not say that the "poets" of the Piano proclaim even more eloquently the Leader, than does the bard of Bateman's with his pen! To wit: A census taken four years ago revealed that of 11,000 representative concerts played in a single concert season, exactly 6,998 were given on the Steinway—more than were played on all other makes combined! And choice of the Steinway among artists grows to be more predominant than ever.

Lyon & Healy, as the recognized Steinway House of America, justly claims no small share in this all-conquering, glorious onward march of the Steinway. This store, 64 years ago, began business selling the Steinway. Today, the unassailable preeminence of the Steinway and Chicago's inherent faith in the store that sells it have made Lyon & Healy's the place, the Steinway the Piano that anyone must choose and does choose, who knowingly would choose the best. From $925.00 up.

STEINWAY ALL OTHER MAKES

The above diagram pictures most graphically how overwhelming is the supremacy of the Steinway. And that dark area keeps growing steadily!—a most interesting and convincing presentation of the fact that Steinway preference is actually more prevalent than ever.

LEVEE CRUMBLES IN 4 PLACES AS THRONGS FLEE

Five More Parishes in Flood Path.

New Orleans, La., May 14.—(AP)—Mississippi flood waters with all the reinforcements of the Yazoo, the Black, the Red and other southern tributaries were assaulting five south-central Louisiana parishes tonight, pouring through earthen embankments which crumbled before their onslaught.

Hope of saving the Bayou des Glaises section, a part of the "Sugar bowl" and the Evangeline country disappeared with the falling of Kleinwood plantation levee. Other breaks at Moreauville, Bordelonville and Cottonport still had left levee board officials with the hope that they might be able to save a part of the rich district.

Four Breaks in Day.

With the breach at Kleinwood, in the middle of Big Bend, along Bayou des Glaises, work was abandoned along the 30-mile stretch from Cottonport to the southernmost of the bend. Four crevasses occurred today in Bayou des Glaises and another levee went out at Cottonport along Bayou Rouge. Three other breaks had occurred previously, one at Cottonport and two at Moreauville.

The affected district is approximately 160 miles northwest of New Orleans and on the opposite side of the river.

In addition to the five major breaks along Bayou des Glaises, aviators flying over the district reported at least fifteen minor crevasses through which the water was tearing.

Waters Speed Southward.

The escaping water tonight already had blanketed more than 250 square miles of fertile avoyelles parish farming lands and were spreading swiftly to cover the crops and thickly populated settlements four other parishes, St. Landry, St. Martin, Idera and St. Mary.

More than 200,000 persons will be affected by the flood and another million acres will be added to the other millions already covered. Before the sweeping mass of waters has reached the Gulf of Mexico it will have cut a devastating path from the northern boundary of Arkansas to the southern shores of Louisiana.

Tonight fifty river craft and coast guard cutters were searching Bayou Des Glaises for the men who had remained to work on the levees.

Many residents already had been carried to Baton Rouge, Alexandria, Torras, Mansura and Marksville.

In the parishes of the south, directly in the path of the flood, the inhabitants repeatedly have been warned to move and the evacuation is expected to be complete before the waters sweep through. The town of Melville, the largest in the path of the flood, already was being evacuated.

Urges Flood Study.

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—Study of the flood control problem by the best engineering talent of the nation is urged by the national rivers and harbors congress.

"Definite action by congress should be delayed until the experts have completed their studies and announced their conclusions," the congress says. "Premature action would certainly result in waste and possibly in disaster.

"Once it is known what plan is best, the American people will not balk at furnishing a few billions to make our country safe from floods."

That the construction of higher and wider levees offers the only certain means of protection from floods on the lower Mississippi is indicated by the congress.

$11,478,555 Relief Fund.

Although no new goal has been announced, contributions for flood relief continue to roll into national Red Cross headquarters. Statistics released today disclose that the Mississippi valley fund has now reached a total of $11,478,555.

Despite the new break in Louisiana, it is not expected that President Coolidge will set a new definite goal for contributions before Secretary of Commerce Hoover returns to Washington or sends a special report on the subject.

HULL IN AIR SURVEY FINDS 900 MILLION ACRES ARE FLOODED

Hammond, La., May 14.—[Special.]—Congressman Frank R. Reid, chairman flood control committee, accompanied by Congressman William E. Hull, of Peoria, and Lachman Mackeay, secretary of the Mississippi Valley association, made an exhaustive survey of the flooded district during the week by aeroplane and boat. They observed more than 900,000,000 acres of land inundated.

Congressman Reid will be well posted when his committee meets for hearing on flood control. He said he favored giving the people who have suffered, relief, but wants to wait until a comprehensive program is presented and then appropriate enough money to do it right.

Congressman Hull said, "I repeat that it will take $100,000,000 a year for ten years to control the Mississippi and its tributaries.

"Twenty million dollars will be necessary to take care of the refugees and put them back on the land."

ROBBER FLEES IN BULLET HAIL.

A Negro last night entered the haberdashery of Max Goodman, 113 East 43d street, and took $25 from the cash register. As he fled Goodman pulled a revolver and followed, firing five times. The bandit escaped.

FLOOD RELIEF FUND PASSES $850,000 MARK

City Exceeds Its Quota by $100,000.

Chicagoans wound up a week of unprecedented generosity in their attempts to alleviate the sickness and suffering left in the wake of the Mississippi delta floods, by reaching and passing the expected mark of $850,000, which betters by $100,000 the quota set for the city when the drive for funds was started.

At noon yesterday the Association of Commerce fund had reached $764,612.09, and the mayor's fund totaled $90,300.23—in hard cash and entirely exclusive of many pledges. The grand total for the day was $854,912.32.

Others Add to Gifts.

Of the large donations that swelled the sum on hand in the office of City Controller Charles Fitzmorris, the mayor's custodian of the flood fund, the largest was for $3,113.55 and represented additional contributions from the Chicago public schools. Employés of the bureau of engineering turned in $2,105; the Mutual Benefit and Aid society, $500, and the German day celebration, $200.

Checks for $100 each were received from the police department, being another of the numerous "repeat" contributions, the Grand Rapids Furniture company, and A. W. Slater of 200 East Chestnut street.

Employés of the Commonwealth Edison company were credited with a donation of $8,761, which was brought into Association of Commerce headquarters. Employés of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad sent $550 in additional gifts, employés of the Goodman Manufacturing company sent $500, employés of the Western Sporting Goods company, $361.30, employés of the Brennan Packing company, $279.35, and $200 each came from the Consumers company [additional], the Columbia Ice and Ice Cream company, Garfield Artificial Ice company, Hygienic Ice company, and Jersey Ice Cream company.

Gifts Sent to Tribune.

A balance of $6,435.82 remaining in relief funds in the hands of THE TRIBUNE will be added to the fund for Mississippi flood relief, together with the contributions of TRIBUNE readers that have reached this office for the purpose. A check for that amount has been ordered forwarded to American Red Cross headquarters.

Donations amounting to $377.85 arrived yesterday at THE TRIBUNE office, bringing the total of THE TRIBUNE flood relief fund up to $24,333.07. The donors were:

$30—Loran Square Baptist Sunday school, English.

Café Aids Sufferers.

All cash taken in at Colosimo's café up to dinner time last night will be turned over to the Red Cross fund. Millions of yards of spaghetti were prepared by five chefs in prospect of a rush of business.

Citizens are urged to send their contributions direct to the Chicago chapter of the Red Cross at 816 South Michigan avenue, or to the Association of Commerce at 10 South La Salle street, or other official agencies. Gifts received by THE TRIBUNE will be acknowledged and the funds forwarded to the Red Cross.

Gen. Booth Says Narcotic Traffic Is Big U. S. Problem

Traffic in narcotics constitutes a problem that should be of tremendous concern to the American people, Gen. Ballington Booth, national head of the Volunteers of America, said yesterday. Gen. Booth is in Chicago for the grand field council of the organization at the Bismarck hotel and at Volunteer headquarters, 2841 West Washington boulevard. This afternoon both Gen. Booth and his wife, Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, will speak at the Chicago Gospel tabernacle at 2:30.

LEGION HEADS OF 7 STATES TO PLAN FLOOD AID TODAY

Cross Is Ousted as Head of Americanization.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 14.—[Special.]—Legion commanders from seven states in the flood stricken area along the lower Mississippi will meet tomorrow at Memphis with government officials and Red Cross executives to discuss a relief program in which the Legion will participate, it was announced at national Legion headquarters here today. Commanders from Arkansas, Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, Kentucky, Illinois and Tennessee are to attend.

A resolution adopted by the national executive committee today urges President Coolidge and congress to enact legislation to allay the suffering and solve the future problem of drainage. The resolution also called for appointment by Howard P. Savage, national commander, of a committee to make a complete survey of needs of former service men in the flooded area, and to formulate plans for relief.

Hope for Rescue of French Flyers.

The committee adopted other resolutions, expressing hope for the rescue of Capt. Charles Nungesser and Maj. Francois Coli, missing French aviators, and voicing regret over the deaths of Lieutenant Commander Noel Davis and Lieut. Stanton H. Wooster, killed in a flight preliminary to an attempt to span the Atlantic.

As the result of a sudden shift in the directorship of the Americanism department of the Legion, at the closed meeting of the committee, it was announced the department probably will be dated with the community department, of which Daniel director.

Cross Is Ousted.

Sowers was appointed head Americanism department to Dr. Frank C. Cross, who has as director for the last two whose views on Americanism coincide with those of the committee. Sowers will continue rect the affairs of the com terment department, however, said by Commander Savage.

Cross is classed as a "ultra economic thought and Sowers as servative." Legion officials evaded questions regarding the

ITALY REVEALS SECRET FRENCH DEAL WITH SERB

Shows Plan for Joint Military Action.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1926: By The New York Times.]

ROME, May 14.—A proposal for a secret military pact between France and Jugo-Slavia was made public in Italy today in a semi-official manner by the newspaper Corriere Padano, which is the property of Undersecretary of Aviation Italo-Balbo.

From the circumstances of the publication it is apparent the source of the document was the official Italian archives. The publication at this time evidently is intended to counteract any definite attempt on the part of France to break up the Italo-British understanding.

Jugo-Slavia's Proposals.

The negotiations between France and Jugo-Slavia were carried out by two documents. The first one, dated Sept. 30, 1919, was signed by M. Pachich and M. Trumbich for Jugo-Slavia and by Georges Clemenceau for France. It read:

"The government of the kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes is convinced that the destiny of the Jugo-Slav nation will not be fulfilled unless there is a strict union with the French nation. Convinced that in order to guarantee the natural outlets of the southern Slavs, which ethnically and geographically are situated on the Adriatic sea, the Jugo-Slav policy must be inspired by the principle of Franco-Jugo-Slav friendship. Convinced that France has common interests with Jugo-Slavia along the routes to the orient, consequently common action to accomplish the protection of these interests is necessary. Convinced of the necessity of insuring the French nation's liberty of action on the coast of Dalmatia in case of war with a Mediterranian power and for the purpose of establishing strict coöperation between the two countries in order to solve the eastern problems, the Jugo-Slavi kingdom has charged Nicholas Pachich, former president of the council of ministers, and Ante Trumbich, minister of foreign affairs, acting in the name of the kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, to submit to the president of the council and ministers of war of the French republic, Georges Clemenceau, preliminaries relative to a military convention as the basis for a definite alliance:

Argues to Mobilize Army.

"Article 1.—The Jugo-Slav government, in agreement with the government of the French republic, undertakes the obligation to establish a special military agreement as the basis of reciprocal guarantees on the part of the contracting parties.

"Article 2.—In consequence of this agreement, in case of conflict between the French nation and a Mediterranean power, the kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes will mobilize its army according to a plan previously prepared by the general staffs of the two countries.

"Article 3.—The government of the kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes in case of conflict, as by article 2, will mobilize its fleet and its merchant marine.

"Article 4.—Upon the beginning of hostilities between France and a Mediterranean power, a certain number of Jugo-Slav divisions, according to the decision taken previously, will assemble at the enemy frontier, ready for the attack.

"Article 8. France would guarantee the integrity of the territory acquired by Jugo-Slavia through the treaty of St. Germain, without, however, engaging herself to give Jugo-Slavia military assistance in case of a Balkan conflict."

The concluding article provides that the military agreements shall be for twenty-five years and "must remain secret."

The second document contains observations made by the French government upon receipt of this Jugo-Slav proposal.

Questions Jugo-Slavia's Possibilities.

The note then puts to Jugo-Slavia a series of questions as to what the Belgrade government can do to put itself on a strong military basis, and states France will give only guarantees respecting the integrity of the Jugo-Slav territory."

The document concludes by proposing that France herself prepare a counter project form on the basis of a military alliance.

The Italian government maintains that this counter project was made, an agreement reached, and a military alliance signed. It is believed here the publication of the preliminary documents is the first step in Italy's program to disclose the secret arrangements between Jugo-Slavia and France.

GUARD BRITISH MISSION FROM MOB IN MOSCOW

Marchers Jeer Sir Austen After London Raid.

MOSCOW, May 14.—(AP)—Russian political police and soviet army troops, on foot and in motor lorries, guarded the streets leading to the British and Polish missions this afternoon while anti-British demonstrators, bearing denunciatory banners, paraded. The demonstration was the outgrowth of the raid by British police on the headquarters of the soviet trading corporation, Arcos, Ltd., and the official soviet trade delegation in London.

The demonstrators carried huge jointed caricatures of Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary. The marchers were not permitted to approach the quarter containing the missions, before which special guards were posted. Late in the afternoon a fleet of twenty planes swooped in formation and circled low over the routes to the mission building.

Soviets Take Serious View.

The raid on the soviet office in London is considered here as of far greater consequence than the raid carried out some weeks ago by northern Chinese agents on the soviet embassy compound in Peking.

Official quarters are represented as looking upon the London incident as reflecting the policy, attributed to Great Britain, of seeking to place soviet Russia in a false position by alleging that compromising documents have been found.

Isvestia, soviet organ, says the raid virtually means the beginning of the rupture of relations mentioned in Foreign Secretary Chamberlain's last note to Russia. Its object, the paper adds, is to deal a blow at the most vital nerve of Anglo-soviet relations, and it is part of the policy of the British government, which, in order to enact the trade unions bill, must divert the attention of the public.

THE REV. C. T. HULL TO BECOME ROGERS PARK PASTOR TODAY

The Rev. Charles T. Hull will be instituted rector of St. Paul's-by-the-Lake Episcopal church, 7110 North Ashland avenue, Rogers Park, this morning at 11 o'clock. Bishop S. M. Griswold will officiate. At the same service Humphrey C. Dixon and Mansel B. Green will be ordained deacons. Dr. E. J. Randall, executive secretary of bishop and council, will preach the sermon and present the candidate to Bishop Griswold for ordination.

THE REV. CHARLES T. HULL.

The Rev. Mr. Hull was ordained in 1917. For seven years he has been assistant rector of the Church of Our Savior at Akron, O. He succeeds in the rectorship at Rogers Park the Rev. Henry Neal Hyde, who resigned last February to become executive secretary of the diocese of west Missouri.

SIFT SAFE CONTENTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, May 14.—The raid on the headquarters of Arcos, Ltd., the soviet commercial agency here, and the official soviet trade delegation today threatened serious repercussions. After working all night workmen early today finished opening the safes in the soviet offices. The several tons of documents found are now being translated and deciphered. The British government announced that all diplomatic activities would be delayed until the exact nature of the discoveries were made known, which is not expected for three or four days.

Although the particular British state paper for which detectives are searching has not yet been found, "highly interesting" discoveries are reported and it is believed a number of documents will be removed to Scotland Yard.

The detectives are still engaged in going over every room in the soviet house in the hope of discovering other hiding places, while experts are continuing the work of breaking open several smaller safes found in the vaults.

Will Reply to Russians.

Meanwhile a reply to Russian Charge d'Affaires Rosengols's protest of yesterday is being prepared, although the British expect another official note from Moscow tonight or tomorrow.

This note is expected to lay stress on the violation of the trade delegates' diplomatic immunity which the Reds declare the raid entailed.

A strong protest against the raid is being sounded in opposition circles, which assert it will only be employed as a victory for the die hards, Winston Churchill and Lord Birkenhead.

Labor circles declare the raid was part of the conservative party's political campaign. Labor thinks the Tories want to kick out the Reds, pass the trades dispute bill, and then call an early general election on the basis of their accomplishment.

WOMAN ACCUSED OF SLAYING IS FREED ON BONDS

Miss Violet Bender, 35, who has been charged with the murder of Albert W. Valecka, former chief of police of Cicero, was released on $20,000 bonds yesterday by order of Judge William V. Brothers.

Anton Valentis, 1544 South Cicero avenue, was surety on the bonds. His wife, Mrs. Bobbie Valentis, was held as a material witness in the case and was also released on bonds.

According to Miss Bender, a tall, powerful woman who has a record as a shoplifter, she was present when an unidentified man attacked Valecka on April 28, inflicting injuries that resulted in his death. The police assert, however, that they have witnesses who will swear Miss Bender struck the former chief on the head with a tire wrench.

RECKLESS YOUTH BLAMED FOR NEW VICE PROBLEMS

Bundesen Pleads for One Standard of Morals.

Youth, flouting age-old laws with a reckless disregard of consequences, has furnished a new vice problem for Chicago, just when commercialized immorality has been brought within practical bounds, according to speakers at the twentieth annual meeting of the Committee of Fifteen in the Hotel La Salle yesterday.

Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen and Miss Kate J. Adams, Morals court worker, made statements and quoted statistics which seemed to startle an audience composed of law enforcement officials and citizens. Chief of Police Michael Hughes, Sheriff Charles E. Graydon, some of the county commissioners, aldermen, a number of judges and civic leaders were present.

Bundesen Fights Double Standard.

The old time street walker has been replaced by some girls of 16, 17, and 18 years, Miss Adams declared. Dr. Bundesen, backing up her statements, made public for the first time figures on immorality among young men and stirred his hearers by an appeal for abolition of the double moral standard which, he asserted, has ruined the lives of many young girls.

As remedies for the problem, which was depicted as a truly alarming one, Dr. Bundesen recommended a campaign of education, conducted by parents for their sons and daughters of adolescent age. Miss Adams traced immorality among girls to bad environment and poor home conditions, suggesting intervention by authorities in homes where the parents appeared to be neglecting their duty toward their children.

The health commissioner read statistics from the Military Surgeon, a medical journal, which revealed the standards of morality at West Point academy among 209 students of the class of 1925. Sixty-one cadets, approximately one-third of the class, admitted 2,909 moral transgressions.

"That was the average among young men picked as the flower of our manhood," Dr. Bundesen pointed out. "The average among the young men of this city, not restricted by military life, probably is much higher. Our youth must be educated to the perils of breaking the moral laws and education must be given them when they are young and in their homes."

The girl transgressors of today, Dr. Bundesen declared, usually trace their immorality to the ostracism of society because of one mistake.

Defends Unfortunate Girls.

"Why should a single transgression by a girl ruin her life any more than it does a man's life?" he asked. "I believe, and I speak as the father of six children, that the girl who makes one mistake is just as good and pure and as fit to be a wife and mother as the male transgressor who is accepted by society as a good husband and father."

Miss Adams said that the wayward girls who have come under her inspection in the Morals court were usually "children of the city," in that they never had proper homes or parental care.

"The flapper of 16 and 17 years has entered the Morals court to replace the old type of immoral woman," Miss Adams said. "She is usually a product of unnatural home life. Once started, she is a frequent repeater. There was a period last year when 200 girls would appear in the Morals court at least once every two weeks."

Suspended Sentences Tried Out.

Judges John J. Lupe and Harry Hamlin, in charge of the Morals court last year, decided to use suspended sentences to jail instead of the old system of fines, Miss Adams said. Under this plan, women are sentenced to the Bridewell and released on probation. If they violate the probation, they are sent to jail. The system was successful in reducing the number of offenders, she said.

Another speaker was George E. Q. Johnson, United States district attorney, who declared that the narcotic habit was growing at an alarming rate in this district. He asked for the cooperation of the Committee of Fifteen in fighting this and other evils.

"Will Enforce All Laws."

"I have often been asked my attitude on prohibition," he declared. "And I have never before answered the question. It seemed to me to be a foolish query. All laws are equally sacred and I shall enforce them all to the letter."

Newly elected officers of the committee were announced. They are: Joseph R. Noel, president; Albert W. Sherer, first vice president; David R. Forgan, treasurer, and Albert H. Barber, secretary.

T. A. Evans, Designer of Wacker Drive, Is Honored

T. Arthur Evans, engineer in charge of design and supervision of construction of Wacker drive for the board of local improvements under Mayor Dever, last night was awarded a certificate for his outstanding engineering accomplishments by the Chicago Metropolitan chapter of the American Association of Engineers at the Great Northern hotel.

PAIR HELD IN $125,000 BONDS.

Joseph Battaglio, 258 West 23d place, and Frank Russo, 3235 Wentworth avenue, were held to the grand jury in bonds aggregating $125,000 yesterday when they were arraigned before Judge William R. Fetzer in South Clark street court, charged with robbery.

SEIZE DYNAMITE SENT IN MAILS TO GOV. FULLER

Postal Officials Fail to Find Sacco Sympathizer

Boston, Mass., May 14.—(AP)—The keen eyesight and quick thinking of a postal employé prevented delivery to Gov. Alvan T. Fuller of a pound of dynamite from a Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizer, it became known today.

The dynamite was contained in a small parcel to which was tied the following note:

"Governor of Massachusetts:

"I have succeeded in getting ¼ of a ton of this. If Sacco and Vanzetti are going to be murder, I am going to get more and use it.

"A Citizen of the World."

Although it was believed that the governor would not have been endangered by receipt of the parcel, since it contained no detonating apparatus, officials here were quick to praise Clerk Frank W. Steele, who picked it out of the mail at the Burlington avenue post station and gave it to his superiors for examination.

Package Found May 10.

The package was discovered on May 10, but it was only today after the explosive had been destroyed and efforts to find the mailer had failed that the governor was informed.

The note was written with lead pencil and was attached to the package with wire.

Since Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, radicals, were sentenced to die in July for the murder committed in 1920, the office of the governor has been deluged with requests and demands from many parts of the world that he exercise his power to intervene and pardon the condemned men.

Although most of the communications have been temperate in tone, several threats of violence have been found among them.

A constant guard has been placed over the homes and offices of the governor, judges, and others concerned in the case since the sentence of death was imposed.

PLANS REVIEW OF CASE.

New York, May 14.—[Special.]—Gov. Alvin T. Fuller of Massachusetts will decide in a few days on appointments to a commission to inquire into the Sacco-Vanzetti case, his secretary, Herman A. MacDonald, informed a newspaper by phone here tonight.

Reports earlier in the day that Charles Evans Hughes would be asked to head the commission were denied by the governor.

Dr. Farrell was in charge of an advanced field hospital at the battle of the Argonne, and is commander of the Medical post of the American Legion, and past national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Spanish-Philippine War Veterans. Nowadays few families carry large bank balances. They keep their money invested, and the family income is usually apportioned so as to take care of all different items of expense. The standards of living may vary according to income, but the plan of expenditure is much the same.

That is why the Richardson Budget Plan of Selling Furniture and Floor Coverings fits in so admirably with the way most families run their homes.

It offers all homemakers an opportunity to buy better quality Home Furnishings out of income, at low cash prices, without disturbing present investments. To the business man it is a plain business proposition which conforms entirely with his ideas.

There is no increase in the price of the merchandise—you get the benefit of our very low cash prices based on cost of our 52-year-old wholesale business, whether you pay cash (as do most of our customers), buy on regular charge account, or buy on Our Budget Payment Plan.

There is no carrying charge when payments are completed within three months. When it is desired to spread the payments over a period up to twelve months, there is a carrying charge of ½ of 1 per cent per month on the balance after the first payment has been made.

Richardson's Budget Plan enables you to furnish your home according to your individual taste; to enjoy the conveniences of life without inconvenience. It enables you to invest in more enduring qualities; to buy beautiful, lasting things which, through the years will prove most economical.

If you take advantage of our Budget Plan, you have the assurance that you are buying the better qualities of Furniture and Rugs at the same low cash prices as though you were paying for everything outright.

THE THIRD TERM.

It is a Washington forecast that when congress is in session again next winter the third term issue will be introduced for partisan debate and such political profit as it may be thought to contain. The "third term" is regarded as a poisonous phrase not calculated to do any candidate to whom it is attached any good, and it is the purpose of persons who are not Mr. Coolidge's political friends to have it do him as much harm as possible before the Republican convention and after it, if required.

An unqualified issue of the third term was raised when Grant's friends sought the Republican nomination for him after he had served two consecutive terms, and while Hayes was President. That brought a congressional resolution declaring that any departure from time honored custom would be "unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

Grant was not nominated, and since that time the question has applied only to men who as Vice Presidents succeeded to the presidency and then were elected to a term of their own. It has not been raised by a President who had served two terms and then, either after an intervening period or to succeed himself, sought a third nomination. Roosevelt served three years five months and seventeen days of McKinley's term. Coolidge had one year and seven months of Harding's.

The tradition against a third term, having nothing but congressional resolution and public sentiment to give it validity, is an unwritten rule, backed by the judgment of Jefferson, but rising from conditions very different from those of the present republic.

The nation won its independence under what was virtually a directory form of government under congress and continued in this weak structure until it adopted its constitution. One great weakness of the articles of confederation was that they did not see the executive needs of a government and Washington knew there had been and still was a disposition toward, if not a king, at least an executive holding office for life.

It was a danger that the republic might fall into the hands of a dictator, and even that a heredity might be established, but even Washington limited himself to two terms more from personal disinclination for further service than from fear of setting a bad precedent. Four years had been enough for him and he had to be prevailed upon to accept a second term. Jefferson had a real fear of continuance in office which Washington did not share. "I can see no propriety in precluding ourselves from the services of any man," the latter wrote to Lafayette, "who on some great emergency shall be deemed universally most capable of serving the public."

Jefferson did not get an ineligibility clause in the constitution, but he wanted a term fixed at seven years, or at the most eight years, with no reelection, and although he had to see this left out of the constitution he fixed the idea in the minds of his fellow countrymen and it has prevailed as sound and wise.

The question as it affected Roosevelt and as it now affects Coolidge has not been fixed. Roosevelt did not ask for a second elected term until he had been out of office for an intervening term, and his defeat as the Progressive candidate did not determine public sentiment on that point.

He had nearly two full terms. Coolidge had less than half of Harding's. It is conceivable that if a Vice President succeeded to a month or less of a President's term, was elected on his own, and sought reelection there would not be a third term issue. Sentiment may be considering time rather than any other essential. It may be the core of the tradition that a man shall not seek reelection three times to the presidency, either for three terms in a row or for three terms broken by intervening administrations. Such a doctrine is not open to interpretation and debate. It is self-sustaining.

If Coolidge is renominated, and particularly if he is reelected, that probably will be the statement of the third term tradition hereafter. If he fails in either the controversy will be alive for the next instance. There is too much for the opposition to gain in raising it. It is likely to bother any presidential candidate so conditioned, more or less according to his other handicaps. He can be described as seeking to break down the essence of a time honored principle for his own gratification.

Mr. Coolidge does not give any sign whether it is bothering him or not, but his opponents are doing the best they can with it and will do still more.

SHALL THOUGHT BE FREE?

We do not think much of the excited assertions of certain eastern college professors that "the minds of those who wish to suppress such books as the 'Arabian Nights' and the 'Decameron' are obscene rather than the books themselves." Some self-appointed censors are no doubt of unclean minds, but we suspect the impassioned professors when in a calmer mood would admit that there are passages in the "Arabian Nights" and in the "Decameron" that may be classified as obscene by a quite normal and reasonable mind, if there is any meaning in the term obscene at all. When Prof. Erskine says that "there is no obscenity in nature" and that "obscenity is a mental condition" he may be stating a metaphysical truth, but he is not giving a reason against censorship. The "Arabian Nights" are not nature but art, words addressed to the mind, and the treasury department aims at the protection of the mind from their effect. Obscene means "offensive to chastity or modesty; expressing or presenting to the mind or view something that delicacy, purity, and decency forbid to be exposed." We are quite certain that Prof. Erskine will not read aloud to his class, or at any rate to any public audience of average readers, many passages in the "Arabian Nights" or the "Decameron."

In short the professors are neither candid nor relevant to the real issue. The treasury is not trying to suppress a book which has no obscenity in it because it defines as obscene what is not obscene. The "Arabian Nights" contains obscenity because the life of which it is a vivid document included obscenity. The real issue raised by the censorship is that of the right of an adult citizen to read what he pleases and not to be prevented from doing so by the government acting as agent for some one who thinks he ought not to read it.

This is an issue of freedom of judgment and it is presented in its strongest form in the censorship of reading. Censorship of playhouses involves some other considerations. Also it is expedient and justifiable in principle that we safeguard the immature from reading for which youth is unprepared. That, as we have said, is a problem of administration. But when a law empowers a government agency to prevent an adult citizen from reading any book he chooses to read it is exercising authority over his conscience and shutting his mind within walls not of his making.

In a free society such as ours is supposed to be, this is an act of essential tyranny, and the fact that it is imposed by the agency of a political majority does not alter its character. It is a denial of the right of moral judgment and a suppression of freedom of thought, which are the most fundamental and essential of rights in a free society. The essence of this freedom is that though every citizen in the republic save one thinks that this one ought not to think as he thinks, nevertheless he shall be free so to think. What he does may affect others and is properly within the restraint of the collective will. But what he thinks is his own, and when the American people have lost respect for this right, they have lost their liberty and no moral tall talk can hide the catastrophe.

The problem of attack upon the evil influences of immoral writing is one for the church and for those agencies of suasion which a civilized society possesses. Thus the pope, it is reported from Rome, has inaugurated a special effort to impress the membership of the Catholic church with hurtful tendencies in contemporary literature. This is the function of a religious authority, the duty of which is to reach the mind and conscience of those who voluntarily recognize it as their religious guide and interpreter. It is not the function of the political state. It is not a proper or practicable subject for the secular agencies of government. The churches, the schools, the family, the press in its broadest sense, all the agencies of persuasion and enlightenment, should use their varied means of counteracting or preventing vicious influences in books. But suppression by force of law, enforced by the political instruments of government, is not justifiable in a free state except within the limits of practical protection of the immature and the prevention of public scandal.

FROM "PARITY" TO INFERIORITY.

Admiral Lord Jellicoe, talking at a Royal academy dinner, foreshadowed British admiralty thought for the coming conference. In Washington it was conceded that the United States might have a theoretical parity with the British fleet. The American ships on the ways gave the U. S. A. potential superiority unless the British taxpayer broke his back. The parity conceded in theory was not maintained by the United States and it may be easier now to do away with the theory in a second conference and obtain the acceptance of a doctrine of paramount British needs.

Lord Jellicoe quoted our own Mahan that it would be unwise for the United States to push Great Britain to the point of exhaustion in ship building to maintain what the island needs for its security and sustenance and what America does not. It is frequently said that war between the United States and Britain is unbelievable, and we trust it is, but the assurance seems to have force in this argument only when it is applied to the reduction of the American navy and never when it is considered in connection with the British.

There is something of a difference between giving fair consideration to Great Britain's need of sea power and writing into a treaty a stipulation that the American navy shall be inferior. Japan with great distances as a protection could consent to that with the all important qualification that naval bases should not be near its shores. Japan agreed not to construct some ships but the United States virtually gave up Guam and in only a little less degree the Philippines as compensation.

When Great Britain and the United States are equal by agreement Great Britain will be superior in fact. Its fuel stations and bases spot the world. They are close to American shores for submarine and air operations. An equality, ton for ton, gun for gun, is one of which the British have the better for defense. Furthermore, an equality written down on paper does not eliminate our little navy men nor does it give Great Britain a corresponding element of citizenship which counts it a splendid day's work done when it has destroyed a ship appropriation.

The United States has reason to dread another ship conference. If the reasoning of our pacifists could be effective on the other fellows their worth would be great but their satisfaction would be lost. For that the U. S. A. must be out in the wind without its breeks.

CONCERNING "RELIGION TODAY"

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON, Ph. D.
[Religious Editor, Chicago Tribune.]

One of the big business men of Chicago wrote: "It was a courageous act in THE TRIBUNE to initiate and publish 'Religion Today.' There are many men from whom you will not hear who have been deeply impressed by these religious editorials."

A newspaper writer, one of the most widely known in the United States and one of the most gallant, said: "The book, Religion Today, is a great victory for the church. It means more than most people think to have a great secular paper like THE TRIBUNE, crowded as it is all the time with news of crime, politics and international events of stirring interest, deem religious news and editorial comment on religious themes of equal interest and to give it adequate space. The church can congratulate itself on having achieved a permanent place in the news column."

These complimentary words were said about the book of 134 pages containing 16 full page pictures, 15 editorials in full, and 37 editorials in a full page extract entitled "Religion Today," which THE TRIBUNE in its generosity sells for ten cents, or thirteen cents by mail. I say generosity, for any one who knows book values in these days of high wages and cost of paper knows that a book of this size and makeup cannot be thus published at a profit.

The policy of having a weekly religious editorial is unique with THE TRIBUNE. The publishing of a book of religious editorials is also an innovation. No other daily paper, so far as we know, has done this. I feel, therefore, that I can, in a detached way, without any suspicion of self praise, express appreciation to the chief editors, the publishers, and THE TRIBUNE public service for their favor and work, without which the book would never have been possible. Hearty appreciation is also expressed to the fifty different church leaders, laymen and ministers, who have freely given of their time, thought and work in making so admirable a volume.

In answer to many inquiries, we will state the principles we adopted in soliciting the editorials.

We have requested that every editorial be definitely religious. We have not attempted to define religion but have assumed it would be interpreted in the commonly accepted manner as referring to the experience of the soul with God, or the recital of facts concerning the church or agencies which are seeking to build up the kingdom of God on earth. We assume the desire for prayer and the practice of it is as universal as love. We know some hearts become so calloused that love makes no appeal to them and likewise there are those whose spiritual sensibilities have become so deadened they do not respond to religious motives and cherish no religious aspirations, but they are the exception and their condition has been reached only after resistance to emotions which beat upon them like incoming waves of the sea in their earlier years. Augustine's oft quoted words are eternally true: "Man was made for God and he is restless until he rests in God."

How is religious emotion awakened? Just as a sense of beauty is awakened by standing in front of a work of art, a fair face, an alluring landscape. Religious emotion is in a similar manner dependent on our looking upon the divine in prayer, or the witnessing of some holy deed or character, or hearing a word painting of these experiences as others have seen them. If we neglect religion the soul will be like an uncultivated garden where grow weeds and not flowers, or a neglected business which ends in bankruptcy.

We have requested all writers of the editorials to keep in their mind's view the intelligent man of the street. Jazz maddened youth of either sex do not read editorials of any kind, much less editorials professedly religious. We recognize that religion has its theological expressions as technical as those of philosophy, trade, or science. We seek to avoid terms or ideas which pertain only to the study, the seminary, the cloister, or what may properly be called religious trade magazines. We believe our writers have succeeded in making their thoughts so clearly understood that a banker, lawyer, merchant, club woman, school teacher, tradesman, or housekeeper can understand them.

Our writers have avoided religious controversy. This does not mean all have written after a single model. There has been a wide range of thought and expression. We have never objected to the most positive expressions upholding modernist or fundamentalist viewpoints. We simply have not allowed the pot to call the kettle black. We prefer to have religious battles fought in papers known as champions of a single denomination or cult.

We have urged all writers to add inspiration to information. We may be guilty of the charge of moralizing after Victorian standards, but we are oblivious to any such criticism. As one of our editorial contributors said: "It is a mistaken maxim to say that knowledge is power." Knowledge is not in itself power. Knowledge must be charged with dynamite. It must be put into action. It must have motive, purpose and desire back of it. One may know the laws of health but ruin himself by selfish indulgence. One may know the pattern which would make him a convenient and attractive home in which to live and yet be a wanderer on the face of the earth. For this reason we have urged our writers to put steam under the boilers, to follow their recitation of how the Good Samaritan helped the man who fell among thieves with the Master's exhortation, "Go thou and do likewise." We have suggested that every editorial ought to be so written that the reader will be inspired with the resolve to be better individually or do something helpful.

"Religion Today" has already had such a favorable reception we expect a still wider circulation as time goes on. A prominent Chicago pastor wrote: "I read most of the editorials as they came out but I missed some and I want the book. I have filed those I read. I think the editorials are classics. They have permanent value."

This is not the place for a tabulated list of the churches which have responded with orders. It is enough here to say that individual churches have ordered as many as 400 copies, and others down the list, 200, 150, and many of them 100. Orders from a distance have usually come in twos, threes, fours, and in a few instances, tens, but we have wondered why churches in other states than Illinois, in smaller cities than Chicago, even in country churches as I have known them, strong, intelligent, progressive, could not find it to their advantage to distribute the books among their constituency. The editorials are on such fundamental questions as: "The World's Best Seller," "The World's Essential Industry," "The Church as a Civic Asset," "Why Men Should Attend Church," "The Religion of a Trout Stream," "What Religion Means to Me," "Why Advertise the Church," "How Church Union Is Working in Canada," "My Creed—a Message for the New Year," "Happy New Year! The Three Happiest Men I Know," "The Unspanked Generation," "Is Religion Decadent?" "Religion and Work," "Easter Customs—What Do They Mean?" "The Religious Needs of Students and How to Meet Them." These and other subjects are as vital to country as to city, to Iowa, California and New York as to Illinois, to Canada as to the United States.

THE GENTLE ART OF BLOWING THE NOSE.

DR. HENRY T. BYFORD says the only real method of preventing a large percentage of deafness is "to teach doctors, patients, and school children, in the order named, how to blow the nose."

The method of blowing the nose which meets his approval consists in gently blowing into the handkerchief with compression, if there must be compression, of only one nostril at a time. Never blow both nostrils at the same time. The handkerchief protects the public, while the one-nostril compression automatically does away with the harmful back pressure internally and the explosive release externally. Let the profession take up the subject seriously and report results.

The ordinary method is to grab the two sides of the nose with the handkerchief held in the hand, to close the nostrils with the fingers, and then to drive air from the lungs into the nostrils until the nasal passages become an area of high air pressure. Next, the grip of fingers on the nose is lessened, and the high air pressure forces the mucus and pus into the handkerchief. Unfortunately, the high pressure also forces bacteria up the tube into the ear.

Dr. Byford says there are two animals that do not make that mistake. One is the horse and the other is the hobo. The horse clears his nostrils by driving air through them in a moderate blast, but, having no hands and no handkerchief, he does not compress his nostrils, and in consequence he does not infect his ears. I do not know the statistics of deafness in horses, but I presume few of them need ear trumpets.

Hobos have hands, but no handkerchiefs. They blow blasts through the nose, but their technique consists in pressing on one nostril, aiming the other at the side of the road and turning on the power. Dr. Byford says: "In neither case does the act begin with an injurious back pressure nor end with an ostentatious musical fanfare."

Of course, a horse has no hands with which to hold his nose, but I am not so certain he does not get up a good deal of pressure inside his nose. He has some cut off muscles around his nostrils which take the place of fingers. Any one who visits a zoo can see these cut off muscles in operation in the hippopotamus; likewise in the llama. The latter animal has a reputation as a spitter, which is due to his ability to cut off the nostrils, get up some pressure, and then to "let 'er go" on his neighbors. I do not know the deafness rate among llamas.

At that, Dr. Byford's gentle art of blowing the nose is right. I will be willing to subscribe to it if he will change the title to "The art of blowing the nose gently" and to add instructions, "not to blow hard." I am sure Dr. Byford will not be opposed to that anti-blow-hard addition.

RUPTURE MAY BE DANGEROUS.

J. writes: Please tell me something about rupture. I am a young man of 20 years. Is it a serious operation? I think I have been ruptured, but don't know one thing about it.

REPLY.

You mean: Is the operation for radical cure serious? The answer is: Moderately so. Life is not often endangered, but considerable skill is required by the operator.

In rupture, some part of the contents of the cavity passes through one of the rings in the wall. As a rule, a person with rupture was born with weak walls or with a rupture.

Diagnosis is easily made. Most cases require no treatment except the wearing of a truss. The operation for radical cure consists in closing the rings.

BABY MAY HAVE T-B.

A Worried Mother writes: My baby is now two months old and weighs exactly what she weighed at birth. She sleeps well and is a pretty good baby. What may possibly be the cause?

The father has tuberculosis? Is there any connection between the two?

REPLY.

Your baby is not thriving. Something is not as it should be. Of course your baby should not be in the same home with an actively tuberculous father. It is entirely possible that your baby is not thriving because she has been infected with tuberculosis by her father.

LAND OWNERSHIP IN WISCONSIN.

Chicago, May 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A man and wife in Wisconsin each have families by former marriages. Man has a deed to a 40 acre adjoining another 40 acre in the wife's name. The wife died.

1. Does the husband own one-third interest in his wife's 40 acres?

2. Could the husband choose his one-third of his wife's land and sell it along with his 40 acre should the children of the wife refuse to agree to the sale? If so, by what procedure could he do this?

3. Should the husband die before a settlement was made of the wife's land would the husband's one-third interest of the wife's land go to his children by a former marriage or to the children of the wife of a former marriage? F. D.

"Curtesy: The husband, on death of wife, holds lands of which she died seized, and which were not disposed of by her last will, for his life as tenant by the curtesy; provided, that if the wife at her death leaves issue by former husband, to whom the estate might descend, such issue takes same discharged from right of surviving husband as tenant by curtesy. In case of wife dying after Aug. 31, 1921, right of curtesy is extinguished by husband's remarriage. (Sec. 2180.)"—From the Wisconsin Law Digest.

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 15, 1862.

WASHINGTON.—President Lincoln amused senatorial visitors by telling them of the way in which news of the Union occupation of Norfolk was received. The President was just getting into bed when Secretary Chase with Gen. Wool in full regimentals burst into the room which Mr. Lincoln occupied at Fortress Monroe, with the gladsome intelligence. Mr. Stanton presently appeared in his wrapper and slippers, and rushed into Wool's arms for a long and fond embrace.

FORTRESS MONROE.—Maj. Gen. John E. Wool telegraphed to Secretary Stanton: "We have captured Norfolk, Va. It was taken by Maj. Dodge. Gen. McClellan's troops are at Cumberland."

CAIRO.—Maj. Gen. Halleck is advancing on the rebels at Corinth, cautiously and carefully, fortifying as he goes. Grand Junction is being fortified by Beauregard, with the evident intention of falling back there if he is defeated at Corinth. Gen. Halleck's headquarters estimates that there are between 120,000 and 170,000 rebel troops at Corinth.

CHICAGO.—Eight marriage licenses were issued in one day last week by the county clerk. War seems to have no depressing effect upon marriages, but exactly the contrary result.

CHICAGO.—The Hon. Edward Everett of Boston is at the Tremont house. He will lecture this evening on the war, a subject admirably adapted to the great orator.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 15, 1902.

FORT DE FRANCE.—Mont Pelee is again assuming a more threatening aspect. Earth rumblings are heard and lights are seen such as preceded the destruction of St. Pierre.

NEW YORK.—Through George F. Seward, president of the Fidelity and Casualty company, new evidence has been made public of the intensity of Andrew Carnegie's opposition to United States occupation of the Philippines. He said that Carnegie offered to furnish the $20,000,000 paid to Spain, if by that means he could assure the Filipinos that their independence would be acknowledged eventually by the United States.

CHICAGO.—The south park board restricted automobile speed to eight miles an hour on the boulevards and in the parks under its jurisdiction. Automobile owners claim that half the machines in Chicago will be barred from Michigan boulevard by the new order. No machine which emits spurts of vapor can enter the boulevards or parks.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 15, 1917.

PETROGRAD.—"As affairs are going now it will be impossible to save the country," A. F. Kerensky, minister of justice, in an impassioned speech told delegates from the front. He made the most alarming diagnosis of Russia's internal situation that has come from any official since the revolution. The council of soldiers and workmen's deputies issued an appeal to the army in which it says that German imperialism is seeking to destroy revolutionary Russia and enslave the Russian people. It declares that a separate peace is impossible.

WASHINGTON.—Save Russia in order that Germany may be speedily defeated is the substance of the instructions President Wilson transmitted to Elihu Root and other members of the mission about to start for Petrograd.

NEW YORK.—Joseph H. Choate, eminent lawyer and former ambassador to the court of St. James, died at his home here at the age of 35. He was taken suddenly ill and died before his physician could arrive. Death was due to heart disease.

CHICAGO.—The Chicago Board of Trade prohibited all trading in wheat futures for two days and stopped the trading in May corn and oats for an indefinite period.

CHICAGO.—Fifty policemen stopped the "Spirit of '76," a film drama which was to open at Orchestra hall, following an opinion from Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester E. Cleveland that the play might be German propaganda and "held up the British nation to contempt, ridicule and hatred."

A LIBERAL ARTICLE.

Chicago, May 10.—I am writing to express to you my appreciation for the very liberal article appearing upon the front page of your Sunday paper concerning Mr. Jesse Binga. This article contradicts the common saying that nothing appears upon the front pages of white newspaper concerning a Negro unless he commits a crime. It will also do more to break down the barrier called race prejudice than all of the other writings of the last five years.

Having practiced medicine in this city for the last fifteen years, and during that time having done everything possible to bring about a better understanding between the races, I feel certain in saying that I express the feeling of all the colored people of Chicago when I say that we thank you.

I. H. HOLLOWAY.

BAREFOOT VIRTUES.

Marshfield, Wis., May 8.—This country was settled by pioneers whose children went barefoot from early spring until late autumn. By stubbing their toes, getting stone bruises and thorns into their feet, some of those children learned to see and to hear. Today a barefoot child is very rarely seen. Children are compelled to hide their feet in shoes and attend school until long after manhood and womanhood, hence are prevented from learning to see and to hear.

Why await the locomotive engine dashing into eternity a whole family untrained to see and to hear? Why not have teachers and preachers who are trained to see and to hear to teach their children? There never will be invented a serum which by injection under the skin will enable the auto driver to be immune from the collision of the locomotive. The railroad track is plainly visible, the roar of the train, the shrieking locomotive is hearable, but an untrained eye, an untrained ear fails to see and to hear. After the collision then the ear and the eye become trained. Why not train the ear and the eye before the collision?

Punishment frequent and severe trains the eye and the ear. Sweet reasonableness with children turns them out into this complex world deaf, blind, and dumb.

PAYING THE CITY'S BILLS.

Chicago, May 10.—"Mend the mains, repair the plumbing, and the waste will be stopped," Ald. Bowler declared. "Create a bureau to do this all over the city. Make the discount rate 10 per cent instead of 25 per cent and we would have $500,000 for a bureau of plumbing repairs." Who has been feeding our Caesar meat? If he paid any bills he would know the discount rate was changed to 15 per cent two years ago. With such wisdom from some of our aldermen it is no wonder they want to operate the city on bond issues instead of annual receipts and raid the school fund 50-50. We will soon be back right where we started from.

God save the queen. F. S. T.

"LAY OFF THE FARMER."

St. Charles, Ill., May 4.—Replying to "A Taxpayer" in this morning's "Voice of the People" wherein was suggested additional taxes for the farmer in the form of a tax on "hidden earnings." The suggestion will undoubtedly raise many a "dirt" farmer smile. Incomes as farm earnings for the last 8 or 9 years have certainly been well "hidden"—so well "hidden" that only a few of the most fortunate farmers have been able to find them.

I was born and raised on a farm and my occupation since 1920 has been one which brings me in daily contact with all classes of farmers in Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana, and from daily contact and observation let me say, "Lay off the farmer."

I continually see cases of distress and want, of scratching for seed money, then long hours of hard labor in sun and wind, only to have crops vanish year after year from floods, heat, dry weather, wet weather, and ruinous low grain prices. I see many once prosperous farms abandoned, empty and weed grown, giving definite testimony of years of losses and a discouraging struggle that did not pay. That is personal observation—not fiction or guess work—so when it comes to further taxes, "Lay off the farmer." GEORGE MARSHALL.

A GENTLE CRITIC.

Chicago, May 6.—If the admirable Dr. Karl H. Ehlers who sent in the article entitled "Capital Punishment" would take the trouble to read and digest that recent masterpiece, "Elmer Gantry," he would perhaps be fittingly ashamed of his bromidic, infantile and hypocritical attempt to insult the intelligence of your readers by quoting passages from the Bible to prove that legalized killing is a Christian act. A CHRISTIAN.

IN OUR OWN LIBRARY!

Chicago, May 6.—I have just finished reading Dr. Will Durant's "Story of Philosophy" and I found the chapter on Voltaire extremely interesting. The only work of Voltaire that I had ever read before was "Candide," so I want to the public library to get a few more of his books.

One of the clerks there whispered cautiously that this author's books were banned, that he was an atheist, heathen, and all around scoundrel, so I suppose I'll have to forget Voltaire, as I can't afford to buy his volumes.

I have only been in Chicago six months. I migrated from a little town in Iowa where blue laws, censorship, prohibition, the klan and fundamentalism are taken for granted, but I hardly expected Chicago, the world's third city, should have so narrow a viewpoint. Evidently the so-called metropolitan broadmindedness is a bit far fetched and the city man about town and country yokel are guided spiritually and physically by the same breed of reformers. THOMSON SAYS CROWE DICTATES JUDICIAL SLATE

Demands Reason for O. K. on Klarkowski.

A challenge to State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe to explain why he substituted the name of Stanley H. Klarkowski as a judicial candidate in the June election for that of Judge Charles M. Thomson was contained in an open letter mailed last night by Judge Thomson to Mr. Crowe.

"With the control of the Republican judicial convention, which was yours, you had the power to submit my name to that body for renomination, along with the other sitting judges," wrote Judge Thomson.

Thomson Opposes Klarkowski.

"You refused to do so. You selected Mr. Klarkowski as a nominee and are asking the people to elect him. I am seeking reelection, in spite of your opposition, on an Independent Judicial ticket, together with Judge Frank Johnston, Jr., and Judge Oscar M. Torrison.

"I am addressing this open letter to you to ask you to issue a statement through the press and tell the people why you selected Mr. Klarkowski as a candidate and why you threw me out. They are entitled to know."

Judge Thomson has been a Circuit court judge for twelve years, serving the last ten years in the Appellate court branch. Mr. Klarkowski has been a lawyer in Chicago for about fifteen years. He served as assistant city prosecutor and later as an assistant state's attorney.

Says Politics Hobbles.

Judge Johnston, another who was ousted from the coalition ticket at the party conventions, issued a statement in which made a bitter attack.

"The judges are enmeshed hand and feet in politics," he declared. "They hold their positions subject to the whims and pleasures of the political bosses. If they incur the displeasure of the bosses for any reason whatsoever, they receive the political axe.

"One of the objections to me, which was made by my ward committeeman, was that I was not active enough in ward politics and did not contribute sufficiently to the 'ward funds.'"

Charges Voters Are Dupes.

"The political bosses prepare the judicial ticket and then tell the people to sign on the dotted line," Judge Johnson added. "Such a system robs the people of their rights. The question is, how long will the public submit to such a system?

"As the coalition ticket consists of twenty Circuit judges, including twelve Republicans and eight Democrats, and as only twenty judges are to be elected, the people have no opportunity to register a protest against this pernicious system of the political bosses unless they vote the independent ticket, on which Judge Thomson, Judge Torrison, and myself are running."

GAS TAX PROTEST STAGED IN AUTO PARADE IN JOLIET

Labor unions, civic and trade organizations, and individual automobilists combined yesterday at Joliet and staged a 400 car parade as a protest against the passage by the general assembly of the gasoline tax bill.

Among the union organizations represented in the parade were the Will county central trades and labor council, the bricklayers, street railway employés, bookbinders, railway clerks, stone masons, freight handlers, butchers, carpenters, chauffeurs, barbers, lathers, motion picture operators, stage hands, garment workers, musicians, and printers.

The Joliet Lions club, the Joliet Automobile Dealers' association, East End Boosters' club, Joliet Contractors' club, the Will County Medical association, the Joliet branch of the Chicago Motor club, and the Retail Merchants' association also participated. It was said to be the first protest of the kind ever made by the people of Joliet against proposed legislation.

2 DROWN IN RIVER OFF HOUSEBOAT; 1 BODY IS FOUND

Coast guards early this morning recovered the body of Owen Layton, 52, who, with Albert Johnson, 55, fell into the river from the houseboat Lotus, moored at the Franklin street bridge. Both men, who roomed at 322 North Clark street, were drowned.

Police received their first information of the drownings from Jerry McCarthy, 60 years old, 1700 North Major avenue, who was on the boat with them when they fell into the water. McCarthy told the police that all three were intoxicated and that Laydon started to take Johnson to his rooming house.

"They left the cabin," said McCarthy, "and I heard them yell. I went out and saw them struggling in the water. I extended my leg to them over the side and they grasped it and pulled me in also."

McCarthy was taken from the water by Thomas Murray, the bridgetender.

3 AUTO DEATHS, FIRST IN 2 DAYS, MAKE TOLL 313

Gustave C. Schlums, 63, of 933 Cherry street, Winnetka, was killed last night when a truck in which he was riding collided with an automobile at Elm street and Provident road, Winnetka. The driver of the automobile, Joseph L. Carroll, of 978 Elm street, Winnetka, was held by the police. This was the first death in two days. Two others brought the Cook county auto toll since Jan. 1 to 313.

Dominick Toretti, 45, of 621 North Spaulding avenue, was instantly killed when struck by an automobile at Crawford and Chicago avenues. The car was driven by Thomas Cox, 19, of 5139 Wabansia avenue, who was held by the Austin police. An unknown white man, also 45, was struck and killed by a cab driven by Maurice Miller of 3402 Roosevelt road, at 49th and Ogden avenues, Cicero.

GENEVA PARLEY MAPS NEW PATHS TO TRADE GOAL

Plan Conference to Solve Tariff Tangles.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 14.—The international economic conference paved the way at least for two later conferences when the commerce subcommission, headed by Roland Boyden, American delegate, this afternoon recommended the summoning on Nov. 14 of an international session for removing the obstacles hindering world trade and production.

The committee also urged that the league of nations begin collecting data regarding unfair commercial relations and the simplification of customs formalities. It was recommended that an international conference be held to seek an agreement concerning the economic and fiscal treatment of nationals and companies of one country admitted to settle in another.

U. S. Under Fire Again.

The United States came in for two attacks after a week of immunity. The controversial issues of international debts and tariffs were brought up by a denunciation by Sweden and Switzerland, who are leading the fight for the condemnation of Washington's demand that American commercial attachés be granted the right to investigate production costs of foreign manufacturers. Mr. Boyden's commerce commission subcommittee also recommended that the governments carrying on or controlling commercial, industrial, maritime, or banking enterprises, in so far as they participate in ventures of this kind, shall not be treated as possessing sovereign rights, privileges, and immunities from taxation to which similar privately owned enterprises are subjected.

Russians Invite Yanks.

The Russians are continuing their efforts to meet the industrialists independently and interest them in concessions in Russia, the ultimate aim being more credits for Russia. They attended a dinner given by international bankers last night. Norman H. Davis and Henry M. Robinson, American delegates, were guests, and it is understood the Russians invited the Americans to dine with them.

E. S. ISHAM DIES IN N. Y.; SON OF NOTED LAWYER

Edward Swift Isham, formerly of Chicago and son of the late Edward S. Isham, one of this city's most famous lawyers, died yesterday at his home in New York after a brief illness. He was 58 years old. Funeral services will be held privately at the family's country estate, Ormsby Hill, Manchester, Vt., and burial will be in the Bellwood cemetery at Manchester.

Mr. Isham was born in Chicago. He was graduated in 1891 from Yale. For six years he was associated with Marshall Field & Co., then he became interested in electrical manufacturing and engineering. He retired a few years ago.

ROME REFUSES PLEA OF PRINCE FOR ANNULMENT

ROME, May 14.—(AP)—Nullification of the marriage of Prince Henry of Pless with Mary Theresa Cornwallis-West, sister of the Duchess of Westminster, has been refused by the sacred tribunal of the rota.

Application for nullification was on the ground that the marriage was contracted under coercion. The former Princess of Pless set up the claim that the marriage was null because she loved another man and her mother forced her to marry Prince Henry against her will. It is stated that Prince Henry, on his side, pleaded that he had been forced to marry Lady Mary.

There's a Big Difference In Funerals--

There is as much difference in funerals as there is in clothing, automobiles, jewelry, and in everything else that is sold. What you get depends on your own choice.

You can choose to pay an exorbitant price for just ordinary service, ordinary automobile equipment and ordinary quality. Or, you can choose an ordinary price for these same things.

Or, you can do the best thing, and choose a "Hursen" funeral, with its most highly specialized service, its exceptionally elegant automobile equipment, with the greatest elegance and quality ever before known at funerals, and pay from one-half to one-third what is exacted elsewhere.

These "Hursen" features, found nowhere else, have made "Hursen's" the largest undertaking establishment in America. No one has ever successfully competed with Hursen elegance and prices.

"Hursen" limousines and limousine-hearses are the finest funeral automobiles in America. Each was designed by Hursen himself, and each cost a fortune to build. Yet, the charge for the use of these limousines is no greater than the usual auto hire for ordinary and less desirable vehicles. Call Hursen, of course!

Hartman's Loop Store, opened in Chicago in 1925—the keystone of Hartman's 17 stores throughout the nation.

In Seventeen Hartman Stores

To the Public:

When our buyers brought back reports of their success in the leading furniture markets, we said that this would be the greatest sale in our history. Yet we didn't believe it possible to serve as many customers or to sell such quantities of merchandise as we did on Saturday. But no wonder! Never before have we had such complete assortments; never better styles; never better quality; and never lower prices! Now, while assortments are still extensive, we urge you to buy. We are keeping all Hartman Stores open Monday evening so that families may shop together!

Marton L. Hartman

MARTYRS FALL, BUT GOAL ELUDES PSYCHOLOGISTS

Unitary Science Urged of Experts Meeting Here.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Psyche is an elusive butterfly and in the search to touch its wings more martyrs have fallen than in any other science, perhaps, except that of medicine.

While dogs and horses are given up to the cause of human pathology, pigeons, white rats, and babies seem to be the favorites of the experimental psychologists, judging from their conference yesterday at Northwestern university, where they reported on a great variety of experiments in the laboratories of midwest universities.

Great care is taken with babies, but the albino rats have a hard time of it. One student told casually of inserting a piece of metal in a rat's brain and then heating it with high frequency current, for some obscure experimental reason.

Hunger Increases Ability.

It was reported from the University of Minnesota that qualitative starving of rats increases their efficiency in certain learning processes. When they are hungry they find their way to food more quickly. What this means to the human race is not clear.

Experiment with monkeys show they can distinguish between four and five taps, when a matter of food is concerned. The monkeys are more alive in this matter than are pre-school children, the experimenter reported.

A plea for a unitary science of psychology, with a basic laboratory course, was made by Dean G. F. Arps of Ohio State university. He suggested that a committee be named to draw up an agendum for a new program.

"Scarcely a single serviceable consequence has resulted from five decades of research into the mind," he said. "Modernism is not making much invasion of the temple of the fathers. Applied psychology is almost completely oblivious to the course of experimental psychology.

Urges Conduct Attention.

"The mentalists who go back to the philosophy of association are likely to be inundated by the tide that laboratory courses be reconstructed in accordance with a unitary science.

"Taxicab servicibility, for instance, is high hatted by the classical extremist. When experimental psychology concerns itself with conduct and divorces itself from metaphysical pursuits, we will be within the dawn of a new era, cease our pseudo-scientific character and assum a rightful place among the natural sciences.

"There should be a basic laboratory course, fundamental to all behavior problems, measurement of response, control of stimuli, data, and statistics, as a cardinal requirement."

Prof. H. A. Carr of the University of Chicago spoke at the dinner last night which concluded the conference. It was decided to form a permanent organization.

FREDERICK STOCK TO BE AWARDED DEGREE BY CORNELL COLLEGE

Mt. Vernon, Ia., May 14.—[Special.]—Frederick Stock, director of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will be given the honorary degree of doctor of music by Cornell college June 8, it was announced last night at the orchestra's final concert at the Cornell music festival.

FREDERICK STOCK.

The present engagement marks the twenty-fifth successive appearance at the Cornell festival of the Chicago Symphony with Mr. Stock as conductor. Three years before Mr. Stock became director of the Symphony at the death of Theodore Thomas, he was sent on tour with the orchestra and Mt. Vernon was included in the itinerary. Since that time he has not missed a year at Cornell and has always taken an active interest in developing the festival which is now twenty-nine years old.

Residents of the village each year welcome into their homes the members of the orchestra.

SCOTT PRAISES CRITICISMS BY N. U. STUDENTS

Hopes for Improvements in Challenged Depts.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

Believing that it's a wise professor who knows his own students and just what they think of him, President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern university yesterday gave praise to the challenging report which a committee of undergraduates in the college of liberal arts had prepared as their criticism, adverse and constructive, on campus conditions.

"We welcome this hearty criticism from the students," President Scott declared, "and we hope to have more of it.

"We have been carrying on these researches for four or five years, but this is really the first one which has come from the student body itself. It cannot have anything but a salutary effect on the intellectual life of the university.

Calls Criticisms Excellent.

"The students collaborated with one of our younger and more liberal professors [Prof. J. Clyde Murley, teacher of Romance languages] and as a result have made some excellent criticisms. We have nothing but praise for these students."

This report, a twenty-three page document of specific comments, does not mention the name of any of the 150 members of the liberal arts faculty.

But a supplementary report is now in the hands of Prof. Delton T. Howard, personnel director on the campus. This is not to be made public, even to the professors whose names are listed in it.

It contains, according to Howard Rowley, senior chairman of the undergraduate committee in charge of the investigation, thumb nail appraisals from the student standpoint of all the professors and instructors. It does not, however, recommend any dismissal, Mr. Rowley insisted.

Denies 16 Were Blacklisted.

He spiked the rumor that sixteen teachers had been definitely blacklisted by the committee and their dismissal recommended.

"Some of the criticism is adverse, some is most complimentary," Mr. Rowley pointed out. "I cannot recall the precise number of faculty men and women who are given adverse rating. The comments in all cases are pertinent enough to focus the attention of the administration on the specific cases."

This report is to be considered by Prof. Howard, President Scott, and Prof. Raymond Kent, dean of liberal arts college, at a conference soon.

If the three executives endorse the present plan, this will be the way by which the students' more or less academic research problem will be translated into practicable material. The head of every department in the college of liberal arts will be sent the portion of the report which relates to his department.

The English department head will see all the comments made upon him and corps of instructors, but he won't have any idea as to what the students think of the history department, and so on.

The larger, more general 23 page report, is to be made available to all the professors at the next faculty meeting.

Robert Campbell, president of the board of trustees, said yesterday that he had read with interest the published accounts of the survey, but that he had no comment to make, since any such work was in the province of the university's president, rather than its trustees.

W.C.T.U. MEMBERS BARRED AT TRIAL OF POLICE CHIEF

A dozen women, though summoned as witnesses, were barred from the Du Page county Circuit courtroom yesterday by Judge William Fulton during the trial of Wheaton's police chief, Charles Sullivan, and Policemen A. L. Hildebrandt and Arthur Hawker.

The women, members of the W. C. T. U. and of the Dry Enforcement society, have pressed the charges against the police of permitting the installation of gambling devices in roadhouses and participating in the profits. Their appearance yesterday was to have been in the nature of a flourish.

Despite denial by Sullivan, James McCulloch, a roadhouse proprietor, testified that the police chief was on hand when a division of profits was made between police and owner. The case is expected to go to the jury tomorrow.

PATRIOTISM, THE GOOD COOKING, IS CHEFS' LIFE COD

More than five hundred chefs, representing a score of different [illegible] cities, at their annual banquet in the Drake hotel last night emphasized the importance of two things in every life.

First comes patriotism. Then good cooking.

After a flag ceremony given by a detachment of twelve soldiers from Fort Sheridan, under the direction of Maj. G. B. Morse, assisted by Capt. Richard Shand and Maj. Robert Imhoff, I. N. G., the chefs and their military guests of honor sat down to a dinner consisting of:

Medallion of lobster, [illegible] cream of fresh mushrooms, [illegible] almonds, and olives; breast of [illegible] belle reine; asparagus Hollandaise; tatoes Parisien; Blackstone [illegible] glace bombiere; petits fours, and [illegible] tasse.

STRAIGHT EIGHT Stock Car Makes 86 Miles Per Hour

75 miles in 52 min. 10.77 sec.

Drawing made from actual photograph of the two leading cars finishing only one-fifth of a second apart in the 75 mile stock car race at Atlantic City Speedway on May 7th. Stutz 86.247 M. P. H. and Auburn Straight Eight 86.240 M. P. H. The closest and most remarkable race of stock cars ever witnessed. Also the most sensational stock car performance on record.

It required courage to enter this stock car race.

All manufacturers and dealers were invited.

But it was not a boulevard parade. It was a merciless battle where only the best could survive.

Even if a manufacturer had faith in his product, still it required courage, because any one of many minor things might happen to put a car out of the running.

Besides, ALL car manufacturers KNOW THE TRUTH about each other's cars. They know WHAT cars are the best built, are the fastest and are the most durable.

For those who entered this supreme test of speed and endurance Auburn has the greatest admiration, because these manufacturers were not afraid for the public to learn the facts.

And what a race it was!

There has never been anything like it.

The first and second cars finished only one-fifth of a second apart after a terrific neck and neck battle for 75 miles.

Sanctioned	—By the American Automobile Association.
Invited	—All manufacturers and dealers.
For	—Strictly STOCK cars.
Winners	—The first two cars were only 1/5 of a second apart.
90 M.P.H.	—Auburn often made 90 M.P.H. in order to average 86.240 M. P. H. for the entire distance.
Double Proof	—Auburn had two 8-88 roadsters in the race. One made 75 miles in 52 min. 10.77 sec., the other in 52 min. 48.91 sec.
To Qualify	—Auburn had No. 1 position because it made the fastest time in the qualifying trials, 87.66 M.P.H.

And the speed is simply phenomenal. Only recently such speed was unknown except in special, costly race cars.

Here is PROOF that certain manufacturers have made amazing strides in perfecting motor cars; in building better cars than the world has ever known; and, in giving value so far in excess of any previous standard that there is no comparison.

Remember, these are strictly stock cars, with fenders, running boards and windshields removed. That is what makes this performance so impressive and significant.

And the Auburn 8-88 stock cars, after setting totally new and higher standards for stock car performance; after having been through the most severe test ever imposed on stock cars, finished the race IN PERFECT condition capable of continued, indefinite performance.

So definite and evident are Auburn's exclusive superiorities that we leave it entirely to you to do your own judging. DRIVE the Auburn 8-88; compare it, and if it does not do all things you want a car to do BETTER than any other, you will not be asked to buy.

The 8-88 Roadster of type shown in the drawing above is for sale at all Auburn dealers for $1995, plus slight additional cost for wire wheels, bumper, extra tire, freight and tax.

REPORT LINCOLN PARK SHAKEUP IS DUE THIS WEEK

Gov. Small Expected to Change Board.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Considerable shaking-up of the Lincoln Park board by Gov. Len Small is expected this week. There may be further postponement, but the subject has been under consideration for some time and it is believed that the exact changes in the personnel will be determined within the next few days.

There are two legal reasons for the shakeup. In the first place, David H. Jackson, president of the board, became chairman of the Illinois commerce commission nearly four months ago, and the utilities law is precise in requiring that he devote all his time to the duties of the latter office.

In addition, six of the seven commissioners are recess appointees whose terms, under the law, run only "until the next meeting of the senate," which in this instance began on Jan. 5. The governor has not submitted any of the six names for confirmation by the upper house.

Report Bostrom Considered.

The term of the seventh commissioner, the only holdover from the Thompson régime in the north side parks, John A. Torstenson, has expired, so that the governor is free to make a clean sweep of the board if he desires. Rumor has it that Charles Bostrom, former building commissioner and strong Lundinite, may get one of the places.

No word of the extent of the changes Gov. Small contemplates has escaped from the conferences held in Springfield and Chicago, but they are said to go considerably beyond merely naming a new president. It is probable that three or more new commissioners will be named.

As to the presidency, however, there is still some slight question, it is said. Some close friends of President Jackson contend there is no reason why he should not retain his two present places, because the park board post does not pay a salary. But lawyers say the prohibition of the act creating the commerce commission is plain.

Predict Fyfe as President.

In the event that President Jackson does retire, it has been unofficially predicted for months he may be succeeded by Alexander Fyfe, former president of the Hamilton club and now a member of the board.

He was a recess appointee as were President Jackson and four other commissioners, Mrs. Irene Pease Montonya, Albert Z. Halperin, Arthur Dehmlow and Albert P. Bauer.

Rumors that Gov. Small would permit Mayor Thompson to name at least a part of the new board—one report being that the mayor would be given enough to regain control of this park system — have been semi-officially denied in the Small camp.

CUT ON HAND CAUSES DEATH.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 14.—[Special.]—Although the condition of Mrs Ed Jackson, wife of Indiana's governor, was still regarded as very critical tonight, attending physicians reported that there had been a marked improvement since yesterday when her condition was the cause of serious alarm. She has been confined to her bed for several days with pneumonia. After having been unconscious for twenty-four hours, Mrs. Jackson rallied Friday night and talked freely and coherently.

SMALL'S NEW PRIMARY BILLS EXCITE INTEREST

Would Bring About Two Major Changes.

Springfield, Ill., May 14.—[Special.]—Interest in Springfield is centering on Gov. Small's proposed new primary act. Copies of the bills, which were introduced in the general assembly last Thursday, came from the printer's today, and immediately became the objects of perusal and discussion.

The new act, if passed, would bring about two major changes.

The first is directed at remedying that provision in the present act which has to do with the voting power of committeemen and which brought the act, through the alteration of precinct boundaries in Lee county, under the scrutiny of the Supreme court.

How Law Would Be Changed.

Under the law as it now stands a precinct committeeman is granted one vote and one additional vote for each fifty ballots or major fraction thereof his party cast in the precinct for governor at the last general election. Ward committeemen enjoy a substantially similar voting power.

Under the contemplated law, each precinct committeeman would cast one vote in convention for each ballot cast by his party in his precinct at the primary at which he was elected. This rule would apply, not only to precinct and ward committeemen, but to all members of municipal and congressional committees and of the state center committee. The voting power of each would be based directly on the vote his party received in the district represented by him at the primary at which he was chosen.

Clears Up Ambiguities.

The second major revision proposed would be to throw the selection of delegates and alternates to the national party convention into the hands of the congressional conventions.

While it was undoubtedly the intention of the framers of the present law that this should be the method, their language was so ambiguous and conflicting the Supreme court ruled that delegates and alternates should be chosen at the primaries. The new bill clears up the ambiguities and conflicts and specifically provides that delegates shall not be chosen at a primary election.

There are a good many other changes, most of them meant to bring the primary act up to date with the court decisions that have been directed against it since its enactment in 1910. Judges of the Supreme, Circuit and Superior courts are omitted. The provisions of the act would no longer apply to townships co-extensive with a municipality. A "city" central committee is changed to a "municipal" central committee for each city, town and village.

Go into Chicago Situation.

Chicago's situation where committeemen are elected by wards is gone into much more thoroughly than in the present act. One of the most important changes from the Chicago viewpoint is the provision requiring a ward committeeman to be a registered voter of that ward and to have been a legal resident of the ward for at least two years.

Precinct and ward committeemen must file their nominations with the county clerk under the new act and their names must be on the ballot, thus eliminating the old sticker system.

Gov. Small's act, if approved, would go into effect at the primaries next April. One provision is puzzling the digesters. The paragraph dealing with the number of delegates to congressional and state conventions provides that counties, precincts and wards would be entitled to one delegate for every 100 votes cast by party electors at the primary immediately preceding the convention, and to one delegate for a unit of less than 100 votes to cast a proportionate vote. Should this pass, it is pointed out, a state convention would number thousands of delegates.

Fails to Remedy Defect.

It has been the plea of the secretary of state that the ten days allowed between the time for withdrawals and the time at which certification must be made to the county clerk is insufficient. The Small act, while extending and advancing the time for filing, fails to remedy this defect, it is said.

Those sections in the present act requiring delegates to file with their nominations their preference for candidate for President is omitted in the proposed law. Candidates to run at a special election for a county office must be selected at a primary instead of, as at present, by a party convention.

There are other minor changes. The provision protection an employe against a cut in pay is taken out of the clause pertaining to a workman's right to be absent at the polls. The old clause prohibiting the sale of liquor during primaries is out. So also are those provisions pertaining to disfranchisement for frauds and the penitentiary sentence for a disfranchised voter who seeks to cast a ballot.

The Small bill was drawn up by the governor's attorney, Werner Schroeder. It was drawn up in haste and is admitted to contain defects which will have to ironed out in legislative committee or on the floor of the assembly. It will begin its course through the legislature next Tuesday, when the two houses recovene.

PANAMA FEARS TREATY WILL PUT IT IN U. S. WARS

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—Fear that the recently negotiated United States-Panama treaty would require citizens of Panama to go overseas to fight for the United States in case of war is the reason behind the delay of the Panama legislature in ratifying the document, Secretary Kellogg said today. The secretary said that this fear is groundless.

State department officials explained that a provision of the treaty provides that when the United States goes to war, the government of Panama shall consider that a state of war exists in that republic. This provision, it was stated, is simply to allow this government to protect the canal, and does not require citizens of Panama to fight for the United States.

NASH

Leads the World in Motor Car Value

Advanced Six Sedan $1425 f. o. b. factory

Prominent and very popular in the public life of AMERICA

C. W. NASH has never built a more popular model of Nash than this Advanced Six Sedan.

You see it everywhere, and the reason is: it offers charming style, Nash performance and luxurious comfort for five passengers at an exceptionally moderate price.

This Nash—every Nash—is in a value-class all its own. The car is designed and built with care high above the average, yet it is priced no higher than the average car.

For exceptional power-smoothness and proper bearing support Nash has seven big main bearings in the Nash six-cylinder motor.

To provide extra chassis strength without excess weight, C. W. Nash tubular-trusses the frame. Nash tubular cross-members actually furnish 5 times more resistance to road strain than the plain members found on other cars.

Even the 4-wheel brakes in this popular Nash are of special Nash design—with Two-Way action for permanent, care-free efficiency.

Come in and see this car. Let us show and explain to you its many other, equally important, features of extra value.

FOURTH PLACE
in four great markets with four great lines of cars

Today, as always, America is swift to recognize outstanding merit, ingenuity and progressiveness, as evidenced by the startling readjustment in the automobile industry since last July.

Witness the way public opinion—in three short years—has shot Chrysler forward from twenty-seventh to fourth place in actual dollar sales—ahead of twenty-three notably good cars, some of them representing successes historic in the industry.

Today Chrysler is led by only three others.

The reason is obvious: Walter P. Chrysler and Chrysler engineers have been in the very heart of things since the business began—he behind the scenes toiling and planning, dreaming the dream which has come so gloriously true.

Functioning at the head of his own company—unhampered by engineering and manufacturing traditions or obsolete equipment—giving initiative and vision a free hand—Chrysler has presented to the American public, in the four Chrysler cars, revelations in brilliant performance, mastery of sparkling speed and power, ease of handling, riding comfort, motoring luxury.

Actuated by a manufacturing principle which for the first time standardized quality—not merely quantity—Chrysler has given the people motor-car values so indisputable as to make a decision in favor of Chrysler a foregone conclusion.

The dash, smartness, speed, power, beauty and long life of Chrysler cars—breathing the very spirit of American life—have won overwhelming preference in four great markets.

With the result that today motor-car sales records show conclusively that where others have declined Chrysler has gained; and where others have gained, Chrysler has gained still more.

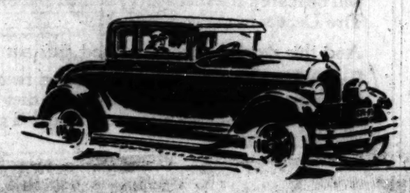
Drive Any Chrysler and Learn Its Actual Superiority In Its Price Field

Chrysler "50"
FIVE BODY STYLES
$750 to $885
50 miles and more per hour

In designing and building the Chrysler "50", Walter P. Chrysler was guided by the conviction that the man who invests approximately $800 is just as much entitled to value as those investing more.

To this end quality is standardized in the "50" as in all other Chrysler cars—quality which can be proven in half an hour by performance-demonstration; quality which makes the "50" the indisputable leader of its price division—with 50 miles and more per hour, 5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds, 25 miles to the gallon, full-sized family roominess.

All prices f. o. b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excise tax.

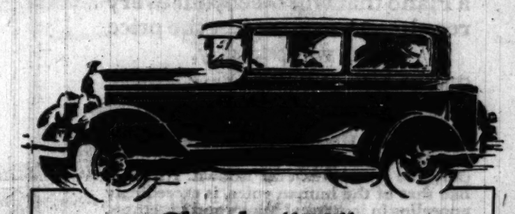


Chrysler "60"
SIX BODY STYLES
$1075 to $1245
60 miles plus—with ease

The Chrysler "60" realizes Mr. Chrysler's dream of a type of performance so utterly different as to convince any and everybody at once that the "60" stands alone in its field and at its price.

Drive the Chrysler "60" yourself. Its vigor, aliveness, and riding comfort—which have already brought it an overwhelming volume of popularity—will convince you that anything less in your own car will never again satisfy you.

All prices f. o. b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excise tax.



Chrysler "70"
EIGHT BODY STYLES
$1495 to $1795
70 miles plus—

We can recite to you the advantages of the finer Chrysler "70's" speed of 70 miles plus, its astonishing pickup of 5 to 25 miles in 7¼ seconds.

We can tell you what its 7-bearing crankshaft and impulse neutralizer contribute toward greater smoothness; how much more easily you ride because of low chassis design and unique spring suspension; and how much safer you feel because of its four-wheel hydraulic brakes.

But the real way to discover these things for yourself is in an extended demonstration—yourself at the wheel!

All prices f. o. b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excise tax.

Chrysler Imperial "80"
TEN BODY STYLES
$2495 to $3995
80 miles plus—92 horsepower

It is perfectly obvious in the Chrysler Imperial "80" that Mr. Chrysler and his engineers have wrought performance results so rich and luxurious that you simply cannot afford to be without them.

The Imperial "80" promises you—and will reveal in your first half hour with it—delightful experiences in motoring you have not yet enjoyed—and it will continue to deliver them year after year, because it is built to the Chrysler ideal of "as fine as money can build."

All prices f. o. b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excise tax.

NEVER DIVORCED, RAYMOND'S FIRST WIFE DECLARES

Miss Mackaye's Position Placed in Doubt.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 14.—(AP)—Dorothy Mackaye, actress, known as the widow of Ray Raymond, song and dance man, today indignantly denied imputations that she was not legally married to him. She made the denial in answer to claims reported made in New York by Florence Bain Raymond, the dead actor's first wife, that she had never been divorced from him, and that she would come to California to protect her dower rights.

Miss Mackaye, who is a central figure in the murder trial of Paul Kelly, film athlete acter, for Raymond's death, is alleged by the state to have been the woman in a love intrigue with Kelly which resulted in his bare knuckle attack upon her husband. Love letters and telegrams exchanged between Kelly and Miss Mackaye have been introduced in the trial by the state as evidence of their relationship.

Claims She Was Wed in 1921.

The actress, who is under indictment as an accessory after the fact and for compounding a felony in the death of Raymond, testified on the witness stand that they were married in 1921 in Gretna Green, Md. When she was told there was no such town she declared she was told that was its name and that she had been there. She evaded attempts to gain further definite information by professing lapses of memory.

Her attorneys said today that she declared to them she was married, that she so testified in court and that was all they were able to say.

Miss Mackaye in Seclusion.

Mrs. Lottie Cedarbloom, mother of the dead actor, has been unable to furnish any clarifying details. She said that all she knew was that after the return of her son to his Long Island home he told her he and the actress had been married in a "southern city."

Miss Mackaye left the Raymond home in Hollywood last night to be in retirement for a rest before resuming the witness stand when the trial reopens Monday afternoon.

District Attorney Asa Keyes, who was quoted in the New York dispatches as having telegraphed Florence Bain Raymond for information as to any divorce, was not at his office today. The state's attorneys have indicated that the truth of the matter of Miss Mackaye's marriage to Raymond was of little interest to them.

ARCHITECTS PUT C. H. WACKER ON SOCIETY'S ROLLS

Charles H. Wacker, former president of the Chicago plan commission, yesterday was elected to honorary membership in the American Institute of Architects by their convention in Washington, D. C., according to word received here. The action was taken in recognition of "Mr. Wacker's great service to architecture in promoting the Chicago plan."

Mr. Wacker headed the plan commission for seventeen years, retiring only last December, when James Simpson took his place. Similar honor has been done him for executing the Chicago plan by other architectural bodies.

In 1921 he was awarded the medal of honor of the Société des Architects Français. He is also an honorary member of the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

LEAGUE GIVES JOHN D. 60 CENT REBATE ON GIFT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 14.—John D. Rockefeller, distributor of dimes and millions, has been sent a check for 60 cents by the league of nations. Some time ago the Rockefeller foundation offered to defray the expenses of publishing in English a handbook on international organizations. It sent a check for 4,500 gold francs ($900), but the cost proved to be 4,505 gold francs ($901). The league treasury, however, earned 8 gold francs ($1.60) interest on the deposit, leaving a balance of 3 gold francs (60 cents), which, after weighty deliberation today, was mailed to Mr. Rockefeller with thanks for the amount used.

YOUNG MOTHER CLEW IN CICERO BURIAL MURDER

Trace Slain Man's Debts in Hunt for Motive.

A well-dressed young mother of a 2 year old boy was being sought by police last night in connection with the murder of John Costenaro, 34 years old, Cicero saloon keeper, whose body was found Friday night buried three feet under the dirt floor of a garage in the rear of a bungalow at 5435 30th street, Cicero. Costenaro had been missing for four months.

Suspicion was thrown on the woman yesterday when Mrs. Anna Linduska, 2644 Clinton avenue, who rented the cottage to two Italian men, told police the men were accompanied by a fair complexioned woman with a child by her side.

Debts Regarded as Clew.

At the same time, Lieut. Martin Wojciechowski learned of another possible clew to the motive for the slaying from the widow of the victim, Mrs. Elizabeth Costenaro, 26 years old. She said her husband had been apprehensive of violence in connection with debts.

Police believe that gangland may have taken Costenaro's life because he failed to pay an obligation.

Another Theory Presented.

A second theory, which may precipitate a federal investigation, is based on Costenaro's being indicted a year ago with 73 others in a government cleanup of Cicero's liquor business. The killing may have been deemed necessary by beer and booze racketeers to silence his testimony, it was believed.

In either case the woman figures, according to police, if only as an excuse for renting of the bungalow.

Costenaro's disappearance from his home just three days after the body of Theodore Anton, Cicero hotelkeeper, was found buried in lime may be more than a coincidence, investigators suspect. Solution of one may solve both killings, they believe.

Tire Selling History in the Making

The new Inland Tire Depots—factory-owned and operated—the first of their kind in the country—introduce a new method and new low prices for quality tires

THE economy of direct selling by an established manufacturer has been proven time and again. For example, Regal has shown the way in shoes; Spalding's in sporting goods; Dunlap in hats; Fanny May in candy.

Inland Plan Immediately Successful

So it was only logical that the Inland Tire Depots, owned and operated by Chicago's leading tire manufacturer, should meet with instant approval. Why not? Folks like to save money and this new Inland plan offers the lowest prices ever known on fine tires.

Eleven Inland Sales Depots Now

There are eleven Inland Depots now [soon there will be more]; the first factory owned and operated Tire Depots in the country.

And this new tire selling method does cut prices.

Remember that Inland Tires have been recognized for years as fine tires—tires as good as tires can be made. And the mileage of every Inland is guaranteed by the factory.

Four Advantages for Inland Buyers

1 Inland's years of manufacturing experience.
Ten million Inland Tires and Tubes have been made and sold in the past ten years to the world's largest jobbers and dealers under the most competitive conditions.

2 Quality tires at lowest prices ever offered.
Inland Tires are famous for their balanced construction, durability and remarkable resistance to hard usage. And Inland Depot prices to you are low because there is only the normal factory profit.

3 A definite mileage guarantee on every tire.
Other leading tire makers have given up the guarantee because of the difficulty of maintaining it in the hands of widely scattered dealers. But Inland has a guarantee that works—8,000 to 15,000 miles. It is backed by us as manufacturers—we have no go-betweens.

4 A definitely announced list of prices.
In every Inland Depot you will find a printed price list; the only one put out by any leading manufacturer, to our knowledge. You don't have to bargain, for all buyers are equal in an Inland Depot. The price is the same—one tire or a carload.

Here's how low fine tire prices can be when distributor, jobber and retailer expense and profit are cut out

Specially-Built Fisher Body—Strikingly Beautiful Duco Colors—Elegantly Appointed —The Aristocrat of All Chevrolets

Again Chevrolet revolutionizes every previous conception of quality and elegance in a low-priced automobile by presenting the Imperial Landau—a new model whose distinction and smartness entitle it to comparison with the world's costliest custom-built automobiles.

Its specially-built Fisher body reveals all the masterly craftsmanship for which the Fisher name is famous. The finish is lustrous black Duco, with embellishments of brilliant chasseur red.

With oblong windows—with nickeled windshield rim and landau bows—with vaulted roof, and with top and rear quarter in mouse gray textile leather, this aristocrat of all Chevrolets is one of the most strikingly beautiful cars to be seen on the streets and highways.

And, of course, it has all the power, speed and smoothness—all the flashing acceleration, fingertip steering and unfailing dependability that have brought to Chevrolet such worldwide fame.

This beautiful car is now on display in our showroom. Come and see it. You will be delighted to learn that a car so low in price provides such commanding individuality and style!

OLD IRONSIDES BUTTON SELLING PLAN TO SPREAD

Other Cities May Adopt Chicago Method.

OLD IRONSIDES FUND

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has contributed $1,000 for the refitting of the United States frigate Constitution. Contributions received by THE TRIBUNE during the last twenty-four hours follow:

Jackson Park Yacht club	$ 20.61
S. W. Banning	5.00
Total	$ 25.61
Previously acknowledged	3,137.72
Grand total	3,163.33

The American Legion continues its active interest in the drive for funds.

Plans to extend the button selling scheme for swelling the Old Ironsides refitting fund, which has been worked out by City Controller Fitzmorris, into other Illinois cities and possibly throughout the country, were started yesterday.

With word received from Danville, Springfield and Decatur that those cities are eager to adopt the button plan for participating in the nation-wide drive to put the fighting frigate back into its old sea trim, Mr. Fitzmorris took steps to have the buttons supplied from headquarters in Chicago.

Urges Wider Button Selling.

Success in Chicago led Capt. Edward A. Evers, commander of the 4th naval district, to wire to Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, head of the National Old Ironsides committee, yesterday telling him that the button scheme is by far the best means of raising funds. Capt. Evers urged that the button plan be put in effect througnout the country.

Checks aggregating nearly $1,000 were received yesterday from Chicago schools. The Swift school, turning in $300, heads the list.

Charles A. Brown, a member of the Old Ironsides committee, has undertaken the task of supplying the county schools with the buttons. His headquarters is at 648 North Dearborn street.

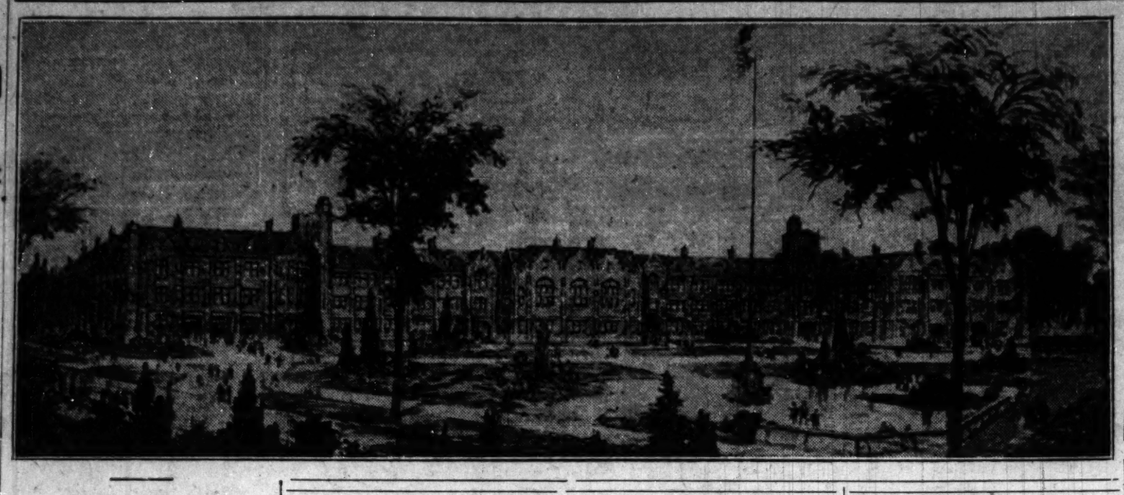
Painting for Winning School.

Added inducement will be given the county division, Mr. Brown declared, by the fact that an oil painting of Old Ironsides will be donated to the county school which sells the largest number of buttons in proportion to its enrollment.

More than 300,000 of the tokens, bearing the insignia found on the gold medal awarded Capt. Isaac Hull by congress after his defeat of the Guerriere, are now in the schools, and 100,000 more are on the way.

Members of the committee believe that Chicago will have contributed proportionately more than any other city in the country to the reconditioning of the Constitution by the time the drive closes and the old ship goes into drydock on May 30.

ARCHITECT'S PLAN FOR NEW $3,500,000 HIGH SCHOOL



Start Work Soon

Construction of the $3,500,000 new Lane Technical High school will begin this summer, John E. Byrnes, business manager for the board of education, announced yesterday. Final plans have been completed. The new building will be of the three story Gothic type and its fifty-one rooms will provide accommodations for 2 300 pupils. Mr. Byrnes said the school would be located on the site of the old West Town Golf club at the northwest corner of Addison and Western avenues.

De Whirst and Bernard traveled by motor and Bookwalter chose trains. The attorneys were on the road seven weeks and interviewed more than seventy former members of the colony, whose stories will be read into the record of the trial which opens Monday.

Closer to the Engineers' "Ideal" Than Any Other Car In The World

The Finest, Fastest Model of America's Longest Lasting Car

A YEAR ago there came to Reo the most distinctive honor ever received by any American automobile. It was proved that Reo was America's Longest Lasting Car. This year, again unsolicited, there came to Reo a tribute of equal importance to anyone about to buy a motor car.

Here's What Happened

In January, 150 automotive engineers, members of the Metropolitan Section of the Society of Automotive Engineers, held a contest to determine the specifications of an "Ideal" American car.

The dreams of 150 engineers were synthesized into specifications for the kind of automobile these engineers would like to have built.

Then it was discovered that in describing their "Ideal" car, they had almost re-written the specifications of the new Reo Flying Cloud Sedan.

Check the Lists for Yourself

In the columns at right, you will find the detailed specifications for the "Ideal" car, and those of the Flying Cloud.

Note the similarity. No other automobile in the world even approaches the Flying Cloud in its identity with this "Ideal" car of 150 leading engineers.

Then try out a Flying Cloud. At once, you'll realize why engineers consider such specifications ideal, why a car so designed fulfills the needs of American conditions. Start it, step on it, stop it. In the floating comfort of its swift, hushed speed, learn what motoring can be today, and for many, many years to come.

SPENCER DIVORCE INJUNCTION PLEA UP TOMORROW

Wife Seeks to Prevent Wisconsin Suit.

New York, May 14.—[Special.]—Argument will be heard in Supreme court here Monday on Mrs. Harold S. Spencer's motion to enjoin her husband, Capt. Spencer, from prosecuting a divorce action in Wisconsin, on the ground that neither is a resident of that state.

Mrs. Spencer is the former Isabella Beattie, daughter of Sir James and Lady Beattie of St. Andrews, Scotland, and 5 Eaton square, London.

Breaks Into Print.

Capt. Spencer was much in print fifteen years ago as "the boy bridegroom" of Mrs. Amada Chambers-Lloyd-Perry-Ballantine Spencer and as author of a story that he had been aide-de-camp to Prince William of Weid in Albania, who had shown him a German secret service book with the names of 47,000 British persons of prominence who were addicted to vice.

Attention was attracted to the current suit when the motion was filed by Mrs. Spencer, through her attorney, Phillip Wittenberg, and, thus it was disclosed that the details of a partly English divorce scandal may soon be aired in a New York courtroom.

Charges Wife Misbehaved.

Capt. Spencer, formerly of the British army, now of 41 5th avenue, alleges Mrs. Spencer has treated him inhumanly and has been guilty of misconduct with various men, including William MacQueen, a former lieutenant in the Royal field artillery and also in the British army intelligence service.

The complaint states that when Capt. Spencer came home on April 18, his wedding anniversary, he found his wife entertaining MacQueen in the 5th avenue apartment. They had been there together, he said, for perhaps five days.

U.S. Publisher May Fly from Europe in His Air Yacht

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 14.—[U. P.]—Van Lear Black, publisher of the Baltimore Sun, has ordered a luxurious air yacht and may fly in it to the United States, the United Press was informed today by M. de Jong, of the K. L. M. Luchtwaart Co., of Holland. Mr. Black's Fokker plane, M. de Jong said, would include an electric kitchen and a sleeping room. He thought Mr. Black would start home by air in about two months.

COURT BARS WOMAN'S CONFESSION IN TRIAL FOR MAN'S MURDER

The prosecution will not be allowed to introduce before the jury the testimony of the admissions made by Mrs. Catherine Cassler to Capt. Dennis Carroll in which she admitted knowledge of the conspiracy to murder William Lindstrom, 2114 West North avenue, on Dec. 6, 1926, according to a decision made yesterday by Judge Phillip L. Sullivan.

Assistant State's Attorneys Henry Ayers and Frank Matousek admit that the judge's decision is a severe blow to the prosecution.

However, the prosecutors still have the testimony of Loren Patrick, former runner for the Porter county, Indiana, lady bootlegger, and Mrs. Lillian Fraser, who lived with Lindstrom as his wife. Both have entered pleas of guilty and Patrick has already testified for the state. Mrs. Fraser will start her story tomorrow morning, when the trial is resumed.

According to Capt. Carroll, Mrs. Cassler admitted to him that she planned the murder of Lindstrom and had Patrick do the killing.

Judge Sullivan, in making his decision, said that the Supreme court rulings are so strict on the admitting of confessions or admissions into evidence that he feared the use of them in this case would result in a reversal in the event of a conviction.

COPS ACCUSED OF BEATING YOUTHS TELL THEIR STORY

Bernard Ziel and Edward McClellan, south park policemen charged with having spanked and beaten a number of boys, testified yesterday before Col. H. C. Carbough, investigator for the park board, that they had administered the beatings after warning the boys not to steal golf balls on the Jackson park course.

Not wanting to arrest the boys, the policeman rounded them up one noon hour, they stated, and took them into the Jackson park shelter house, where the spanking and beatings were delivered. They admitted using a rubber hose on two of the boys.

Col. Carbaugh indicated that he would make his decision to the south park board tomorrow for final action. The policemen, he said, may either be suspended without pay, discharged, or reprimanded.

The ERSKINE SIX

America's first fine car of small size
A Great $1000 VALUE!

IT is one thing to claim value—another to prove it. In making the above statement we base our claim on facts and figures. We compare the Erskine Six Sedan—factory price $995—with 5 higher priced sedans ranging from $1085 to $1495.

Check the comparison table below point by point. It proves that the Erskine Six offers more in quality construction, quality equipment, quality transportation—inch for inch and dollar for dollar—than any automobile in the world today—abroad or at home!

The large field glasses pictured have a range of 20 miles in clear weather. They sell for about $15. With the small 8-power binoculars you can readily see 100 miles under like conditions. They are sold at $85. Quality isn't a matter of size and you don't need a spyglass to spot the fact that the Erskine Six is a quality car through and through.

The Erskine alone has full-vision steel body

None of the 5 higher priced sedans offers you the safety of a full-vision steel body. All Erskine bodies are electrically welded into one solid unit—not riveted together. This means freedom from body rattles and squeaks even after years of driving.

Power, flexibility and speed

The quiet, L-Head, 6-cylinder engine of the Erskine is a marvel of power and spirited action. It accelerates from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 8½ seconds. It takes you up an 11% grade in high gear under full load. It hits 60-mile speed without effort.

You will note that the Erskine Six employs four piston rings on each piston—giving added compression and protecting against crankcase dilution. Only 1 of the 5 other cars does this.

Longer life, low upkeep

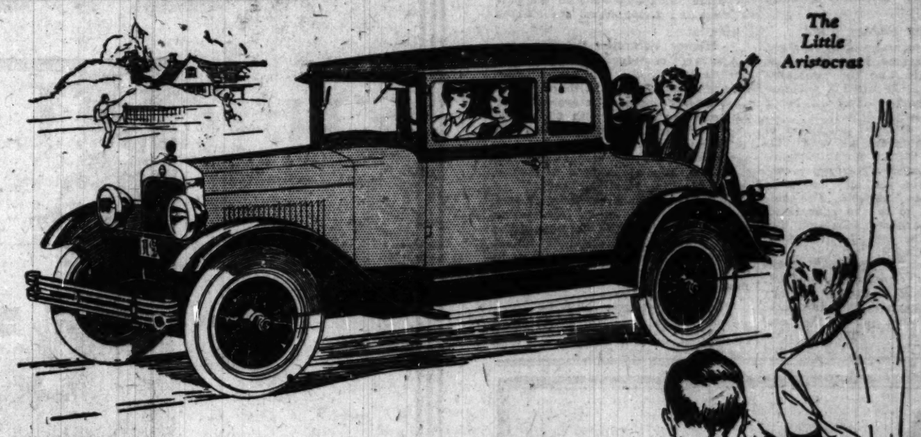
The engine is protected by a special oil filtration system which guards moving parts from destructive dirt and grit.

The chassis of the Erskine Six has a pressure lubrication system, to insure perfect lubrication of all chassis parts at all times.

The Erskine springbase is longer than 4 of the 5 higher priced sedans—in fact all but 19 inches of the car's entire wheelbase is cradled by springs. This protects passengers and car alike from road shock—another protective measure.

Timken bearings cut repair costs

Timken bearings are employed in the Erskine Six to a far greater extent than in any of the 5 cars compared. The result is greater dependability at vital points and long life because they are adjustable.



The Little Aristocrat

ERSKINE SIX SPORT COUPE

$995 f. o. b. factory

CUSTOM SEDAN, $995 TOURER, $945 BUSINESS COUPE, $945

Bumpers front and rear included, of course

All Erskine brakes operate on 4 wheels

Both the service and emergency brakes on the Erskine Six operate on all four wheels of the car. It is a wonderful experience in security to feel these powerful, self-energizing brakes quickly a-b-s-o-r-b the forward momentum of the car—positive car control at any and all speeds!

"Extras" that don't cost extra!

When you purchase your Erskine Six you have a completely equipped, modern car. Bumpers, front and rear, are standard Erskine equipment—yet listed as standard by only 1 of the 5 higher priced cars compared!

The Erskine is equipped with a thief-proof, coincidental lock—none of the 5 has it! Ignition, door and spare tire carrier locks are operated with one key.

The Erskine's headlights are of the safe, two-beam type—only 2 of the 5 cars have them. These headlights give you a long, clear beam for touring—tilted beam light for city driving.

An accurate motometer is standard Erskine equipment—only 1 of the 5 furnishes this important piece of equipment.

In this compact, dependable little car will be found every feature of the American fine car.

In performance, in advanced design, in the high quality standard of its materials and equipment it is a car you will be proud to own, proud to drive, proud to compare with the more expensive cars of your friends.

For two years the Erskine Six has been proving its abilities to Studebaker engineers over thousands of miles of gruelling tests at Studebaker's 800-acre proving ground. Now it is ready to prove to you that it really is the Little Aristocrat of all motordom.

MAYOR OFFERS ANOTHER WAY TO FIGHT DEFICIT

It Gives School Bond Redemption Fund.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

A new plan has been devised to get the city corporate fund out of its expected 1927 deficit, estimated by Controller Fitzmorris at $7,957,469.95.

This new plan, credited to Mayor William Hale Thompson personally, seeks to avoid any increase in taxes, a fear to which the original plan gave rise.

The new plan provides, as did the original, for the building of schoolhouses by bond issue. The $1 tax rate on each $100 assessed valuation, now used for school building, is to be split three ways. Thirty per cent is to be given to the city corporate fund to wipe out its deficit.

Provides for Sinking Fund.

The same percentage is to be given the school educational fund to increase teachers' salaries, and the remaining 40 per cent is to be used to accumulate sinking funds to pay off bonds and interest on schoolhouses.

The present assessed valuation of all property within the city is $1,882,067,121. Thus the $1 tax rate means $18,820,671 in taxes. Thirty per cent of that sum for the city corporate fund would mean $5,646,000. The same amount would go to the educational fund of the board of education. The sinking fund for schoolhouses would be allotted $7,528,000.

This, however, is the year of the quadrennial real estate valuations and there will be some increase. The city administration expects that the boost will be $235,000,000, making the total assessed valuations $2,117,000,000. On that expected valuation the mayor's plan would allot $6,345,000 to the city corporate fund, $6,345,000 to the educational and $8,460,000 to the sinking funds.

Higher Valuation Possible.

Another combination has been worked out by the city accountants. This is on the basis that there will be a $450,000,000 increase in assessed valuations, making the total $2,332,000,000. On that valuation, which the city administration hopes for but does not expect, the corporate would get $6,996,000, the educational $6,996,000, and the sinking fund $9,328,000.

All of this would be accomplished, according to the city's spokesmen, without increasing the tax bills of the public generally. The council finance committee is scheduled to express its opinion on these revenue proposals next Tuesday.

HEALTH CHIEF RESIGNS.

Springfield, Ill., May 14.—[U. P.]—Dr. J. V. Brokaw, for three years city superintendent of health here, announced his resignation today, effective June 1.

JUDGE FETZER TO BE HOST AT PARTY FOR MAYOR THOMPSON

JUDGE W. R. FETZER.

Judge William R. Fetzer, as president of the Fort Dearborn Athletic club, will be host to Mayor Thompson at a birthday banquet at the Palmer house tomorrow evening. Congressman Fred A. Britten will be the principal speaker.

The banquet was at first planned for the mayor's natal day, May 14, but conflicting attractions in Louisville both for the guest of honor and others, necessitated the postponement.

Besides Mr. Britten, Congressman Madden and Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom are on the program. Paul Ash will entertain.

HOME RULE FIGHT IN TRANSIT ISSUE SPLITS COUNCIL

Attack Mayor's Readiness to Forego Control.

Home rule, the question of the hour in Chicago's present transit negotiations, split the city council's local transportation committee yesterday into two camps.

Reaction among the aldermen to reports that the administration might be willing to sacrifice local control in order to secure the passage of enabling laws at this session of the legislature was quick and specific, one group commending the plan and the other condemning it.

"It's not sacrifice, it's surrender!" exclaimed Ald. Wiley W. Mills [37th]. "I am surprised to learn that there is any thought of handing over our sovereignty to a downstate commission."

Albert to Fight State Rule.

Ald. Mills declared that "it ought to be plain from Samuel Insull's contributions in the senatorial campaign what kind of a deal the city can expect from the Illinois commerce commission." Municipal ownership advocates will be irrevocably opposed to a terminable permit with home rule clause omitted, he said.

Another leader in the prospective fight for home rule, if it is denied by the legislature, will be Ald. A. F. Albert [43d], who asserted that he will stand out against state domination of the transit lines if he has to stand alone. A third member of the committee insisting upon home rule is Ald. John Toman [23d].

Cronson Leads Other Side.

"Over and over again the whole council has committed itself on the home rule question," said Ald. Toman. "We indorsed the Durso and McClugage bills and have proceeded all the way along on the theory of a local commission."

The other side of the debate was led by Ald. B. A. Cronson [4th], a Thompson leader in the council. Although insisting that he favors home rule, if obtainable, he said he saw no point in battering against a stone wall. It would be better to temporarily yield on this point rather than come home from Springfield empty handed, he argued.

"I worked for the home rule amendment in April but it didn't carry, did it?" he asked. "How are we going to explain that to the legislature. They'll ask us why the people didn't vote for home rule if they want it so badly."

Moreover, with the elevated and surface lines extending outside the city limits, Ald. Cronson contended, it will be impossible to ever obtain genuine home rule without the creation of a transportation district including the suburbs.

Up to Council Last.

All the people are interested in are a reasonable fare, plenty of seats, speedy transportation, and transfers from one line to another, according to Ald. Cronson. Give them those things, he said, and they don't care who is in control.

Chances that the aldermen will have an opportunity to air their views before the administration's bills go to Springfield Tuesday faded yesterday with the report that a meeting of the committee Monday is unlikely. Even if Chairman Joseph McDonough calls an emergency session, the aldermen admit that it will be impossible to do more than hastily scan the measures.

Ultimate action will rest with the council, however, as it must approve the enacting ordinances, regardless of what enabling legislation is secured. The final decision will then depend on a referendum which Mayor Thompson has promised before any transit settlement is made effective.

MRS. HOOVER TO ATTEND CHICAGO GIRL SCOUT FETE

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the secretary of commerce, will arrive in Chicago tomorrow to attend a dinner given by the local executives of the Girl Scouts, of which she is national first vice president. Another distinguished guest will be Mrs. Osgood Choate of New York, who is national second vice president of the organization.

The dinner, which will be held at the Chicago Woman's club, will be attended by 200 captains and lieutenants of Girl Scouts troops of the Chicago and Cook county district. Mrs. Julius Rosenwald, honorary commissioner; Miss Elizabeth Baker, commissioner; and Mrs. Lester Armour, deputy commissioner, will be among the local executives who will be in charge of the meeting, which is the annual gathering of leaders of the Chicago and Cook county council.

A Record-Breaking Performance marks the debut of the New "Challenger" Models

SAFETY STUTZ

Winning the STEVENS TROPHY

..with..

1642.58 miles in 24 hours

68.44 miles per hour

INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY • April 21-22, 1927 • A. A. A. Auspices

The New Challenger Models of the Safety Stutz made a sensational debut on April 21 and 22 by breaking one of the most important American automobile records.

A Challenger Safety Stutz sedan was started at 4 P. M. on April 21, with the objective of winning the Stevens Trophy—offered for the first strictly stock closed car to average 60 miles per hour, or better, on the Indianapolis Speedway.

The start was made under a threatening sky—but the Stutz has never been known as a fair-weather automobile, and so the car was sent off on its long journey despite forbidding conditions.

Although it was April, the weather soon resembled that of December. High winds, accompanied first by rain and then by sleet, snow and fog handicapped the drivers, blinding them, and making the track slippery and treacherous.

To these conditions, and to the unfailing stamina of the Challenger Model, must be ascribed the striking fact that the speed of the car in the last 8 hours was greater than in the first 8 hours of the 24-hour run.

When the Challenger Stutz finished, at 4 P. M. on April 22, it was found that it had maintained an average speed far faster than needed to win the Stevens Trophy, and had to its credit the most miles in 24 hours ever achieved by a standard stock sedan with full regular equipment.

The car finished with a total of 1,642.58 miles covered in 24 hours, including all stops, and its average speed for the entire distance was 68.44 miles per hour.

The foregoing is, however, but half the story.

Atlantic City Speedway

May 7, 1927

A. A. A. AUSPICES

Not a spark-plug was changed, nor was a wrench put to engine, clutch, or transmission throughout the entire 24-hour run.

The car was a strictly stock sedan, chassis and body, (so certified by the American Automobile Association), and fully equipped, just as it would be delivered to a buyer from our salesroom. Valve-clearance, piston-clearance, and every other detail was strictly standard.

The entire run was made under A.A.A. official sanction and supervision, with A.A.A observers in charge and constantly in attendance.

It is especially significant to the motorist, in these days of speed tests on smooth, highly-banked board bowls, that the Stutz record was made on the four-cornered, brick-surfaced Indianapolis Speedway. This track, built at a time when 60 miles per hour was race-winning speed, is acknowledged to be 8 to 10 miles slower than the newer board tracks.

This record conclusively proves Stutz speed and stamina—and it also proves a lot more. For the amazing performance recorded could not have been made with such weather and track conditions as existed, were it not for the unequaled stability and balance given the Safety Stutz by its very low center of gravity.

Nor could this sedan have been driven at such speed under those weather and track conditions by a team of only two drivers were it not for the marvelous driving ease of the Safety Stutz.

In short, what this Stutz performance proves above all else is that the Safety Stutz possesses, in superlative degree, the very qualities that make a good road-driving car for the general motorist.

We are ready to give you a real demonstration in an exact duplicate of the Safety Stutz Challenger sedan that won the Stevens Trophy.

SIGNIFICANT POINTS for the Car-Buyer in this Performance

Just One "We Told You So"

The confidence of the Stutz Company in the capabilities of the SAFETY STUTZ was shown when, contrary to all speed-trial traditions, the company made public BEFORE THE CONTEST its challenge for the Stevens Trophy, with the date upon which its winning would be attempted. Thus the customary policy of preservive; the utmost possible secrecy until success is assured was discarded in favor of an open invitation to all interested to be present while the trial was made.

What "Stock Car" Means Here

The car that won the Stevens Trophy was a fully equipped, standard, stock, five-passenger SAFETY STUTZ sedan, and so certified by the A. A. A. The term "stock", as used herein, means just as sold to buyers from the sales-rooms of Stutz dealers everywhere. Even valve-clearance, piston-clearance, timing and every other detail were strictly standard.

Also "Stock" Gas, Oil and Tires

Neither the gasoline nor the oil used was in any way different from the sorts sold daily to many thousands of motorists. And the tires were without any special preparation or treatment.

Winning Against Weather

The weather, as may be verified from records of the U. S. Weather Bureau, was wintry rather than spring-like. High winds, rain, snow, sleet and fog persisted through a great part of the night-driving, interfering with the drivers' vision, and rendering the track slippery and treacherous for that part of the run.

On a Roadway-Speedway

The run was made, not on a modern board bowl, but on a rough, brick track built in 1909, when sixty miles per hour was race-winning speed; a track with flat straight-aways running into low-banked turns, and acknowledged to be eight to ten miles per hour slower than board tracks. However, this track more closely reproduces general road conditions than any other speedway in America. And this one fact alone gives the foregoing performances an outstanding significance to you, as a representative motorist.

Stutz Safety Vital

It would have been impossible to drive the car with safety at the speed attained, under such weather conditions, had it not been for the surpassing stability gained by the very low center of gravity in the SAFETY STUTZ. In fact, it would have been necessary to call off the run except for this unusual stability.

Minimum Pit-Service

The car made the entire 24-hour run at terrific speed without once having a spark-plug changed, and without once having a wrench put to engine, clutch, or transmission.

Drivers Averaged 821.29 Miles Per Man

A team of two drivers manned the car throughout the entire 24 hours of day-and-night, high-speed, weather-handicapped running. Yet both drivers finished "fresh as a daisy". Neither driver was a racing champion.

Stutz Fatigueless Driving

The strain of such a driving ordeal would have required the use of a larger driving crew, with fewer hours of driving per man, excepting for the fact that the advanced engineering of the SAFETY STUTZ gives so much easier handling at all times.

The Farther the Faster

The condition of the car at the finish is accurately indicated by this fact: THE SPEED ATTAINED WAS GREATER DURING THE LAST THIRD OF THE RUN THAN DURING THE FIRST THIRD!

The Net of it All

The SAFETY STUTZ has proved itself to be:

1. The fastest fully-equipped all-stock car in America.
2. The safest automobile ever built anywhere; not a "fair-weather" car, but an all-weather car.
3. A car designed and built for the roughest work; not a ball-room floor automobile.
4. A car marvelously easy and sure in its handling, even under extreme conditions.
5. An automobile that, because of its top-speed abilities, is able to maintain ordinary road-speeds with delightful ease, and without stress or strain upon its mechanism. A stressed piece of machinery is a dangerous piece of machinery.
6. A car of the utmost mechanical reliability and freedom from adjustment; eclipsing automobiles of conventional type whose chief claim to preference has been an assumed superiority in this one respect.
7. Stutz advanced engineering now stands justified before the world as embodying a genuine and a truly important betterment in basic automobile design.

SPEED WORK ON FAIR AND BRIEF U. S. TAX LAWS

Congress to Get Reports in December.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—Revision of the revenue law to make it more intelligible as well as equitable is the goal of the joint congressional committee on internal revenue taxation.

Representative Allen T. Treadway [Rep., Mass.], one of its members, in summarizing the purpose in view, says that the committee hopes:

"First, to revise the revenue act in such a manner that it will be expressed in fewer words.

"Second, to simplify the act and Exercise of Discretion.

"Third, to revise those sections requiring the exercise of judgment in eliminate special and highly technical provisions, such a way that there will be more equity between the taxpayers without denying to the taxpayer a resonable exercise of discretion.

"Fourth, to clarify those provisions of the act which are indefinite and give rise to various interpretations.

"Fifth, to revise the administration provisions in such a way as to make possible greater decentralization, so as to reduce the expenses now borne by the taxpayer in handling tax matters."

Investigation Under Way.

Without attracting much public attention, the joint committee already has a far reaching investigation under way. The 1926 revenue law, which provided for the creation of the committee as a continuing body to investigate the operation and effects of the present taxing system, the administration of the law, and possible ways of simplifying income taxes, directed that a report should be made to congress not later than Dec. 31, 1927. So comprehensive is the program mapped out by the committee that it does not now expect to make more than a report of progress at that time.

The committee's complete recommendations probably will not be ready in time to be of use to the house ways and means committee, which is to commence hearings about Nov. 1 on a revision of the revenue law with a special view to a reduction in tax rates, at next winter's session of congress. The joint committee will not deal with rates, but is interested in the method of the application of the rates.

Jurisdiction Over Tax Bills.

Charles D. Hamel, former chairman of the board of tax appeals, has been installed as chief counsel and chief of the division of simplification of the joint committee. L. H. Parker is chief of its division of investigation. An advisory committee of outside experts includes Prof. Thomas S. Adams of Yale university, Dr. Thomas W. Page of Washington, former chairman of the tariff commission; A. A. Ballantine, George O. May, and George E. Holmes of New York, tax and legal authorities.

Representative Green [Rep., Ia.], chairman of the house ways and means committee, is chairman of the joint committee. Senator Smoot [Rep., Utah], chairman of the senate finance committee, also is on the joint committee, as are four others from each of these two standing committees, which have jurisdiction over revenue legislation.

Representative Treadway, in referring to the need of such action, pointed out that the revenue act of 1916 contained approximately fifty-two pages. The revenue act of 1917, largely in the nature of an amendment to the 1916 act, contained about forty-two pages. The revenue act of 1918, which included the excess profits tax, covered 105 pages.

Court Decisions in Laws.

"It was a case of patchwork on patchwork," said Mr. Treadway. "The wonder may be that the laws did not increase in length faster than they did.

"It is hoped that the income tax law, as finally revised, will be at least sufficiently equitable, practical, and simple that it may remain unchanged for a considerable period of years."

The occasion is the annual reunion of the Camp Houghteling association, boys' organizations connected with the Episcopal summer camp at Twin Lake, Mich.

Stolen Bank Safe Is Found Blasted, $7,000 Cash Gone

Coffeyville, Kas, May 14.—(AP)—The safe stolen early Thursday from the McCune State bank at McCune, Kas., was found early today, blown open and rifled, in Blue Canyon, about 20 miles east of here in Oklahoma. The safe contained about $7,000 in cash and about $200,000 in securities, most of them registered, when stolen.

N. U. PREPARES TO DEDICATE 14 SORORITY HOUSES

Woman's Campus in Evanston Nearly Finished.

Dreams of more than half a century are about to be realized by the alumnae and women students of Northwestern university. A woman's campus which challenges comparison with that of any other educational institution in the world is nearing completion on the tract of land extending from Sheridan road west to Sherman avenue, and from University place north to Emerson street.

Dedicatory plans are being made for the time when fourteen Gothic sorority houses will be turned over to the respective groups for occupancy with the opening of the next semester.

During the scores of years Northwestern has existed as a co-educational institution the girls have lived in approved boarding houses, with the exception of three buildings owned by the university.

Sororities Raise $25,000 Each.

Several years ago sorority and alumnae groups opened an active campaign for building funds with the hope of some day building an extensive women's campus. Last year fourteen of the sorority groups announced a fund of $25,000 each with which to start building operations.

The board of trustees of Northwestern donated the ground for the buildings, agreed to finance the remainder of the sum required to construct buildings costing on an average of $75,000 each, and also decided to build two open houses for nonsorority women.

The fourteen sorority houses are now receiving the final touches of interior trim.

The west half of the new campus is grouped with buildings erected by Alpha Phi, Kappa Delta, Delta Zeta, Alpha Gamma Delta, Chi Omega, and Alpha Xi Delta. East of Orrington avenue and west of Sheridan road stand the homes of Kappa Alpha Theta, Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Chi Omega, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Gamma Phi Beta, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Omicron Pi, and Delta Gamma. Construction is to start soon on the two open dormitories which will be jointed to the latter group.

Have All Modern Facilities.

Five of the new houses will accommodate 30 girls and the other nine provide for 24 in single and double rooms. The buildings are fireproof throughout.

A library is provided for each building, and many have a lounge for the use of alumnae members and guests.

University authorities are now hopeful that a contribution will make possible a woman's buildings facing east on Sheridan road, between University place and Emerson street. The proposed building, according to Mary Rose Potter, councilor of women, would provide headquarters for all women activities at Northwestern.

The revision of house rules is now in the hands of committees representing the Women's Self Government association.

Mrs. Della Wicks, 57, died at her home, 2800 Ellis avenue, yesterday of injuries received on Nov. 12, 1926, when she was thrown to the ground while leaving a street car at 28th street and Cottage Grove avenue.

FILIPINOS REBEL TO WIN THRONE FOR "EMPEROR"

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANILA, P. I., May 14.—A small revolution broke out yesterday morning in Negros Occidental province when several thousand followers of Flor Entrencherado, self styled emperor of Iloilo, by a preconcerted move seized the city halls of four towns and disarmed municipal police. One rebel leader was killed in the battle with constabulary at Victorias and another rebel was slain and one patrolman killed and five civilians wounded in the same town. At La Carlota the chief of police was killed.

Entrencherado's followers sought to kill all the government authorities and place the "emperor" on the throne of the province. After seizing the Victorias town hall the rebels held it against a three hour siege by the constabulary, who appear now to have dislodged them.

Constabulary detachments were rushed to Silay and Bago. It is reported they arrived in time to check further killings.

The uprsing is linked to the strike of several thousand laborers in the Bais sugar mill. The constabulary yesterday disarmed Representative Enrique Villaneuva, Filipino politician, who was instrumental in fomenting the strike.

Entrencherado recently was tried for sedition, but was adjudged insane and now is held at Iloilo pending his commital to an asylum.

Only 1 Moving Part

—One of the 3 big features of the SIMPLE Autopoint

HERE is the pencil that has captivated Big Business. That is used by thousands of firms to carry their advertising message as a good-will builder. That is standard equipment in countless firms where wooden pencils have been a large item of waste.

Autopoint is a unique pencil. Its simplicity is its chief claim on business men. But its beauty, its sturdy lightness are also major factors. There is but one moving part to Autopoint—hence it is the first no-jamming pencil.

You have had mechanical pencils that looked pretty . . . that claimed big things. But sooner or later they jammed, and after that it was useless. There simply is nothing to jam in the Autopoint—the simple mechanism is an entirely different principle.

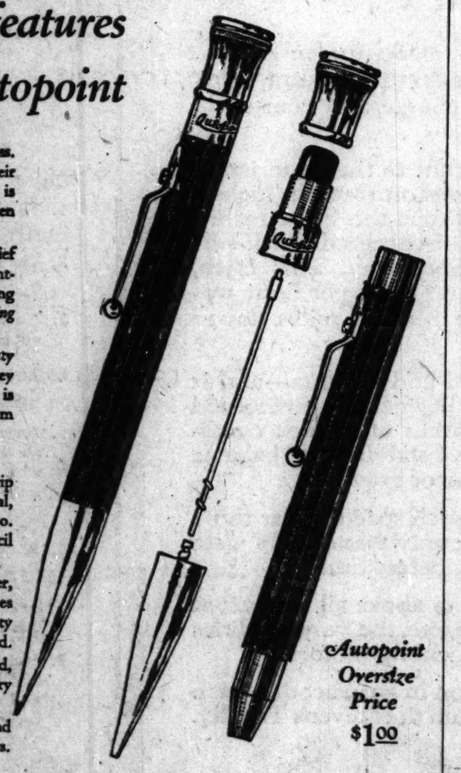
Autopoint Oversize is a new model. A big, easy-to-grip pencil—use it and it will win you. The balance is ideal, the "feel" so different. Autopoint Oversize is $1.00. Use it a week and if you don't find it a better pencil than you have ever owned, we'll refund your money.

All Autopoints, no matter which model you prefer, have three exclusive features—Bakelite barrel, which gives it strength and lightness, beauty and balance—simplicity of mechanism — and a guaranteed no-jamming feed.

Buy an Autopoint and know long, uninterrupted, trouble-free service. And a pencil you are proud to carry in your pocket.

See the wide range of Autopoints in many styles, and a wide variety of colors and finishes, at leading dealers. Or write us.



Autopoint Oversize Price $1.00

These 3 Points

No Jamming
① When lead is exhausted, the feeding mechanism goes into "neutral"—it does not jam. Jamming is what breaks ordinary mechanical pencils.

Bakelite Barrel
② The Bakelite Barrel—an unchanging, light-weight material. Most beautiful material ever used for pencils.

Simplest Mechanism
③ Only 1 moving part in the Autopoint. This is the simplest and smoothest working mechanism of any pencil. Nothing to go wrong.

CALLES SPURNS AID OF KLUX IN WAR ON CHURCH

Attacks Catholic Rule—Not the Creed.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Laredo, Tex., May 14.—Before going into Mexico and during my stay there I heard the following statements about President Calles from otherwise reputable persons:

"Calles is an Arab, a Syrian, and not a Mexican."

"Calles is a fanatic against the Roman Catholic church. He is a high degree Mason. He is a leading member of the Ku Klux Klan and is working with the American organization."

"Calles is a bolshevik. He gets his orders from Moscow. He is the American head of the Third International. He studied communism with Lenin and Trotsky in New York."

Honest Man or Crook?

"Calles is the only honest man in Mexico. He is the Messiah of the Mexican workingman."

"Calles is a crook. All he is doing is making millions, which he is investing in mines and in land in Sonora. He doesn't give a damn for the Mexican people."

Every man, Mexican and American, whom I met on the Texas border and in Mexico had a definite conviction about Calles.

These facts, however, are obvious: 1. Calles is the only dictator on the North American continent. 2. He is a fanatic against the Roman Catholic church of Mexico and seeks to destroy it utterly. 3. He is a fanatic for the dictatorship of labor.

A Catholic's Opinion.

Is President Calles a bolshevik? Here is the testimony of Peter W. Collins of Boston, a lecturer who recently made a tour of Texas and caused great interest in his talks on Mexico. Mr. Collins, lecturing under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, said: "Calles is a red dictator who desires to subjugate Mexico to soviet rule. The present constitution of Mexico is taken from the bible of communism, written by Karl Marx."

Mr. X., one of the leading American bankers of Mexico City, said, "Calles is a bolshevik. This country is absolutely bolshevistic. It is like Russia."

Like Mussolini or Horthy.

If bolshevism means dictatorship by one man or one minority group then Calles is a bolshevik, and so are Mussolini and Admiral Horthy and half a dozen others. If bolshevism means dictatorship by one man or one minority group with a certain definite program based on Marxian doctrines, then neither Mussolini nor Calles are bolsheviks.

Russia produced bolshevism, but the present system is being called Leninism. Italy produces fascism, but the present system is becoming so different that leaders call it Mussolinism. And Mexico is producing something which has no name, but which might be called Callesism.

The soviets smash liberty of the press, public assembly, political action, free speech. Mussolini smashes liberty of the press, public assembly, political action, and free speech. Now comes Calles and smashes liberty of the press, public assembly, political action, and free speech. Only Calles is not half as strong as his guiding stars and does things only half way.

Calles' radicalism is directed chiefly against the Roman Catholic church, because he blames the church for everything that has been wrong in Mexico. In a pamphlet published in the United States the present Mexican régime states first of all that the church of Mexico is no more like the Catholic church in the United States than Mohammedanism is Christianity. It blames the church for participating in every rebellion and war since the time of Cortes. It accuses the church of everything, including slavery, peonage, ignorance, illiteracy of the masses, and the lack of civilization.

Shuns Aid of Kluxers.

Calles has had offers of help from the Ku Klux Klan of the United States and has refused. The Ku Kluxers, however, opened up headquarters in Mexico City. One day the leading newspaper, Excelsior, published a satirical attack on them, saying that Mexicans could not join because of the high cost of white sheets. The Kluxers sent a death threat to the editor. He attacked them again.

The Kluxers marched on the Excelsior office. Every editor and reporter went to the window and began a fusillade. The leader and two followers of the Klux idea fell dead. The K. K. K. organization, which thought Mexico, owing to its anti-Catholic campaign, was ripe for them, went out of business. Followers of Calles refuse to have anything to do with the K. K. K. They have nothing against the Catholic church of the United States or Europe, they say, and they even draw a line between the church which has the white Spanish educated following in Mexico and what they term the Pagan-Astec-Catholic church, which the Astec and Toltec and Maya Indian masses of Mexico worship today.

Kills Two Officers

Walter Chrisman of Sioux Falls, S. D., who last Friday shot and killed Charles Bintliff, dry agent, and Charles Chaplin, deputy sheriff, and then took his own life as posse closed in on him. The officers were seeking to arrest Chrisman for shooting R. W. Labrie, another dry agent.

Woman Accidentally Killed in Police-Bandit Battle

New York, May 14.—[Special.]—Mrs. Annie Coombs, 48, was shot and killed tonight when she walked into a pistol battle between a patrolman and two thieves at 9th avenue and 29th street. The patrolman, Peter Pfeiffer, and John Mavajosky, a passerby who joined in the chase of the bandits, were wounded, Mavajosky seriously. The bandits escaped.

SACASA DOUBTS U. S.-MADE PEACE FOR NICARAGUA

PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, May 14.—Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, Liberal rebel leader and claimant to the presidency of Nicaragua, has issued a statement regarding the action of Henry L. Stimson, President Coolidge's representative, to bring about peace in Nicaragua.

"There is much doubt," he says, "that the Nicaraguan people can react enough to trust the assurances of justice and neutrality offered by the American government after the obvious partiality shown in favoring the predominance of conservatives to the extreme and refusing to sponsor any solution which would be absolutely impartial.

"Our determination to stand aloof from the government of Adolfo Diaz remains unchanged because national dignity demands it, notwithstanding the immense power exerted by the United States to impose Senor Diaz upon Nicaragua."

HOGAN'S FLOP IS RAIDED; ARREST 1, SEIZE 225 PINTS

Hogan's Flop, long famed in the West Madison street district, was the scene of a raid yesterday by prohibition agents, who seized 225 pints of moonshine and arrested Harry Gold. Hogan's place is at 18 South Des Plaines street.

Martin Tricola was arrested by enforcement officers in his soft drink parlor at 6435 South State street. Ten gallons of alcohol, four gallons of spirits, and five barrels of beer were found.

Lawrence Byrne, owner, and J. C. Fleming, bartender, were arrested in a raid on a saloon at 6606 South State street. Agents confiscated a quantity of wine and beer.

Anthony Ratti was arrested after dry agents had found a quantity of moonshine in his saloon at 807 West Monroe street. Police seized Joseph Kasper and Simon Liss when an automobile in which they were riding was found to contain ten gallons of alcohol.

CUBS' RALLY BEATS BRAVES IN 18TH, 7-2

90,000 CROWD INTO DOWNS TO SEE KENTUCKY CLASSIC

TREK TO TRACK STARTS EARLY IN MORNING

Great Throng Sees Great Race.

BY DON MAXWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., May 14.—Two hours before noon they started, these ninety thousand people, to old Churchill Downs, where the grand stand towers look like steeples of a New England church, and where the 53d Kentucky Derby was to be run. The sun was shining, balmy wind sending puffs of cloud skimming across the sky. They jammed the little yellow street cars, the taxis and the sidewalks. Wealthier people had their luncheons in the clubhouse. Thousands picnicked on the lawns. Back of the course, an army parked its automobiles, in what seemed acres of space, a field of black with sunbeams darting off nickeled headlights.

All afternoon that crowd had been growing. Turnstiles clicking grew monotonous as the lawns, the grand stands and clubhouse became more and more crowded. It was futile trying to squeeze between those ever moving lines of people. Lanes in front of the windows where tickets are bought on a horses' chance and reclaimed if it was good, were sometimes fifty deep.

Excitement Grows Keener.

When the time drew near for fifteen three year olds to parade to the post, to run for one of the richest pots of gold the west provides for a horse race, the undercurrent of excitement that had been steadily increasing, reached a new and higher pitch.

Some had made their Derby bets early in the day, but most of that 90,000 had waited for the last word, the last hot tip, the last notice of odds, the last reflection. They trooped down from the boxes and the grand stands, deserted their posts of vantage along the rail, and stood impatient, talking excitedly, hailing this fellow and that, and the question every one was asking: "Who do you like?" "What's your latest dope?"

Some liked Whitney's chances because of his Preakness victory. Kentuckians bet the bank roll on Rolled Stocking, the pride of the natives. Some talked about Bradley. "He's always got good horses," you heard, "and 15 to 1 looks pretty good. Guess it will be the colonel and those Johnson boys, Goldie and Arthur, for me."

Looking for Al.

One gentleman from Chicago, who's not been paying much attention to race horses these last twenty years, has been too busy making a living, rushed awkwardly about hunting for his friend Al. Al knows the newspaper boys and he promised to have the honest to goodness real thing just before post time. But finding Al is a bit difficult. If the gentleman stood at one place he was jostled from one foot to another. If he moved about he was caught in currents he couldn't stem.

An oldish lady stylishly dressed moved serenely to the $20 window to place a bet on Rolled Stocking. "All the girls are doing it now," she laughed, and "they're winners."

A horn toots a warning that it's almost time to close those windows where cash is exchanged for little slips of pasteboard and the scramble gets wilder. Another toot of that horn announced the presence of the horses on the track and the last chance to win on the Derby was gone.

Slowly the fifteen horses, coats shining, marched out to the track. The crowd rushed to the rails, standing on ice cream freezers and boxes purloined from the refreshment stands.

"They're Off!" Crowd Goes Mad.

At last the barrier is sprung and the race is on. Shouting that has been suppressed is released and from the moment those 15 thoroughbreds spring away in the first mad leap at the post until the horses, coming galloping around the head of the stretch for the dash that means victory or defeat, that shouting continues. Women shout to Sande to keep Osmand going. Men pound each other on the back and plead for their horses to come up. Two minutes and six seconds after the start Whiskery has flashed past the finish wire. The crowd settles back. It has seen the Derby.

Yet there are ceremonies of triumph to come. Whiskery is cantered back to the judges' stand and the rose twined horseshoe that betokens the Derby winner is hung about his neck.

Mayor William Hale Thompson makes a speech, the jockey bows, Whiskery paws at the ground and some of the crowd cheer. But not many. The ones who have won are pushing and pulling their way through the throng to get in line at the payoff windows.

From Few to Thousands.

Back in 1875, when the first Derby was run for a few hundred Kentucky gentlemen, peers of the blue grass came riding into Louisville in buggies, carriages, and other horse drawn equipages. They wagered a few dollars and some collected from their friends when that little red horse, Aristides, won. It was a Kentucky race, almost a neighborhood affair. Today this crowd of 90,000 came from every part of the country. Some came in private cars, some in limousines, and some by steamboat. They spent

McAtee Beats Back to Win Best Victory

BY FRENCH LANE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., May 14.—An old quarrel had to be patched up and past differences had to be forgotten before Linus McAtee, a scrawny, little, dark complexioned man from Baltimore, would come here to ride Harry Payne Whitney's Whiskery to victory in the Kentucky Derby this afternoon.

Last year, when the Whitney horses were running to a new high money winning record on the American turf, it was Jockey McAtee who piloted most of them to victory. But toward the end of the season, when he was nearly wrecked physically, with his brilliant career in the saddle threatened, there came a break between McAtee and Whitney. McAtee announced he was through riding for the New York sportsman.

From the Whitney quarters there came no comment. McAtee was silent. He went away into the country to regain his health. There were rumors of a serious quarrel between McAtee and Whitney but no facts to base them on.

Finally McAtee came back to his former turf haunts. He told for the first time why he had turned his back to a job with what many regarded as the leading racing stable in the world.

"It wasn't anything that Mr. Whitney did that caused me to quit," McAtee said. "But I was having trouble making the riding weight and it was about all I could do to make this weight and retain the strength I needed for my riding engagements.

"But Mr. Whitney's trainers did not seem to realize this. I was asked to gallop horse after horse every morning during the training hour. It took most of my strength away from me. I had no strength left to ride with during the afternoon. My riding became bad. We lost races which it seemed that we should have won. I was riding the best horses but couldn't win with them and I was blamed for the defeats. But I was still asked to gallop horses every morning. It was either quit Whitney or become a bum rider. I quit Whitney."

From that day until the Derby was run this afternoon McAtee had never sported the light blue, white and brown silks of Whitney. He rode against Whitney and often beat him. And according to McAtee it was the luck of racing which made it possible for him to ride his first Derby winner today.

Clarence Kummer had been engaged to ride Whiskery in the Preakness and Derby. But the day after the Preakness was run he was suspended at Pimlico because of rough riding. This made it impossible for him to come on to Churchill Downs and ride in the Derby.

Whitney turned to his former rider, McAtee. He made him an offer which McAtee said was a surprise to him, to ride Whiskery in the Derby, and McAtee accepted it.

For his two minutes and six seconds work McAtee will likely receive a fee of $10,000, Trainer Fred Hopkins, who saddled the winner and who is not much older than McAtee, said this afternoon. However, due to Mr. Whitney's illness, McAtee will not receive his Derby riding fee until early next week in New York.

"I am sorry for Kummer, for I think he might have won on Whiskery today," McAtee said. "Whiskery is a nice horse but sluggish, and I had to give him a lot of hard riding to get him up and nab Osmand, but I think Kummer could have won it as well as I did. I might have been better acquainted with Whiskery, for I rode him in most of his races last season. Never at any time did he show distress today. When we were back in fifth and sixth positions he let me know we could go up and take hold of the leaders whenever I called on him.

"But the stubborn battle Osmand and Sande gave us was a surprise. I think it was Sande more than Osmand that made us put everything we had into the stretch run to win in the last jump. Sande never rode harder in his life. It was Earl more than Osmand that made Whiskery extend himself to his last ounce of speed and courage."

McAtee is 29 years old and a veteran of the saddle. He resides at Baltimore, is married and is the father of a baby girl. His father died several years ago and McAtee supports his mother who also lives in Baltimore. Except for an occasional stake engagement in the west, McAtee's riding has all been done in New York and Maryland.

Trainer Hopkins, a short, slender young man who formerly was a jockey and who rode many of Whitney's horses several years ago, is one of four trainers which handle the New Yorker's horses. James Rowe Sr., is the head trainer. Early last spring, Rowe sent Whiskery, Bostonian and other Whitney horses to the Benning track on the outskirts of Washington, D. C., to be trained for the early spring engagements, including the Preakness and Derby. He put Hopkins in charge of them and the young trainer did so well that Rowe sent him on to the Derby.

The veteran, Rowe, came on from the east, but except to direct the final preparations, left it up to Hopkins to send the Whitney colts into the Derby. Jimmy Rowe Sr., 70 years old, who probably has saddled the winners of more rich stakes than any other trainer in America, watched the race from the infield. But he kept in the background and let his young assistant get the glory when the Derby glory was passed around.

KING OF THE TURF

Whiskery, winner of the Kentucky Derby, the most coveted of all turf honors. The game colt of H. P. Whitney negotiated the mile and a quarter distance in 2:06 under a sensational ride by Jockey L. McAtee and rewarded his owner with a $51,550 purse. Whiskery was away sixth at the start, entered the stretch third, and conquered Osmand and Jock in a thrilling finish. His margin over Osmand was a neck. This picture was taken immediately after the race and rushed to The Tribune by airplane. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Winter Books Win on Derby; One $50,000

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., May 14.—With but one exception the big future books on the Kentucky Derby finished on the winning side as a result of Whiskery's victory this afternoon.

The book to lose money according to reports here tonight was the one conducted by Emil Herz of New York and Lexington. The loss according to reports were $20,000 on a handle of nearly $100,000. It wasn't Whiskery's victory so much that hit them as it was the place and show money on Osmand.

The Dexter club, the largest book operated in the west probably won $50,000. It handled about the same amount of money as the Herz book. Joe Gleason and Henry Finnegan who operated the big Chicago book, announced tonight they had lost but one bet of any size on Whiskery, while there was little money wagered with them on Osmand to place and Jock to show. But the book, according to Gleason, would have been a heavy loser had Osmand won.

Tom Shaw of New York, Ed Alvey of Cincinnati and others who booked to the Derby throughout the winter and spring are reported to have all been winner as a result of the finish.

TILDEN, HUNTER WIN MATCHES WITH BELGIANS

BRUSSELS, May 14.—(AP)—William T. Tilden and Francis T. Hunter, American tennis stars, took the lead in their international matches with the Belgians today by defeating Washer and Botsford in the doubles, 7-5, 8-6, 6-4. Yesterday's singles were divided, Tilden winning from Eubank and Hunter losing to Washer.

Tilden, who is rounding into superb form, played the best tennis today he has shown since coming here.

Stable Groom Saves Whiskery from Accident

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., May 14.—Norman Richardson, head groom of the Whitney stables, was congratulating himself tonight on having formed the habit of sticking close to his job. Had he not, Whiskery might not have won the Derby.

About 11:30 this morning, Richardson says, he was shaving in his room, adjacent to the horse's stall, when he heard a commotion and, with the lather still on his face, rushed in to see what was happening. Whiskery had gotten down in the stall and was scrambling, having kicked loose the latch which holds the door of the stall shut. Just as Whiskery's foot would have been caught in the crack thus opened Richardson arrived and held the door shut with his foot.

"Had I not been where I could run in when I heard the noise, Whiskery might have injured one of his feet so that it would have been impossible to have run him in the Derby."

Ohio State Wins Track Games at Northwestern

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Ohio State, coached by Frank Castleman, won the fourth annual quadrangular outdoor track and field games yesterday in the Dyche stadium of Northwestern university by one point. Wisconsin was second, Northwestern third, and Chicago fourth.

The meet, in which five records were broken despite unfavorable weather conditions, was brought to a dramatic close by the performance of Ken Crooks of the Buckeye team. It was his effort that enabled Ohio State to win.

The running broad jump was the last event to be decided. Wisconsin was leading the meet, 55 to 50. Ohio State had to take first and second places in the broad jump to win.

Crooks Makes Good in Pinch.

Kriss of Ohio State led until the final round with Zilisch of Wisconsin in second place and Crooks, third. It then was up to Crooks on his final effort to beat out the Badger athlete. He was equal to the task and in that last jump not only made a leap good enough to win the event but his five points gave Ohio State victory by one point.

From the start of the program of sixteen events it was an evenly fought battle, with Northwestern being a contender most of the way. The Purple counted heavily in the field events, but lacked speed on the cinder path. After Northwestern had been eliminated as a contender Wisconsin and Ohio State alternated in taking the lead until the Badgers went ahead by winning the one mile relay.

The outstanding athlete was Elnor Hermansen, the former C. A. A. sprinter, who is attending Northwestern university. He won the 100 and 220 yard dashes, smashing the meet records in both events.

Dougan Clips 440 Mark.

Dougan of Wisconsin, one of the best quarter milers in the middle west, took the quarter mile run in :50 4-10, which bettered the old mark made by Kennedy of Wisconsin last year by one-tenth of a second. The Badger led Capt. Bevan of Ohio State over the line by a comfortable margin.

Last Held Here in 1923.

Chicago has seen no Davis cup tennis since 1923, when Japan and Australia clashed in the interzone finals at the old South Side Tennis club. This year's matches probably will feature Japan and France. With Australia still absent from the competition, the little island empire, represented by Takeichi Harada and Tiezo Toba, appears to be by far the strongest entry in the American zone.

France, represented by a quartet of the greatest players in the world, is regarded as a sure winner in the European zone and many experts pick the tricolor stars to carry the Davis cup from American shores in the challenge round against the United States defenders at the Germantown Cricket club, Philadelphia, in September. The French players are Rene Lacoste, Jean Barotra, Henri Cochet, and Jacques Brugnon.

U. S. Intersectional Meet Deferred.

The Chicago committee named to handle the matches includes J. C. Stewart, Harry Knox, Leo Lunn, Walter Hayes, William Krahl, Harry Preussing, R. C. Rettgi, and Harry Walsh.

The dates awarded the matches here have forced the postponement of the United States intersectional team matches until Sept. 22 at the Town and Tennis club.

WIDE RACES TO WORLD'S RECORD IN MILE, QUARTER

Houston, Tex., May 14.—(AP)—Edvin Wide, famous Swedish athlete, lowered the world's record for the mile and a quarter run here this afternoon when he traveled the distance in 5 minutes 31.1 seconds. He clipped 3:9 second off the former mark.

Wide raced against time, holding a perfect stride from the very start and although the midsummer day handicapped the conqueror of Paavo Nurmi, he was comparatively fresh at the finish.

His race was the feature event of the southwestern conference track and field meet which was won by Texas

Man Dies as Stands Crash at Phils' Park

Philadelphia, Pa., May 14.—(AP)—One man was trampled to death and more than fifty were injured today when part of the flooring on the first base side of the lower grandstand of the Philadelphia National league baseball park collapsed.

The accident occurred in the first half of the seventh inning while St. Louis was at bat. The collapse threw the crowd into a panic and it swarmed on the field, forcing the umpires to end the game with the score 12 to 3 in favor of Philadelphia.

Floor Sags, Then Crashes.

The collapse threw 300 persons from their seats into a huddle of struggling humanity. The floor did not fall to the ground, 10 to 15 feet below, but sagged, throwing the spectators into a mass. Later it broke open and many fell through to the ground.

The man killed, who was not immediately identified, was at first believed to have died from heart disease as he showed no apparent injuries. An examination at a hospital, however, caused doctors to express the opinion that he was trampled to death.

Rush 50 to Hospitals.

Ambulances from half a dozen hospitals in north Philadelphia were instantly summoned and nearly 50 persons were taken to the institutions. Tonight less than a dozen remained for treatment, all others having been discharged. More than two score were treated by physicians at the ball park. Many others who were slightly hurt went to their homes for treatment.

The collapse is believed to have been due to the weakening of the supports when the crowd stamped their feet and jumped up and down in Philadelphia's half of the sixth inning when the home team scored 8 runs in a batting rally. Score:

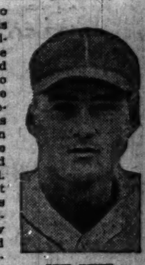
BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., May 14.—Charles Robertson, the cunning Texan, who was supposed to have brought his big league usefulness to a close when he hurled the White Sox to a perfect game victory over Detroit four years ago, rose up in front of the Cubs today and trouble followed.

Although it by his arm was "crooked" at the elbow and that he had practically nothing on the ball but amazing control, "No Hit Charley," as he once was known, stood out in the clammy, codfish atmosphere of cultured Boston and fought a gruelling battle with Guy Bush, whose pitching years are ahead of him and not behind.



GUY BUSH.

Finally the break came. The cunning of Robertson's noodle could no longer stave off the power of the Cub attack and the old timer was forced to retreat in a fight that waged through eighteen stirring rounds to end with the Braves on the losing end of a 7 to 2 score.

Cubs First to Score.

It all started just like any old ball game. The Cubs scored once in the first half. The Braves scored once in the fourth. Then the fight began to take the form of something that was not going to be easily disposed of. Round after round went rolling by with both pitchers dominating the situation. The ninth was reached with no break in the 1 to 1 deadlock. The tenth passed similarly, and the Cubs tore loose in the eleventh to score a run that seemed amply sufficient for their purposes. But it wasn't! The Braves popped right back with a run in their half and that's the way the struggle went until the Cubs crashed through the barrier in the eighteenth.

The eighteenth started with Clyde Beck the first man up. He had come into the game as third sacker in the eighth inning and it probably was lucky that he did, because he fielded brilliantly in a couple of bad spots. His contribution in what proved the final chapter was a single that High couldn't handle at third. Then Bush filed out and the wreckers came up for action.

Adams, who already had made three hits, slashed his fourth single to right and Beck raced to third. Cooney singled past Barrus and Beck scored. Webb drove a liner over the right fielder's head for two bases and Adams tallied. The blow ended Robertson. He strolled off the field and Foster Edwards, ex-Dartmouth collegian, took his place. It proved a poor substitution for the Braves. Wilson was purposely passed, filling the bases. Then Cooney scored on a wild pitch and Stephenson completed the rout by driving in his two other mates with a single.

Webb Drives in First Run.

The Cubs started strongly against Robertson in the first inning because Adams and Webb combined hits. Sparky led off with a single singles. They just could not hit the ball squarely.

Bush was almost as good in those first ten rounds. The Braves could figure him for only six hits, four of which were so widely scattered that they were harmless. The two others were paired with a pass in the fourth and gave Boston its first run. Bancroft walked to start the inning and Smith sacrificed. High was retired, but Burrus clouted a single to left and Bancroft ran home to knot the count. Brown also singled, putting Burrus on third, but Bush nailed Gautreau to end the session.

Wilson Scores Adams.

When the Cubs scored in the eleventh it was with the same Adams and Webb combination with a little assistance from Hack Wilson. Adams pried open the inning with a single and Cooney sacrificed. Webb put Adams on third with a hit that Gautreau was able to knock down but not throw. Then Wilson hammered the first pitch to left center and Adams scored while Webb went to third. More might have followed, but Hack was nailed trying to hike to second on the throw in.

It was a pass that led the Braves to tie it again in their half. After Bancroft had fanned, Smith drew a walk and High pulled the ball down the first base line for a triple, Smith scoring. With only one out and a man on third it seemed the Braves would end it with another tally, but they were foiled by some amazing strategy on the part of Manager McCarthy. He ordered that both Burrus and Welsh be passed, filling the bases and increasing the chances for a double play. The double play didn't come, but the result was the same because Gautreau popped to Grimm and Taylor lined into Beck's hand at third. After this Bush seemed to get better.

Flasks, Noise, Tips, Bets and Crowds—That's the Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 14.—[Special.]—On one of the special trains from Chicago every member of the party carried to the track what appeared to be a small pocket camera. It was noted, however, that these cameras were sighted at an unusual elevation. In fact, the mouth was applied to the camera in taking a picture, leading to the suspicion it might be just another violation of the Volstead law.

Mayor William Hale Thompson exchanged greetings with Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York. Big Bill was the guest of Col. M. J. Winn of the Jockey club after the races. Despite his admonition to throw away the hammer, he supported Rip Rap.

Track officials estimated the attendanace as 10,000 greater than last year. The early figures were based on the increased number of programs. The accessions were most in the clubhouse section, which would have been swamped if it had not been enlarged.

Special booths which sold mutuel tickets on the Derby only were in operation from the time the main portion of the crowd arrived at the track around 1 o'clock. Many persons bought their tickets before going to their boxes and did not again mill through the crowd.

Comment was general after the race that the big eastern money which so often in the past has lowered the price of Whitney entries and other favorites did not appear this year. Otherwise Whiskery would not have paid so liberal a price.

Most of the 90,000 spectators who are not Louisville residents left town tonight on special trains and augmented railroad service. All depots were congested with passengers trying to locate their trains. Those remaining over night leave by train and motor tomorrow.

John Sullivan, Louisiana lawyer and associate with E. R. Bradley in the ownership of the Fair Grounds Race track, was the guest of his partner. He bet on the Bradley entry, he said, on the theory that friends ought to stick together.

H. D. Brown, California capitalist, who recent obtained an option on part of the stock of the Homewood race track and then released it to Matt Winn and associates, when it became evident that Brown could not get full control of the track, was a box holder. He had a party of Chicagoans as guests.

The weather was unusually fickle. Several times the sky clouded up and a few drops of rain fell and the crowd seized newspapers to serve as umbrellas; but the rain that they feared never came.

The majority of the Derby fans who remained last night in the downtown hotels came to the races today with drooping eyelids. Bottles crashing down courtways, cowbells that jangled loudly enough to be heard for blocks and gentlemen who wanted to cheer, made sleep impossible.

One gentleman at the Brown broke all existing records for the carrying power of the human voice, and every time he yelled announced that he attended no college but was yelling purely and loudly for Terre Haute, Ind.

Whiskery was a better horse than Osmand today, Jockey Earl Sande said after the race. "As far as I could see it was a truly run race. There wasn't any interference and very little crowding among the leaders. Before we had gone a mile, I could see and hear Whiskery pounding along on the outside behind us. I knew he was the horse we had to beat. Osmand really did better than I expected. He's a good, game horse after all."

Whiskery and Bostonian, as a result of their victories both in the Derby and the Preakness, have won a little more than $100,000 for the eastern millionaire in less than one week. Eastern experts say Valorous, another 3 year old owned by Whitney, but which was not shipped west for the Derby, can beat either Whiskery or Bostonian.

The experts were shaking their heads over the race last night and agreeing that the class of the horses wasn't all that it should be, but an expert is seldom satisfied.

A number of Chicagoans came down wearing white felt hats with ribbons reading Fred Jr. and My Son. Those were two Chicago owned Derby entries. My Son was scratched and Fred Jr., eighth.

their money recklessly, paying three times the normal price for food and lodging. And they bet not hundreds, but more than $2,000,000 on the Derby day program.

Millionaires, politicians, society leaders, and the rest of us brushed sleeves, bet together and lost together. Fortunes were won and thousands were lost. Blue blooded horses raced and the crowd cheered and that was the Derby.

MOVIE DAREDEVIL ENTERS 500 MILE SPEEDWAY TEST

Indianapolis, Ind., May 14.—[Special.]—Cliff Bergere, a Frenchman with a Boston accent, a blonde mustache as pointed as the ends of Tex Rickard's conversation and with nearly four years of daredevil performances in the movies behind him, has entered and will drive a Miller Special in the fifteenth international 500 mile race to be held at the Indianapolis motor speedway May 30.

He has been driving on the dusty paths for eight years, but except for practice laps on board bowls this is his debut in the major league of castor oil and high powered gas.

After doubling for famous motion picture stars in their hazardous feats of jumping off buildings, changing from motor boats and open automobiles to airplanes and vice versa, and seeing them get the plaudits, Bergere, who was born in New York but seasoned in Hollywood, has decided to branch out for thrills and cheers under his natal monicker.

WHISKERY NOSES OUT OSMAND TO CAPTURE DERBY

the start by those in the middle of the track but none suffered seriously.

Jock, on the rail, at once moved to the front, Sande hustled Osmand along from his No. 12 post position in the wake of the leader and Coltiletti on Scapa Flow joined in the hunt. As they went by the stand and around the first turn, Jock, owned by E. B. McLean, Washington publisher, was five lengths in front, with Osmand second, Scapa Flow a length behind Osmand and a head before Rolled Stocking with Whiskery lapped.

Bostonian and Buddy Bauer were in the second flight behind the pace which carried the field to the half mile post in :47 1-5.

When three quarters of the journey had been finished, Jock still maintained his margin of five open lengths of daylight. Osmand was second three lengths before Whiskery, which had displaced Scapa Flow, which was having difficulty holding his position. Rolled Stockings also was beginning to act as if the task was too great. Buddy Bauer, however, gave temporary gratification to the Bradley adherents by assuming fifth place.

Jock Begins to Tire.

Six furlongs had been run in 1:12 2-5. Coming around the home turn with the finish line only a quarter of a mile away, Jock was tiring, while Sande was making his challenge with Osmand, and Jockey McAtee with Whiskery was watching this pair and trying to match every move.

Hydromel and Buddy Bauer were close enough to be dangerous, but only the known stretch runners among the others had even a remote chance at this stage. In this class was Bostonian, Preakness winner.

As the leaders sped along the spectator lined rails with now only a furlong to go Osmand assumed command, a head before Jock. It looked as if Sande would ride his third Derby winner within five years on a colt which most experts had pronounced only a sprinter, not good for more than a mile. Whiskery, however, was only a half length behind and coming strongly on the outside. Hydromel was fourth, Buddy Bauer fifth, and Bostonion sixth.

From this point, it was only a question between Osmand and Whiskery. Jock was beaten and dropping back from the leading pair, but hanging on gamely enough to keep in front of the others. What a finish it was! One long to be remembered by those 90,000 spectators.

Whiskery Comes Through.

Sande was giving everything he had and getting every once out of Osmand, using his whip to urge his charge. But Whiskery in a determined challenge moved up to even terms, then poked a nose in front, and then they ran stride for stride until they passed before the judges at the imaginary wire marking the finish with Whiskery a head before his gallant rival.

Harry Payne Whitney's long ambition had been gratified, even if he did not witness the race in person.

Victory of no eastern owner could have been more popular in Kentucky than that of Mr. Whitney.

The name Whitney long has stood high in American turf history. W. C. Whitney, New York financier, was a pillar of the turf when racing first came in prominence in New York and lent his name and social prestige to the jockey club. Harry Payne Whitney has carried on the tradition and maintains extensive breeding farms at both Lexington and Red Bank, N. J.

Breeds Horses He Races.

Whitney breeds the horses that he races. He seldom sells any. So extensive is his string that he employs four trainers for different divisions.

Winner—Br. c. by Whisk Broom II.—Prudery, by Peter Pan (trained by F. Hopkins; bred by Mr. Harry Payne Whitney).

Went to post at 5:09. At post, 2 minutes.

Start good and slow. Won driving; second and third the same.

WHISKERY moved up steadily, though racing a trifle wide and, holding on gamely, wore down OSMAND in the last sixteenth. OSMAND, always well up for the entire distance, held on much gamer than expected in the final drive. JOCK began fast, showed high speed, but tired in the last eighth. HYDROMEL showed a fine performance and continued gamely in the stretch. BOSTONIAN was far out of it for a half mile and closed a big gap. BUDDY BAUER also closed a big gap from a slow beginning. FRED JR. began slowly and finished well, closing a big gap in the last half mile. SCAPA FLOW was done after a half mile. RIP RAP raced far out of it for most of the way.

Scratched: 13095 Saxon, 126; 11107 My Son, 126; 13104 Mr. Kirkwood, 126.

Last year he topped the owners' list in amount of money won. It was $407,139. Those familiar with the expenses of a racing stable doubt whether there was much real profit after deducting all costs.

In addition to Whiskery which won the Derby today and Bostonian which finished fifth, Mr. Whitney also has Valorous, which won the Kentucky Jockey club stakes at Louisville last fall and generally was regarded as the best of his 1926 juveniles. Valorous was not shipped west for the Derby but reserved for eastern stakes when Whiskery and Bostonian showed so well.

BALBOA WINS BY NOSE IN AURORA HANDICAP RACE

Outlasts Florence Mills in Stretch Duel.

Aurora, Ill., May 14.—[Special.]—The Homewood handicap featured yesterday's offering staged by the Exposition Jockey club at the Aurora course. A high class field contested the issue and one of the closest finishes witnessed at the meeting was the result.

Balboa, ridden by Jockey W. Dellow, and the most fancied of the field, after the withdrawal of Sun Altos from the race, was returned the winner by a nose over Florence Mills, with Devon in third place. Ten starters accepted conditions, and of the others, only Capt. Donan, Dimple Dunkle, and Golen Mac figured prominently in the running of the race.

Balboa takes the Outside.

Florence Mills showed the most speed from soon after the start and, in creasing her advantage as the race progressed, she was at one stage eight lengths in advance of her nearest rival.

Balboa raced back of the leaders in sixth position and was hard restrained to the lower turn. Coming around the turn into the homestretch Florence Mills, far in the lead, appeared the winner, but suddenly at this stage Balboa made a rush around the outside and, coming with his customary burst of speed, steadily wore the tiring leader down all during the stretch and got up just at the end to take the decision by a nose.

One of the greatest crowds of the meeting was on hand for the sport despite cold weather and uninviting conditions.

Chaff Wins Secondary.

Followers of form fared poorly, favorites going down to defeat in most instances. The Promenade purse, for 2 year olds, one of the supporting features, furnished a thrilling contest. Aromatic had the early speed and was in the lead rounding the lower turn. Dreana Lee took the outside and swept into the lead, which she held to the stretch. Bill Seth managed to overhaul the leaders. Catching Aromatic and Elevate an eighth out, he moved to the front in the last fifty yards and was a driving winner by a length over Elevate, in second place, while Aromatic outgamed the tiring Dreana Lee for third place. It was Bill Seth's third straight victory.

The Dearborn stable's Chaff won the secondary feature, the Naperville purse. This filly took Prince Ronald, Shasta Gold, and eight other classy sprinters into camp handily.

NEW SO. WALES BEATS CHINESE SOCCER TEAM, 6-3

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SYDNEY, May 14.—The Chinese soccer football team played its first match against New South Wales today, losing six goals to three.

Prof. Kwong, manager of the team, said the fact the Chinese team was visiting Australia was evidence that the relations between Great Britain and China are not so hopeless as some people believe.

Prof. Kwong is a professor at Chitse university and a lecturer at the Shanghai College of Commerce.

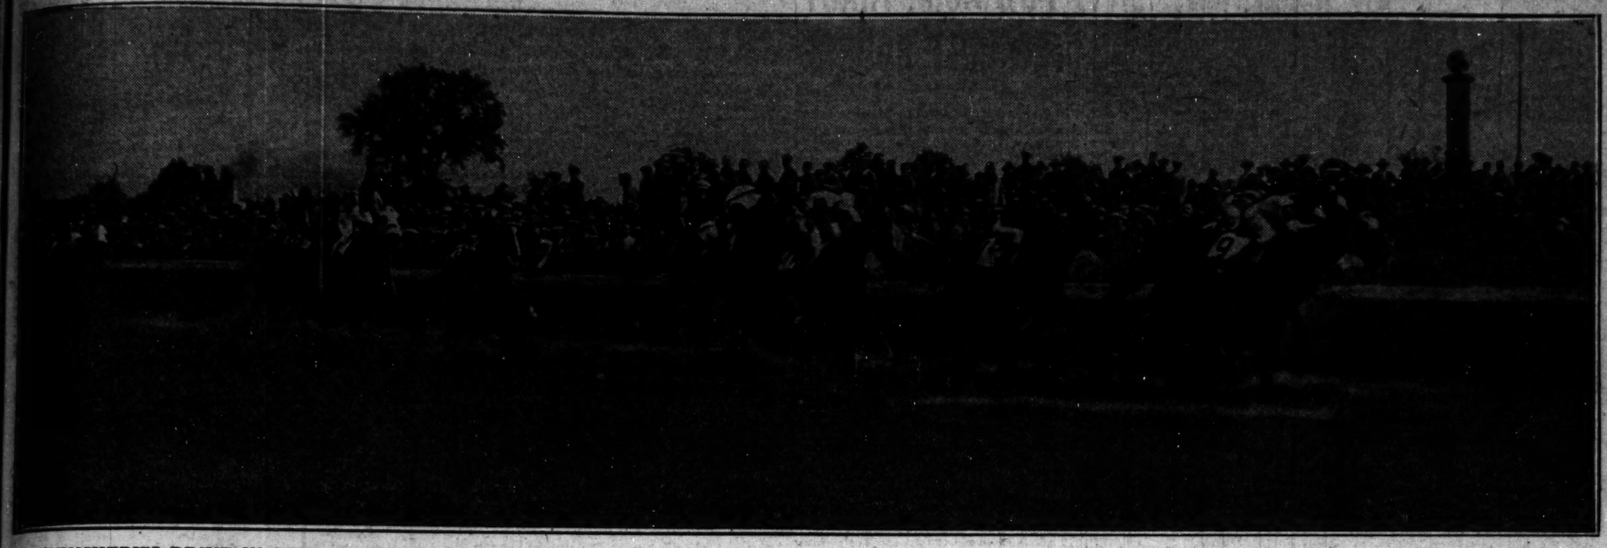
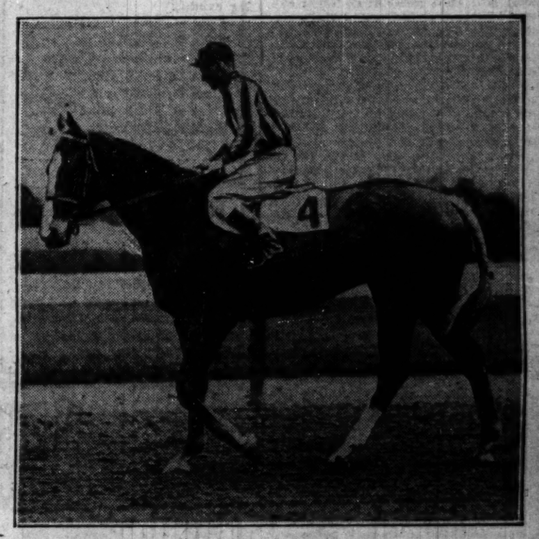
90,000 Pack Churchill Downs to See Whitney's Whiskery Win Fifty-third Kentucky Derby



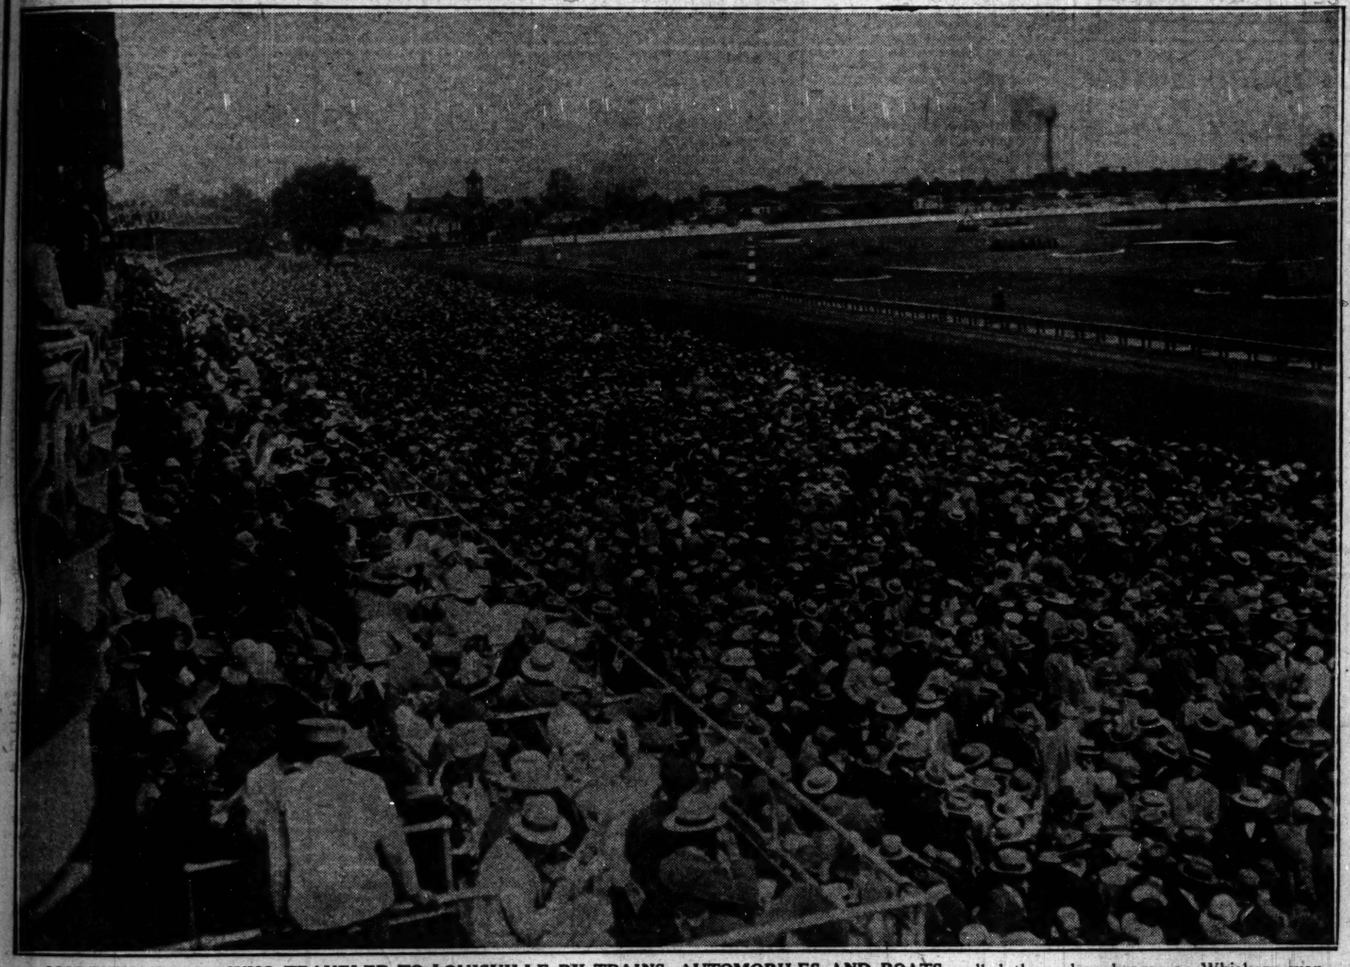
WHISKERY'S DRIVE IN STRETCH BEATS OSMAND BY A NOSE. Whiskery, great son of Whiskbroom II.—Prudery, coming from behind on the outside in the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs yesterday and pushing his nose in front of Osmand a fraction of a second before they crossed the finish line. Osmand has wrested the lead from Jock, as the horses turned into the stretch, but even Earl Sande's skill couldn't keep the tiring colt in front. A length and a half back is the fast failing Jock, which had got an early lead of five lengths and had set the pace most of the way. A length back of Jock, Hydromel has a head advantage on Bostonian, Whiskery's stablemate and winner of the Preakness, for fourth place. Hydromel was the first western horse at the finish. Whiskery, away sixth, pulled up to third as the horses turned into the stretch and then came on with a burst of speed that brought his owner, Harry Payne Whitney, $51,000 and a gold trophy.

RETURNS TO OLD STABLE—AND WINS. Jockey Linus McAtee broke with the Whitney stables last year when his health was failing. Sickness of Jockey Jummer put him back in a Whitney saddle yesterday and he booted the colt home in front.

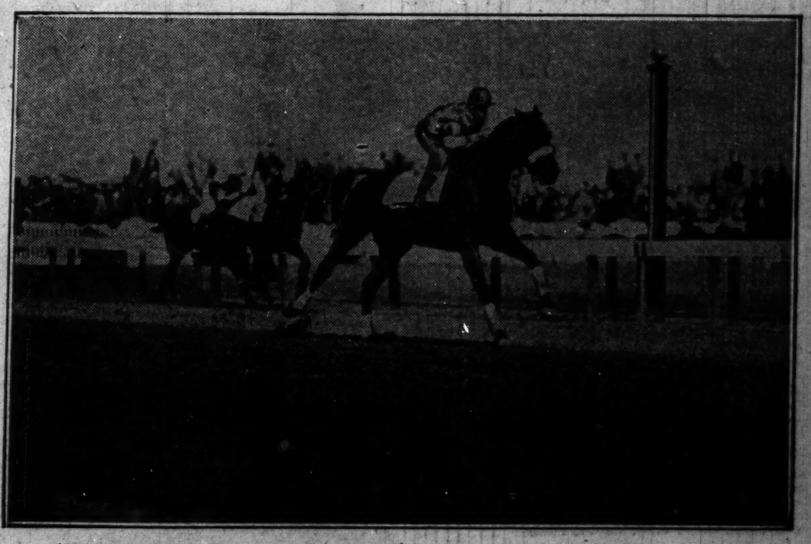
HIS COLORS CATCH JUDGES' EYES. Harry Payne Whitney, New York sportsman and owner of Whiskery, winner of the Derby.



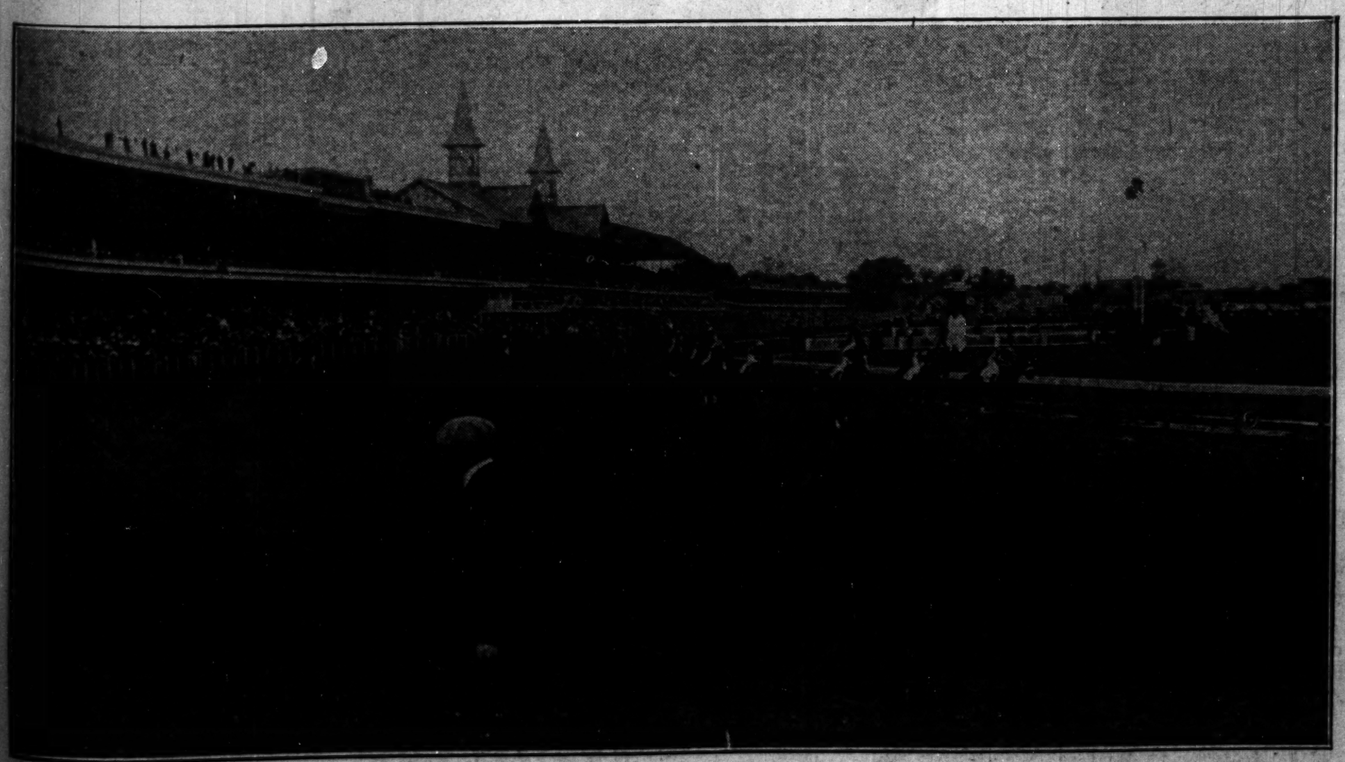
FALTERS IN SHADOW OF VICTORY'S WINGS. Osmand, the J. E. Widener colt, which pursued Jock through the early part of the race and entered the stretch in the lead, but he couldn't fight off Whiskery's challenge at the finish.



MORE THAN 90,000 WHO TRAVELED TO LOUISVILLE BY TRAINS, AUTOMOBILES AND BOATS, yelled themselves hoarse as Whiskery won the fifty-third renewal of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs yesterday. The attendance overtaxed the capacity of the enlarged stands and the fans circled the track to gain points of vantage from which to watch the race. All of the grand stand and the boxes were packed and in front of the stand and around the mutuel booth the fans were packed so tightly that it was almost impossible for them to move. It was estimated that more than 12,000 Chicagoans attended.



JOCK HELD HIS LEAD at the three-quarter pole and was going strong with the field well spread out behind him. Osmand held his place in back of Jock but Whiskery had moved up to third place and had started to make his bid for victory. Scapa Flow was tiring and dropped back to fourth position.



JOCK STEPPING AWAY FROM THE FIELD AT THE FIRST QUARTER. The field rounding the first turn after passing the grandstand the first time for their long mile around the track. From the angle this picture was taken Jock and Osmand seem to be on fairly even terms but it was only a quarter of a mile farther that Jock had opened up a lead of five lengths. Pounding along close to the flying leaders were Scapa Flow and Rolled Stocking, who dropped back shortly afterward, Whiskery and Hydromel. The picture gives an excellent idea of the broad sweep of the Churchill Downs track.

DOWN THE BACK STRETCH the field was strung out for more than seventy yards. The mud was flying as the big field of three-year olds passed the half mile mark with Jock out in front and Osmand in second place. Scapa Flow was racing along in third position while Buddy Bauer, Hydromel and Black Panther followed in order. Whiskery held a steady pace in the seventh place.

ENTRIES CLOSE AT MIDNIGHT FOR TRIBUNE DERBY

Star Cycle Club Makes Record Nomination.

The Star Cycle club, which has enrolled some expert riders under its colors, will be represented by thirty-seven in THE TRIBUNE'S sixth annual Bicycle Derby to be held in Grant park one week from this morning starting at 9 o'clock. The complete team entry was made by President Alfred Cumming Sr. and is the largest squad entry received.

EDWARD MAHLKE.

Gregory Flatow, Stanley Wesolowski and George Young Sr. will be the club's representatives in the class A race and handicap. Included in the class B nominations are Albert Wesolowski, Art Cumming, and Frank Orr, while Joe Wesley and Gus Johnson are among some of the class C experts. Seven riders will represent the club in the boys' race and Rita Freehauf will ride under the club's colors in the girls' event.

Franklin Club Enters Eighteen.

The Franklin Skating and A. C., which always has fostered amateur bike racing, will have eighteen experts in the various races. The list is topped by Gene Meyers, Gerald Kulp, and William Teuchtler, who will compete in the class A race and handicap. Art Weimerslage, Charles Stret, and Leon Coceddi are among the class B racers. The team entry was made by Herman Hofmann, chairman of the athletic committee.

Entries close today at midnight and the handicap committee of the Amateur Bicycle League of America will meet tomorrow night to award allowances in the handicap race, feature of the Derby.

Arthur Gardiner, one of the greatest riders who ever straddled a bike, will be referee of the Derby. Gardiner has served in this capacity for the last five derbies and has performed faultlessly. Gardiner, who is one of the greatest sprint riders in history, always has taken a keen interest in amateur bike racing and welcomes the opportunity to assist the growing generation in a healthy outdoor sport.

Fitzgerald Will be Starter.

Julian T. Fitzgerald, western representative of the Amateur Bicycle League of America, will be the starter. He is one of the hardest workers in the city in the promotion of amateur sports, and, like Gardiner, has been connected with THE TRIBUNE bike races since their inception.

Sparta Faces Uruguay Soccer Team on Soldiers' Field Today

The Uruguay soccer team, champion of the last Olympic games, will make its first of two appearances here today, meeting the Sparta club, Midwest league leaders, at Soldiers' field.

This is the first South American team that ever has played in the United States. Since arriving in the United States the Uruguayans have played nine games. They have won six, tied two, and lost one.

Andrade Voted Best Invader.

The outstanding star of the tourists is Leandro Andrade, the colored right half. This player, eastern critics claim, is the best that has appeared in this country. In some games the Uruguayans' opponents have delegated two, and sometimes three, men to cover him.

Pedro Cea and Conrade Haberle alternate at center. On the right wing S. Urdinaran or R. Fierantino will be partnered by Hector Scarone, the most dangerous of the forwards. Scarone is the leading goal scorer of the trip.

Sparta to Rely on Regulars.

Andrade L. Fernandez and J. Vanzino, who form the half back line, are three of the best defenders and attackers in the game.

Anton Urdinaran and Emilo Recobe, the full backs, are deadly tacklers and sure kickers. Between the posts, A. Mazzali and T. Batignani, have withstood the best of America's marksmen.

Sparta, no doubt, will rely on the same players who held Hakoah to a tie last Sunday. The defensive play of Hjulian, Zenesik and Gardiner is about the best in the city.

Preceding the big game the Sparta juniors and an all star team from the Jewish Junior league will stage a curtain raiser, starting at 1:30 p. m. Dave Evans of Detroit will referee the major attraction.

WEST FRANKFORT WINS.

Herrin, Ill., May 14.—[Special.]—West Frankfort won the Southern Illinois high track meet held at Hurst Bush field this afternoon with 45½ points. Harrisburg was second. Murphysboro won the relay, breaking all relay records for southern Illinois meets.

WOMEN PROCURE 180 ACRE TRACT FOR GOLF COURSE

The much discussed proposal to form a golf club in the Chicago district exclusively for women seems to be on its way to fulfillment with the announcement of the purchase of 180 acres of land by the Old Orchard Country club by Mrs. Raymond M. Ashcraft, president. The site is two miles northwest of Des Plaines, off the Rand road, and adjoining the Rolling Green Country club. The club also holds an option on sixty acres additional for members' summer cottages.

Plans of Leonard Macomber, the course architect, call for twenty-seven holes in three separate nine hole units, any two of which may be combined to form an eighteen hole course. The method will give a variable yardage from 6,000 to 6,700 yards and leave a nine hole course for practice on tournament days. Work has been started and nine holes probably will be ready for play by late fall.

Investment of $600,000.

The name of Old Orchard was chosen because there is a grove of apple and cherry trees near the site selected for the clubhouse. An outdoor swimming pool and tennis courts will be built and a playground for children fenced. Cost of the land was $270,000 and the cost of the courses and club buildings is expected to bring the total investment up to $600,000.

Officers are Mrs. Ashcraft, president; Mrs. Richard S. Folson and Mrs. Edward Fifield, vice presidents; Mrs. N. Max Dunning, secretary, and Mrs. Hunter A. Dickson, treasurer. An advisory committee to assist the women organizers in building the club is composed of William A. Alexander, H. H. Taylor, A. E. McCordic, Robert M. Cutting, and Raymond M. Ashcraft.

Plan Elaborate Course.

"We have developed plans to provide ourselves with one of the finest women's courses in this country," said Mrs. Ashcraft. "We believe it will offer a logical place to play such tournaments as the women's western, the women's national, and other major golf events of our sex. As long as we have been largely excluded from the free use of most of the club courses, the only solution was a course of our own."

Play 5 Million Rounds of Golf Yearly in Public Parks

BY HARLAND ROHM.

Five million 18-hole rounds of golf is truly a staggering number of shots—enough to make a good golfer out of most any duffer—but of far more importance is the number of golfers who play them. Those five million rounds is the amount of golf played on the 208 municipal and public parks golf courses in the United States, according to figures in a report just issued by the United States Golf association.

EDDIE HELD.

Reports of 120 of the 208 courses listed, and the compilers frankly admit they've probably missed many—Chicago's four forest preserve courses are not listed—show a total of 2,872,052 18-hole rounds played in 1925, but that's only for less than 60 per cent of the total number of courses. Doubtless if it were possible to obtain complete statistics they would show more than five million rounds on parks' courses.

Estimate the number of players any way you like and it's hard to figure less than 200,000 golfers, and this does not include the hundreds of thousands who play on the privately owned daily fee courses.

First Course in 1895.

This horde of parks golfers got its start thirty-two years ago when the first public parks golf course was opened in Van Cortlandt park in New York. It was a nine hole course, but four years later, in 1899, the park department rebuilt the course and enlarged it to 18 holes to accommodate the demands of a growing number of parks golfers. Today at least 148 cities in 37 states maintain public golf courses and the result, or rather the cause, is shown in the figures quoted in the first paragraphs.

How soon the idea of public parks caught on is shown by the fact that nine cities have maintained a municipal golf course for twenty-five years or more. The cities and the dates of the opening of their courses are: Boston, 1896; Toledo, O., and Indianapolis, Ind., 1898; Milwaukee, Louisville, Elgin, Ill., all in 1900; Syracuse, N.Y., Des Moines, Ia., opened in 1901, and Rochester, N. Y., in 1902.

Statistics of recent years are even more impressive. In 1923 nineteen new courses were opened and in 1924 fifteen courses. In 1925 twenty-one courses were ready for the public parks golfer and in 1926 twenty-one more. This year nine more cities are getting ready to dedicate new courses and many cities are adding to their public golf equipment.

These municipal courses vary from little more than "cow pastures" to really fine tests of golf, with fine club houses and professionals engaged for full time. The longest of them is the City Park Municipal course in Denver, Colo., which is 6,767 yard, with a par of 74. Rockford, Ill., however, has the longest nine hole course, 3,511 yards, with par 35. The shortest course is in Jermain park at Toledo, O., which is only 815 yards, par 27.

Average cost of maintenance, according to figures furnished by ninety courses, was $14,425. The lowest cost for any course was $2,000, a nine hole course with sand greens, and the highest was $40,000.

Two Annual Tourneys.

Two tournaments are held annually for the public parks golfer, which illustrate how good a game is played on the municipal courses. The first public links championship was held at Ottawa park in Toledo, O., in 1922 by the U. S. G. A., and was won by Eddie Held. It has been held annually since. In the five tournaments 44 cities have been represented, three of them Canadian cities. Thirty cities have been represented in one championship. Last year Lester Bolstad of Minneapolis won the championship from Carl F. Kauffman of Pittsburgh, the runner up. The five champions have come from St. Louis, New York, Philadelphia, Buffalo and Minneapolis, certainly a wide enough geographical distribution to add its bit to the huge figures of public golf.

The other tournament is an intercity affair which began in 1923 when Warren G. Harding, then President, gave a trophy for competition between cities. Four players are nominated by each city that enters, each playing 36 holes, total medal score to count. The trophy goes to the winning city for a year and the winning players receive gold medals. Chicago won the first championship in 1923, Washington the next, and New York in 1925 Last year Chicago again came to the front, winning from 16 other cities with a total of 608 for 144 holes, the lowest score yet made in the championship.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Mrs. Marjorie Foy, 5504 West 22d street, Cicero, was awarded $5.

The Question.

What player do you consider of most value to the White Sox team?

Where Asked.

Belmont and Crawford avenues.

The Answers.

George Sicilia, 4830 North Sawyer avenue, musician—Alex Metzler. He has looked good since he made his start with the Hose. He is young and ambitious and within a few years should be rated on a par with the best outfielders in the game. Metzler can hit and he is a valuable addition to the south side club.

Thomas R. Jordan, 4021 School street, insurance salesman—McCurdy is one of the most important cogs in the Comiskey machine and with a little more coaching from Ray Schalk should make an excellent backstop. McCurdy is among the club's leading hitters.

Joseph R. Klassen, 1216 Barry enue, sales manager—Before the season is over the fans will find that old Red Faber is the most valuable player to his team. While he has not been up to standard thus far he will display his real ability when the temperature takes a jump, for Faber is in his best form in warm weather.

Ralph E. Smith, 3429 North Lowell avenue, milkman—Ted Lyons gets my vote. There's a real player. He is pitching great ball. Metzler is my second choice and I give credit to Manager Schalk for signing him.

Edmund Steinback, 3425 North Lowell avenue, auto salesman—There is no better man in the squad than Capt. Willie Kamm. He is a brilliant infielder and can connect at the right time. He is liked by his teammates and feared by his foes.

MYERS PLANS TO REPEAT WIN OVER CALLAHAN

Mushy Callahan of Los Angeles and Spug Myers of Pocatello, Idaho, who meet for the world's junior welterweight championship at the Cubs' baseball park on May 31, will settle down to strenuous training tomorrow.

Myers, who won a ten round decision over the champion in the Coliseum last winter, is confident he can repeat. He said yesterday he not only would defeat Callahan, but that he would make 135 pounds and take the lightweight title from Sammy Mandell. Callahan also is eager to meet Mandell. His manager, Eddie Sears, claims Mushy can make 135 pounds without much trouble.

Chaves Boxing with Callahan.

Callahan started boxing preparation yesterday and is using Bennie Chaves, the Mexican featherweight, for his chief sparring partner. Chaves is under the management of Sears and may appear in one of the preliminaries. Mushy has been in Chicago since the first of the month doing light training, but deferred his boxing until yesterday.

Myers has not selected his sparring mates. He is looking for a fighter with a clever left hand. The challenger has a lot of respect for the champion's left and intends to get as much practice as possible in blocking the blows delivered by Callahan's main weapon.

Both Plan Road Work.

Road work, one of the most essential angles of a fighter's preparation, will not be overlooked. Champion and challenger will go on the road every morning, starting tomorrow. This will continue until two days before the fight.

Promoter James Mullen is expected back from Louisville today. Upon his return the remainder of the card will be announced.

RAIN BLOTS OUT SOX BALL GAME WITH RED HOSE

Rain yesterday gave the Sox their second successive day of idleness by preventing the opener with the Boston Red Sox at Comiskey park. There appeared to be a chance to stage the contest up until 2 o'clock, when Manager Schalk and Capt. Kamm inspected the field and decided on the postponement. Their judgment later was sustained for rain was pouring down at 3 o'clock and continued throughout the afternoon.

Because the lowly Carrigan clan swept the Cleveland series they were in greatly improved spirits and expressed eagerness to get on the field for today's game if the weather is at all favorable.

Tommy Thomas probably will go after his sixth win of the season this afternoon. Manager Carrigan was undecided as to his pitching entry.

TRIBUNE TROPHY PUTS PUNCH IN PREP BASEBALL

Interest Mounts as First Round Nears End.

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

Interest in the award of THE TRIBUNE baseball trophy to the Chicago High School league player of greatest value to his team is gaining as the first round of league play nears its finish.

Although the schedule has been riddled by rain and cold weather, the teams are playing off postponements rapidly and the opening round of the schedule will be completed by June 5 as originally planned. Two teams from each section will then meet in a round robin to determine the champion, and when the season is completed the victor in the trophy award will be announced.

Every Player Has Chance.

The trophy will not necessarily be awarded to a player on the champion team, but it is the opinion of the committee in charge of the selection of the winner that the schedule should be completed and the players observed in all of their games before a selection is made. The silver trophy is to be given to the player who proves himself of most value, and a member of a team which finishes in last place in the league race has as much chance of taking the prize as the star of the title winning nine.

Playing ability, sportsmanship and scholarship all will enter into the judging of the trophy winner. In many cases a star athlete has been known to be just an average scholar, but there have been many instances where the athlete has been an honor student.

Harrison Leads West Section.

Harrison Tech has a strong team in the west section of the city league, judging from the early games played. In the north section of the league Lane Tech again appears to be the class of the field, while out south Bowen holds the edge. In the central section Tilden and Wendell Phillips are the leading candidates for championship honors.

A game between the champion teams of New York City and Chicago again will be played this season if plans being arranged materialize. This inter-city series was inaugurated by THE TRIBUNE in cooperation with the New York Daily News five years ago and games have been played annually.

Last year the New York-Chicago contest was staged at Cubs park, and this season the game goes back east and probably will be played either in the Polo grounds, the home of the New York Giants, or Yankee stadium, the home grounds of the New York American league club.

Indiana Has Closed Season on Black Bass and Bluegills

BY BOB BECKER.

Middle west fishermen who are accustomed to invade the state of Indiana for sport with rod and line should study the latest fishing regulations of the Hoosier state, as a number of species of game fish are affected by laws which recently went into effect.

In the first place, Indiana has a closed season on both kinds of black bass and bluegills. It starts May 1 and continues to June 16. The new laws, which were scheduled to go into effect last week, also make it unlawful to take crappies, rock bass, yellow perch, red eared sunfish, yellow bass, pickerel, or wall eyed pike. The idea of the Indiana fish and game department is to protect better the bass, bluegills, crapple, and rock bass when they are spawning.

By putting a closed season on the yellow or silver bass and the red eared sunfish, hundreds of fishermen who are not acquainted with these species are wondering what they look like. The yellow bass especially is worth getting acquainted with as it is considered by some anglers as scarcely inferior to the black bass as a game fish.

Although rare in Indiana waters, the yellow bass [erroneously called silver bass in Indiana] has shown quite an increase in waters connected with Tippecanoe lake, especially in Shafer lake, above Monticello in White county. It is a cousin of the white bass of northern waters, 12 to 18 inches in length, and attains a weight of 1 to 5 pounds, although the average size is from 1 to 2 pounds. It is occasionally caught in the Wabash river and in the east fork of the White river.

Here is the way to identify this seedy little game fish. It has seven or eight stripes on its sides, dark greenish or blackish in color. If you go after this fish next month take your fly rod, as it rises to fly nicely.

SHARKEY'S BOUT WITH MALONEY LACKS BALLYHOO

May Send Tickets Out on Approval.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 14.—The ballyhoo for the Sharkey-Maloney prize fight Thursday evening has been drowned out by its own echoes.

The Sharkey-Maloney fight is supposed to be one of these battles of the decade, which is the next thing to a battle of the century, because it is vaguely proposed that the winner shall fight Jack Dempsey and that the winner shall have the honor of being counter-punched by Gene Tunney next September. Yet, Mr. Jacobs has been reduced to mailing tickets to his wealthy subscribers on approval, trusting that if they do not use them, they will hold them until they have lapsed rather than take the trouble to send them back.

Any Scandal Would Help.

"A good ticket scandal would be a great help to business at this time," Mr. Jacobs states.

From this spot it looks as though the exploitation of the heavyweight tournament and the uncertainty about Jack Dempsey's intentions had been overdone. Dempsey's reticence was originally intended to serve as the indispensable element of mystery and doubt which figures in all of Tex Rickard's big productions, as you may recall. Of course, Dempsey will be declared in the tournament eventually.

Customers May Rally.

Sharkey has been lending himself to the ballyhoo with great heartiness, with many disparaging statements about Maloney's courage and fortifications regarding what he will do when he has knocked Maloney out of the ring.

Perhaps the Preakness, the Derby and the local horse races have detracted from the interest in Sharkey and Maloney, but it is more likely that the customers who paid $200,000 to see Maloney and Jack Delaney in a thirty-minute exhibition of mutual timidity still remember how little fighting there was after so much threatening.

Not even its electrifying success during 1926—not even its tremendous sales, which more than doubled the best previous first-year record of any new make of car—

Not even these amazing achievements can compare with the present-day triumphs of the New and Finer Pontiac Six!

The reasons for this spectacular advance in popularity are obvious. Always a surpassing value, the New and Finer Pontiac Six now towers above its field like a beacon in the night.

Vivid new beauty enhances the fine craftsmanship of its new lower bodies by Fisher. Chassis refinements emphasize the thrilling performance of its famous six-cylinder motor. Fresh and original combinations of enduring Duco lend a marked note of style to its six smart body types. Yet, even with all these improvements the New and Finer Pontiac Six sells for new low prices!

Never has such surpassing value been offered in a low-priced quality six. Never has any car of its price kindled such wildfire buying enthusiasm! And never has any car in its class so clearly deserved such success.

TWO WEST SIDE WARDS LEADING CITY'S HEALTH

Lowest Death Rate in the 22d and 24th.

Chicago's two healthiest wards, based on mortality rates, are the 24th and the 22d, located in the heart of the west side, according to a report submitted yesterday to Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen.

Despite the popular belief that the north and south side lake shore neighborhoods excel as the best places to live and raise a family, the death statistics indicate otherwise. The 34th and 36th wards on the northwest side rank third and fourth on the health list.

World's Healthiest Large City.

The ward mortality figures were compiled by Dr. H. L. Harris Jr., for the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial fund from health department records, which show Chicago, as a whole, the healthiest large city in the world.

Aside from the congested 27th ward, which ranks lowest on the list, the greatest death rates are recorded in the 2nd and 3rd wards, which include eighty per cent of the city's Negro population. Mortality rates among the colored people, the report shows, are twice that of the whites.

Colored Death Rate High.

Although Chicago's health is reckoned as better than that of New York, Paris, Berlin, or any of the other large cities, the colored district ranks with that of Bombay, India. Infant mortality is almost twice as great as that of the whites, tuberculosis twice, and pneumonia three times as great.

Dr. Harris proposes, as remedies for the Negro health situation, more and better hospitals for colored people, more parks, better school equipment, and a concentrated educational campaign by the health department and other health agencies.

Shoe Merchant to Seek Balm, Præcipe, Suit Hints

Jacob L. Gertz, shoe merchant at 19 South Wells street, yesterday filed the præcipe in a $50,000 suit, reported to be for alleged alienation of affections, against Philip Sissman of the Sissman Printing Co., 6628 South Halsted street. Attorney Albert Goldberg, representing the plaintiff, said that his client was sued for divorce a few days ago by Mrs. Grace Gertz, south side club woman, after she became acquainted with Mr. Sissman.

DRAMA LEAGUE PLAY TOURNEY FINALS WILL TAKE PLACE TONIGHT

The final contest in the tournament of plays arranged by the Drama league assisted by the Hull House Players is to take place this evening at the Goodman theater. The Drama League cup, donated by Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, is to be given to one of the four companies who have survived the preliminaries which took place at the Vic theater on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Competing plays for this evening are "A Night at an Inn" by Lord Dunsany, played by the pupils of New Trier High school of Winnetka; Maeterlinck's "Ariadne and Barbe Bleue" presented by the Academy Players of the Academy of Dramatic Education; "Secrets" performed by the Barnum Players; and "Trifles" by Susan Glaspell, presented by the Threshold Players of Glencoe.

These groups were each awarded one of the $75 prizes given by Mrs. Charles Besly, George Lytton, Mortimer Singer, and an anonymous donor who wished his award to be called the Richard Mansfield Memorial prize. Following this evening's performance, Frank O'Hara of the University of Chicago will present the prize checks while the judges, Mrs. Mary Hastings Bradley, Harold Ehrenspreger, Miss Alice Gerstenberg, Theodore B. Hinckley, William Z. Nourse, and William Fletcher Holroyd, are deciding on the cup winner. Horace Bridges is to make the presentation speech.

Some of the well known people who have made reservations include Harold Swift, Mr. and Mrs. George Lytton, Mrs. Charles Bentley, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Bridges, Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Singer, Mrs. Charles E. Kohl, Wallace Rice, Mr. and Mrs. A Starr Best, Miss Alice Gerstenberg, Mrs. Lewis Coburn, Miss Gloria Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Gidden, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. India Fights Inroads of Radical Soviet Propaganda

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CALCUTTA, India, May 14.—Numerous reports are being received of the drowning out of the Indian wireless stations by the powerful Moscow soviet station, which is alleged to be sending out a flood of propaganda disguised as news from China and other eastern countries for the benefit of Indian listeners. The Indian broadcasting companies have been requested to counteract the propaganda by strengthening their stations, thus impeding foreign broadcasting.

OPPOSE WOMAN'S PARTY MEMORIAL IN CAPITOL CRYPT

Patriotic Bodies See It as Red Demonstration.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 14.—[Special.]—Numerous patriotic organizations, including the Sentinels of the Republic and the Woman Patriot Publishing company, have joined in a protest to Vice President Dawes and Speaker Longworth against the use of the Capitol building crypt tomorrow afternoon for memorial services of the National Woman's party in honor of the late Dean Emma M. Gillett.

In a telegram to Vice President Dawes this afternoon the Woman Patriot Publishing company declared that the services will be "a desecration of the United States capitol" and asserted that instead of a memorial, it is planned to stage "a radical political demonstration," in which "leading foreign and domestic pacifists and internationalists" will participate under the very dome of the national capitol.

The telegram cites the official organ of the National Woman's party quoting a German communist leader as saying recently that the party is "the most radical woman's organization in America."

In a letter to Speaker Longworth in Washington, the publishing company deplores his approval of a plan to use the capitol for "a political publicity stunt," and points out that the building never has been used as the scene of memorial services for "the distinguished Red Cross nurses who died in the nation's service, or any of the prominent deceased heads of the Daughters of the American Revolution, or other great women who died while working for the United States government itself."

Buick value is greater today than ever before

Because Buick is a beautiful car. Its Fisher Bodies are distinguished for their smart, stylish design, rich Duco colors and fine coachcraft. Its closed-car interiors are truly luxurious—with finely-textured upholsteries and softly-cushioned seats tilted at just the right angle to give maximum riding comfort.

Because Buick performance is superb. In a Buick you can race like a greyhound over any road, take steep hills or pull through deep sand or mud in high—for the famous Buick six-cylinder Valve-in-Head engine develops more power for its size than any other automobile engine built. Yet it is economical to operate and vibrationless, beyond belief.

Because Buick has always used the savings of volume to further enrich quality; and to provide such famous Buick features as the Sealed Chassis, Triple-Sealed Engine, Torque-Tube-Drive and Vacuum Ventilator.

Because Buick's initial cost is low and it is economical to operate.... For these reasons, Buick value is greater today than ever before. Examine Buick, point by point; compare it with other cars before you make your choice.

Floods Prove One of Many Brakes on Auto Industry

Graham's Control of Paige Biggest Deal of the Auto Year.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., May 14.—[Special.]—During the early months of the year the automobile industry was, and to some extent, still is confronted by several unfavorable conditions. The latest of these is the disastrous flood in the Mississippi valley. That these drawbacks to business are now righting themselves rapidly is shown by the gradually mounting of production and sales totals. This increase is of sufficient volume to warrant speeding up production in anticipation of further gains before entering into the second half of the year, not many weeks ahead. Authorities on the subject are satisfied that a continuance of good business will be maintained during the second half, with every indication that it will be well ahead of the first half.

Paige distributors, dealers, and owners are reported to be highly pleased that the future of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company has been placed in the hands of Joseph B., Robert C., and Ray A. Graham. The big change, they declare, insures an aggressive future for products under the Paige name and a continuation of all present models at the present low prices.

Since the Graham brothers' retirement from the management of Dodge a year ago they have been analyzing the future of the automobile industry. Their first contact with Paige was early last fall after they had determined upon Detroit, the center of the motor car industry, as the logical city in which they could best accomplish their ambitions.

The impression that students of the automobile industry got from announcement of the purchase last week and from the few rumors that leaked out in advance was reflected in the stock market, which showed a record breaking volume of transactions and a stock jump of about 50 per cent in a week.

The Graham brothers have purchased the Jewett interests, representing a substantial amount, and are putting $4,000,000 into the company in exchange for second preferred stock, no public financing being anticipated. This money is to be used to increase the production of present models and more aggressively to push the sale of the products. Another $4,000,000 will be shortly available to the company for erecting buildings and equipment in which to manufacture additional units of the product.

The Graham brothers have assured the principal Paige distributors and dealers that no change will be made in the sales organizations for a definite period highly satisfactory to all, and at the termination of this period no dealers' territory will be disturbed where the dealer has distributed the products efficiently.

Since the beginning of the present month several plants have shown production increases with the result that outputs continue at high levels. Preliminary on new lines has just been started by two important manufacturers, and although schedules on these new additions have not as yet reached high mark they will be produced at a rapid rate in an effort to get cars into the hands of dealers.

Plants as a whole are now operating on high schedules which call for a continuance throughout the month and well into June. In fact tentative schedules for June hold close to the high May figures, and in a few instances exceed them.

May made a good showing at the start from a sales standpoint, and with present conditions continuing it signifies that the month will make the real summer upswing. Heavy business is reported on the Pacific coast, north and middle Atlantic group of states.

A dozen companies, practically all the volume producing concerns with the exception of the Ford company, in the first quarter, turned out 655,160 units. For the corresponding period of 1926 the total was 551,561, this being a decrease of 18.7 or 103,599 units from this year's figures.

This does not mean that every individual company included in the dozen benefited by this year's increase. Where one showed a substantial gain, others reported a loss.

Automotive production in Canada during March and April kept pace with the American spurt, showing an increase in the output of passenger cars. Production of trucks, however, showed a decrease, the output for March being 3,524, compared with 3,829 in February and 4,385 in March, 1926.

The labor barometer of the employers' association shows a slight decrease of 211 for the week, leaving a total of 226,154 employés now in the various automobile plants and accessories shops. This compares with 249,346 for the corresponding week of 1926 when the Ford plants were working practically at capacity.

Three units costing $1,500,000 will be added to the Briggs Manufacturing company, on which work will commence immediately. The additional buildings will replace the one recently destroyed by explosion and fire.

Coincident with this announcement the state department of labor and industry states changes will be made governing the application of automobile paint containing the explosive pyroxylin compounds. Twenty men lost their lives in the Briggs fire, which was caused by explosion of pyroxylin compounds used in the paint shops.

Big Road Program.

Construction of new highways at an ultimate cost of $16,000,000 will be undertaken by British Columbia, according to an announcement here by Hon. W. H. Sutherland, minister of public works.

"Projects in the new road building program," said Mr. Sutherland, "include a main automobile highway connecting British Columbia with Jasper National park in the Canadian Rockies, a motor road from Vancouver to Prince Rupert, a new highway through the coast mountains from the Chilcoten country to Bella Coola and a road following the course of the Columbia river.

Argentine Busses.

Bus lines are increasing in Argentina and a larger and better appointed equipment is being used. American busses are the most popular, according to figures of the United States department of commerce. Foreign bus makers, however, are entering into active competition for the business.

YOU LOSE, IT ISN'T IOWA.

From Palestine to Bagdad the going is almost as tough as along the Lincoln highway from Clinton to Cedar Rapids in springtime, according to this view of desert touring. Motor convoys make the trip through desert sands regularly, however, and the sheiks have found a new job in easing the cars over the rough spots. [Photo from Pacific and Atlantic.]

Northern States Push Work on Jefferson Trail

MASON CITY, Ia.—Popularity of the Jefferson highway as a tourist route from New Orleans to Winnipeg is responsible for a concerted movement among citizens in northern Iowa and southern Minnesota to complete paving of the highway from Minneapolis and St. Paul south to Mason City.

Paving now extends from the Twin Cities south to Steele Center, six miles south of Owatonna, Minn. The concrete will be extended eleven miles south to the north line of Freeborn county this summer, and thence down to Albert Lea, either late this year or early in 1928, as soon as the highway has been graded and permitted to settle.

In northern Iowa citizens of Worth and Cerro Gordo counties are backing bond issues which are expected to extend the paving on the Jefferson twenty-five miles north from Mason City to the Minnesota line.

Completion of the paving from Mason City north to the Twin Cities will mark one of the most important improvements on the Jefferson in recent years, and prospects for its accomplishment in the immediate future are excellent.

According to figures tabulated recently by George E. McIninch of St. Joseph, Mo., president of the highway association, more than 2,000 miles of the highway, extending from New Orleans to Winnipeg, are now hard surfaced, and there remains less than 100 miles on the entire route to be surfaced, which work will be completed this year, affording tourists a comfortable, dependable, serviceable highway in all kinds of weather.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE AUTO TRADE

WITH announcement of the "Wolverine," Reo's new moderate priced six, the veteran Lansing manufacturing organization has scored its second success of the season, according to industrial observers. First showings of the new model brought orders that required an immediate speeding up of the production schedule which called for 100 passenger cars a day. Reo's production is now running between 225 and 250 cars a day, approximately four times the production in May, 1926.

One of the biggest mechanical achievements in recent years is credited to the Pontiac six operation department, which moved the entire production machinery from the Oakland factory to the new $10,200,000 Pontiac plant, a distance of a mile, without interruption of production. A. A. Miller of the maintenance department, plotted and directed the movement.

John Hertz, chairman of the board of the Hertz Drivurself organization yesterday announced election of Walter L. Jacobs as president and general manager of the Illinois division. Jacobs also assumes control of stations operating in Wisconsin, Kentucky, Ohio and in St. Louis. Directors of the corporation, named by the executive committee in its meeting last week include: John Hertz, chairman of the board; Irving B. Babcock, Paul W. Seller, C. W. Litsey, D. G. Arnstein A. Bradley and E. R. Breech. Irving Babcock was named president and general manager of the entire corporation.

April was the biggest single month in point of production and shipments in the history of the Nash light six plant, it was announced yesterday by factory officials. The increase for the month this year was 103 per cent over April, 1926.

Auburn exports for the first quarter of 1927 totaled more than 10 per cent over the entire year of 1925, it was reported yesterday by R. S. Wiley, export manager. The movement was 91 per cent over the same period a year ago, he added.

Chicago's first official brake specialty plant has swung into maximum operation at 2213 Calumet avenue under the direction of nationally known automobile brake experts who are operating the unique station under the name of the "Auto Brake Specialty company." The plant is equipped exclusively for the repair, maintenance, and improvement of braking systems and includes the latest modern machinery for this important safety and mechanical service.

Chevrolet has announced a new imperial landau model, carrying a specially designed Fisher body with full equipment and new interior appointments, listing at $780.

Sale of Marmon cars in April reached 2,567 units and set a new high record for the company, it was announced yesterday by C. M. Williams, president. The entire factory organization has approved the new Chicago permanent Marmon salon, opened in the "gold coast" building at Rush and Pearson streets by the Smith-Sauer company to feature the Marmon line.

Harry Branstetter, Kissel distributor, has stolen a march on veterans of the Row by opening a new sales and service headquarters for Kissel cars at 2800 South Park way.

Unique Motor Show

Chicago's first permanent automobile salon opened yesterday in the building on the northwest corner of Rush and Pearson streets, with a complete line of new Marmon cars on view. This new "Gold Coast" show, originated by the Smith-Sauer company in order to keep the march of automobile improvements directly before the eyes of the public, will be open each day and evening this week, and will become a permanent showroom for Marmon cars thereafter.

TRIBUNE TOURS

IX.—FOX RIVER TOURING CIRCLE.

Spare Precautions and Spoil Drive, Say Old Trailers

PROPER loading of the car on long trips helps to make a pleasant journey. One of the pet peeves of the tourist is to find at the end of a day's travel that a suit case has rubbed the finish off the body. Layers of friction tape, five or six strips stuck on the body where friction may occur, will solve the problem.

Another lesson that the long distance tourist soon learns is that every member of the party should be provided with a raincoat or rain cape, and that these garments should be reached easily at a moment's notice. In addition to this precaution, the tourist who demands comfort on the road will include an umbrella as part of his traveling equipment. The soundness of this advice will be appreciated by the motorist who has been forced to travel all day in wet clothing, because of a drenching received while getting in and out of the car when stopping for lunch.

"In addition to care in loading and in providing suitable comforts the motorist should conduct an inspection of his car before setting out on his journey," says a timely touring bulletin, issued by old timers of the Chicago Motor club.

"Particular attention should be centered upon safety features. Brakes adequate for normal driving may prove entirely incapable of performing up to the standard demanded upon the tour. Another essential that frequently escapes attention is the steering mechanism. Travel on the tour will be faster than one's usual pace. There must be no weakness in the car's gear. In addition to making steering safe, it should be made as effortless as possible, because driving otherwise may prove excessively and needlessly fatiguing.

"Although it is not generally so regarded, the engine is one of the most important safety features of the car. It must be performing at its best to deliver the extra power necessary for long trips at high speed. If one makes certain that carburetion and timing are right, one will have little trouble under ordinary conditions.

"The tires, of course, must be in good condition. It is unwise under all conditions to expect old tires to stand up under the grueling work to which they will be submitted on a touring trip.

"The tourist must watch out at all times that he does not become excessively fatigued.

"Five other points in relation to driving on the tour are summed up as follows:

"Making good time is a matter of driving consistently at a reasonable speed. This rate should be neither so fast as to be dangerous nor so slow as to kill the pleasure of the trip.

"Observe generally the rules of the road and show courtesy to other highway users.

"Be alert and keep a firm grip on the steering wheel at all times.

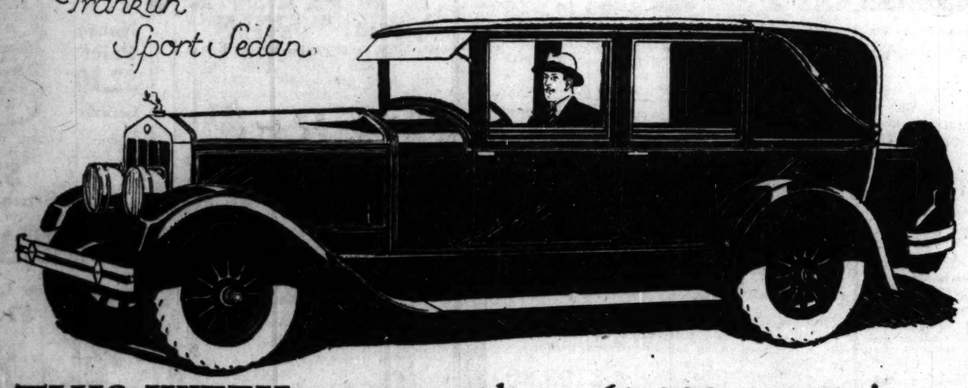
"Make careful note of the danger and caution signs put along the highway for your protection. Pay particular heed to the warning to descend steep grades in low or second gear. These are among the most important caution signs. It is seldom that they are placed where caution is not needed.

"Never leave the car on the highway while repairs, such as tire changes, are being made."

CHICAGO'S ideal Sunday drive this year, as in seasons past, heads out toward the beautiful Fox river valley and its excellent pavement from the lake region south. This tour suggestion shows the available options with the Northwest highway and St. Charles-Roosevelt road combination featured in the circle.

At the right and above the tour map is the latest chart showing highway conditions in the Mississippi flood area. It was completed last week by the American Automobile association from last minute information sent in by clubs in the area, and shows the danger of planning trips over valley roads at this time. The shaded portion on the map indicates territory practically closed to traffic.

Franklin Sport Sedan



THIS WEEK—more than 60,000 motorists are buying new cars

Why are so many buying Franklins?

IN the whole fine car field, Franklin is today showing the greatest rate of increase.

Talk with Franklin owners—investigate this nation-wide endorsement of Franklin principles. Let us arrange a demonstration and show you why Franklin owners talk in terms such as these:

I bought my first Franklin about six months ago — after owning cars of seven other makes. I am more than satisfied—it is all and more than the dealer said. I am sure there is no other car on the market that can compare with it for easy riding...I am particularly pleased to notice that the car has developed none of the body rattles so common in all other cars after the first two thousand miles ...In every respect the Franklin is a real quality job.

I am more thoroughly sold on the Franklin each time I drive it out of the garage...On a recent 5000 mile trip I was especially pleased with its performance in crossing the Allegheny Mountains; while the water-cooled cars were laid up at the roadside, for water and to cool, my Franklin kept up its high average mileage per hour.

I find the Franklin is easier on tires and costs less to run than any of the other cars I have had. And when I go out I am always sure of coming back safely.

We sincerely believe that no other car has ever enjoyed such active support and unswerving loyalty from its owners. The satisfaction and economy of Franklin ownership are always a distinctly pleasing surprise.

May we arrange a demonstration for you this week?

The Franklin Sedan weighs 1-3 to 1-2 less than other sedans of equal size.

1-3 to 1-2 less weight to handle, to transport—for which to buy gasoline and tires.

PEERLESS

THE NEW SIX-60

$1295 and $1345

FOR two years Peerless engineers have concentrated on this new Six-60.

Now it's yours to test—to drive—to compare—the New Six-60—a "fundamentally better" Six.

And, lower in price than any car Peerless ever built. Yet, a car that looks, acts and is quality! As you stand off and look at its rich, distinctive beauty, you know that the Six-60 is genuine, through and through.

This new Peerless has a wheel-base of 116 inches. Short enough to turn in a narrow street—to slip easily into a space along a crowded curb—to thread quickly through 5 o'clock traffic. But spacious—with seats that are soft and pillowy—and more than ample leg room.

Light enough to be thrifty of gas and oil. Yet heavy enough to be rugged and strong—to hold the roughest road comfortably.

Lower than most cars you see, with lines smart and clean-cut as a cameo.

A brilliant performer, too—with a motor that embodies all that's latest and best in six cylinder construction.

An abundance of lively power produced with only a low, pleasing rythmic hum. Alert power that hits 60 to 70 without fuss or flurry.

And the Ross cam and lever steering makes the Six-60 a wonderfully easy car to drive.

From its first gentle glide into action, back to the safe, sure stop of its hydraulic 4-wheel brakes, this "fundamentally better" Six is a constant joy.

No one ever dreamed a car like this could be built at a price so low. Yet here it is. Only $1295 and $1345.

Don't Despair

"Social" Diseases can be cured!

Here is comforting news for the man or woman who suffers from a "Social" Disease.

Regardless of what you may have been told to the contrary by misinformed persons, both these diseases can be cured!

But not by the use of patent remedies or by a brief course of questionable medical treatments. You must put yourself in the hands of a reliable physician and follow his instructions faithfully until he pronounces you cured.

Your family physician is a good man to consult. He will either treat you himself or recommend a competent specialist. Or you can come direct to the Public Health Institute with equal confidence.

Here at the Institute are 30 registered physicians, all graduates of reputable medical schools, surrounded by the most modern facilities for the treatment of "Social" Diseases. They administer treatment privately, and are at your service from 10 A. M. to 8 P. M. every day except Sunday.

Organized NOT FOR PROFIT, the charges of the Public Health Institute are within the reach of even the smallest wage earner. These extremely low fees are possible only because the Institute treats as many as 1,500 men, women and children daily.

Women and Children

A special department exclusively for women and children, with women assisting as nurses and attendants, is located at 72 East Randolph Street. Every facility is provided here for effective treatment, and the utmost privacy with the highest degree of comfort is assured.

When the best of medical treatment can be had privately, conveniently and at trifling cost, why permit a "Social" Disease to threaten you with life-long disability and perhaps an early death?

Any physician will tell you that to neglect a "Social" Disease, or to discontinue its treatment until cured, is to encourage the most dreadful consequences. Insanity, blindness, paralysis, epilepsy, heart disease, acute rheumatism and childless marriages are only a few of the awful results of uncured "Social" Diseases.

So don't delay! If you know or suspect yourself to be infected, immediately consult your family physician or come at once to the Public Health Institute.

Bearing in mind that a "Social" Disease may be inherited or otherwise unknowingly acquired, a thorough medical examination is advisable if only to assure yourself that you are free from infection.

An intimately-written illustrated book, telling more about the dangers of "Social" Diseases and the Public Health Institute's unequalled facilities for their treatment, will be sent FREE in a plain envelope on request. Address Public Health Institute, 159 North Dearborn Street, Chicago.

MOTORDOM

Counties Assume First Burden of 1927 Road Work

Demand State Aid; City Pushes Elston Avenue Paving.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

COUNTY road builders in the Chicago district have taken the first burden of 1927 highway work and financing on their own shoulders while awaiting state action on improvement contracts in the new $100,000,000 bond issue system, according to progress reports received yesterday.

In Cook county 40 miles of new road work is under contract and plans are completed for spring and summer building over a total of 120 miles of roads included in the $15,000,000 widening and paving program.

In Lake county a new $730,000 bond issue program is under way by county forces, all of the work to supplement the state's new bond issue paving.

Unver the direction of E. L. Gates, county superintendent of highways, the Du Page county bond issue money was released recently and work on the new county roads is reported to be going forward as rapidly as weather conditions permit.

In Kane county units of the East Fox river road are under construction, with county money footing the bills, and Will county highway boosters are campaigning for the county bond issue needed there to break the back of traffic congestion and supplement the state roads already built.

Although the state highway department has hung up a new action record this spring by completing public hearings and definitely locating 450 miles of new roads to be paved in the Chicago district with $100,000,000 bond issue funds, and Gov. Len Small has officially promised that the state will undertake approximately $4,000,000 worth of emergency highway work, widening and new construction, in the area adjacent to Chicago in 1927, officials of neighboring counties point out that no actual construction lettings in this highway district have been held by the state highway department since April 13, when bids were taken on several of the new bond issue trails. Unfavorable weather and the political battle over the proposed gasoline tax, they believe, have brought about this delay in starting the vital building work.

"Counties in the area immediately adjacent to Chicago must have state help in meeting a traffic situation that is the logical concern of the state as a whole," said one county official yesterday. "Our roads have become almost as important terminal highways as have those of Cook county. They are called on to carry the mass of state traffic into and from Chicago. They are worn out by this traffic, demand widening and constant improvement and are costly items in the county budgets. On Sundays and holidays and in the popular touring season their congestion is nearly as dangerous as the terminal pavements in Cook county.

"The state administration is more than justified in lending its $4,000,000 cooperation in widening and improvement in Cook county over and above its regular bond issue program. This work, which meets Cook county's own $15,000,000 widening outlay, is a direct state obligation. Our contention is that this extra state help does not extend far enough. All of these state widenings should be carried on across the Cook county line and as far as dangerous congestion exists, but as yet no definite promises have been made by the state that this widening will be done and no apparent pressure has been brought to bear by counties neighboring Cook to win the needed help.

"These counties are straining their individual resources to the limit in making roads for terminal traffic. The next step in Illinois road building should be to make our state roads adequate to the traffic they bear no matter where congestion occurs."

Reports from the Chicago board of local improvements show steady progress on the improvement program for the widening and improvement of some 50 miles of city street connections to meet the Cook county pavements. Among the important improvements well on the way to construction is the Elston avenue project. This improvement, planned first as a 100 foot wide gateway road, failed to pass the public hearing for widening. The board, however, proceeded at once with plans to pave Elston from Lawrence avenue to Milwaukee avenue with a 48 foot permanent surface and an ordinance has been passed for this work. The board plans to file a petition for the improvement immediately and put the work under contract as soon as possible.

Younger Drivers.

With the signing by Gov. John H. Trumbull of the new law which permits 16 year old persons to obtain an operator's license with their parents' consent, there has been a substantial increase in the number of applications to the Connecticut Motor Vehicle department for licenses. The Motor Vehicle department will soon issue special forms for this class of drivers. Applications are running much heavier this year than last.

Wheel Alignment.

If your car tends to run to one side of the road or steer hard, see that the air pressure is even in both front tires. Then have the front wheels checked for alignment and the front axles for a possible bend. Wheels may be thrown out of alignment or an axle bent from a jolt against a curb or from striking a large obstruction. The number of cars seen running on the road with the wheels out of line is surprising.

Want Justice.

The Automobile Club of Missouri has filed a protest against the arbitrary method of valuing cars adopted by the state tax commissioner. The formula calls for the valuation of cars other than those of the current year's manufacture on the basis of varying percentages of the current new car price. The protest points out that this method of determining value does not take into consideration the change in models by the manufacturer.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question, C. H. Higbee, 6204 York-pl., Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you think the small, European type car will ever take the place of the big car in the United States.

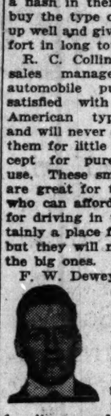
Where Asked.

Sheridan and Broadway.

The Answers:

George Hanson, 8912 South May street, garage superintendent—These new small cars may become poplar, but they can never take the place of our big, comfortable American made automobiles. American people want to make a flash in their cars and will always buy the type of big models that show up well and give the maximum of comfort in long tours.

R. C. Collins, 7104 Sheridan road, sales manager—The automobile public is satisfied with purely American type cars and will never abandon them for little cars except for purely city use. These small cars are great for the man who can afford to keep two cars and for driving in the city. There is certainly a place for them in our market, but they will never take the place of the big ones.



F. W. Dewey, 2300 Cullom avenue, salesman—The United States will always need big cars to stand up under hard work and long distance travel that would ruin most real light cars in no time. I believe that the new light cars are ideal for city use and for short drives. They are economical and easy to handle, but they will never take the place of our big automobiles.

A. A. Brandon, 705 Brompton place, manager—The small cars are alright in their place, but they will never take the place of the big, comfortable and powerful cars for long tours and general use. Some of them now cost as much as American size models, but they are much cheaper to operate.

L. B. Spellman, 2535 Devon avenue, druggist—We usually use our cars in this country for the enjoyment of the entire family, and I do not think that the new type small cars are roomy enough to be used as the family automobile. The small cars are ideal for use in congested cities, however, and should become popular.

Heavy Travel.

Motor travel to Yosemite valley continues to break all records, due to the new all year highway and the California State Automobile association has opened its touring bureau in the valley two weeks earlier than usual.

The all year highway is reported in first class condition by the automobile association, holding up well under the heavy travel which has resulted in resorts opening earlier.

Motorists making the trip to Yosemite may check in between the hours of 6 a. m. and 10 p. m. Departure hours are between 6 a. m. and midnight.

Use Care.

Cleaning the engine is most laudable, but it is better to leave it uncleaned unless one will use reasonable care during the process. The work should not be done until the engine is thoroughly cool. A mixture of kerosene and gasoline is ideal for cleansing purposes, but it creates a temporary fire hazard. After the work is done the engine should not be started until it has thoroughly dried. Take no chances on a spark or heated part during or after using inflammable cleaners.

Engineers Plan Motor Clinic at Spring Meeting

Experts to Discuss All the Problems of Industry.

IMPROVEMENTS that will be incorporated in automobiles, trucks and motor coaches the next few years will be revealed and discussed in detail at the four day semi-annual meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers at French Lick Springs, Ind., May 25 to 28. The program as prepared for the meeting reflects the lines along which the engineers are working to make the motor vehicles of the immediate future more efficient, economical, easy to operate, comfortable and pleasing in appearance, because leading members of the society were asked to indicate the subjects they would like to have presented and discussed.

Twenty addresses to be given and discussed at the eight sessions include a wide variety of topics and will be illustrated with motion pictures and hundreds of lantern slides. A new feature of the meeting that will be of popular interest is a competition among the sections of the society in speed in assembling small cars. Six teams of eight men each will, on a signal given by exploding a bomb, start assembling the parts of six chassis, which when completed will be driven five times around a designated course. A prize will be awarded to the winning team. In the opinion of the contest committee, this event will have technical significance in the possibility it will present of simplifying car design to make assembling easier and also possibly to eliminate some parts. As the contest is to be judged solely on the time required for assembling and the ability of the chassis to run under their own power for a given distance, any parts left over after the chassis have been assembled will be studied by a special committee to determine whether it is feasible to omit such parts in regular car production.

Much thought is being given now to four-speed transmissions and in connection with an address on the subject by S. O. White of the Warner Gear company. Several transmission manufacturers will have cars fitted with transmissions of this type at the meeting to give demonstration rides to attending members and guests.

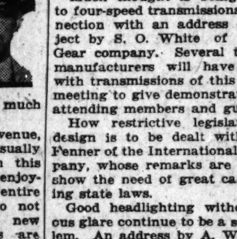
How restrictive legislation affects design is to be dealt with by D. C. Fenner of the International Motor company, whose remarks are expected to show the need of great care in enacting state laws.

Good headlighting without dangerous glare continue to be a serious problem. An address by A. W. Devine of the Massachusetts registry of motor vehicles will reveal objections to headlamps with double focusing adjustments and show that lamps designed with a focal plane instead of a focal point are easy to adjust and give satisfactory beams. Facts regarding the loss of illumination due to wet roads, wet lamp lenses, and fog are to be presented by R. E. Carlson and W. S. Hadaway of the Edison Lamp works.

Shimmy is to have two innings at the meeting. J. E. Hale of the Firestone company is to tell of the relation of front wheel pitchtoe-in and caster to front wheel brakes and balloon tires, which have been blamed for the alarming phenomena of car shimmy. But the front end of the car is not all that shimmies. Valve springs also do the Charleston, as will be shown in motion pictures by H. T. Donkin and H. H. Clark of the Cleveland Wire Spring company, who will tell how the condition can be remedied.

What is an atom, how is it built, and how much energy has it? are questions that are to be answered by Prof. E. G. Baker of the University of Michigan, whose revelations will be of academic interest. W. E. James of the Studebaker corporation is to tell of the relation of research to industry.

Four addresses on brakes and discussion of them will occupy a full session and another session is to be devoted solely to two papers and discussion on body design and finish.



RIDING comfort over all kinds of roads—rough or smooth—is inherent in the new Gabriel Snubbers.

On smooth pavements, Gabriel's exclusive anti-preloading brake leaves the car springs free to absorb vibrations caused by little humps and ridges—almost too small to see. And on rough, bumpy roads, the multiple snubbing coils, found only in Gabriels, act instantly to check the wicked spring rebound that causes your car to pitch and gallop, and brings discomfort and fatigue to yourself and your passengers.

Gabriel Snubbers are always sold on a 30-day, money back guarantee

Any Gabriel Snubber can be quickly changed to the latest anti-preloading type at moderate cost

Firestone Dealers

The Mark of Quality

Have Purchased 100% More GUM-DIPPED TIRES

[This Year Compared With Same Period Last Year]

THE demand from car owners for Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires has given Firestone Dealers a large increase in volume that enables them to sell these tires to you at the lowest prices in the history of the industry.

On the cars of motorists everywhere, in the every-day service of the largest truck and bus operators, these wonderful tires are delivering unheard-of long mileage together with greater safety and comfort.

The Firestone Balloon Tread, scientifically designed three years ago, and unchanged today, follows the contour of the tire carcass with no excess rubber at the edges to cause "shoulder breaks." Narrow rider strips permit the tread to yield to depressions and cling to the road, preventing skidding. This tough, pliable tread has the wear-resisting qualities that give thousands of extra miles.

OLDFIELD TIRES at Low Cash Prices

30x3	Fabric	$5.85
30x3½	Fabric	6.85
30x3½	Cord	7.35
29x4.40	Balloon	8.40
32x4	Cord	13.40
31x5.25	Balloon	15.35
33x6.00	Balloon	18.35

Oldfield Tubes also priced low

The tread, however, is not the only important part of the balloon tire. This tread must be placed on a carcass that has the qualifications to withstand the terrific flexing that this design permits. The Firestone carcass is made of cords dipped in a rubber solution which not only saturates and insulates every fiber of every cord, but unifies sidewalls with carcass, eliminating any possibility of separation under the extreme flexing of low-pressure tires.

Many Firestone Dealers are prepared to take your old tires, offering you a liberal allowance on a new set of Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires to start the motoring season.

To meet a demand for a low price tire and tube, Firestone designed and manufactures Oldfield Tires and Tubes for Firestone Dealers only. They can furnish you with these tires at the low prices quoted, carrying the Standard Manufacturers' Guarantee.

EUROPE FORGETS PIONEERS LAID PAY ROLL BASIS

BY HARPER LEECH.

The dispatches from the Geneva economic conference noting the speeches of the laborite and Russian delegates and the evident failure of others there to dissent with sufficient vigor from such views vindicate the position of former Senator Thomas of Colorado, a Democrat, who has never been given full credit for his part in preventing the submersion of the American business structure in the corrosive bath of international socialism prepared for it at Versailles.

In the league fight Thomas insisted all along that the real peril of the covenant lay in the so-called labor sections.

The virility of the western European peoples in the war, the vigorous assertion in deeds by the middle classes of Italy and England of their determination not to be swamped by the social degeneration, implied in the cults of proletarianism, make it impossible to believe that the tone of the conference really represents Europe. If such were the case, we would be on the eve of a great divergence in the mentality of two sections of the white race—those remaining on the old continent and those who have peopled America, the Antipodes, and South Africa.

If the Geneva confabulation really indicated that all Europe had passed under the ascendancy of such cults it would be time to conclude that the European masses now are as helpless to better their condition as were the incompetent and decadent urban mobs of the half ruined cities of the Mediterranean in the fourth and fifth centuries, after agitators, dictators, and what not had ruined the ancient burgeoisie and almost taxed brains and competency out of existence.

Discussions of world politics by British laborites suggests the chattering of sparrows in the streets debating the destiny of a world full of hawks and eagles—birds of daring and flight.

With lands to the east half occupied and maladministered—lands nearer in point of transport to western Europe than were the domains of the Sioux and Blackfeet to our centers of population at the close of our civil war, no voice at Geneva mentions the white man's true and tried remedy for such social ills as are under debate—a trek of the young men to new lands—settlement development. It's a medicine which never has failed in the past, when tried.

But the only kind of trek under consideration at Geneva is a modern steam heated trek—a perfectly safe passage, supervised and coddled to America, which is conceived to be a world relief station capable of paying doles illimitable. If we needed any labor, which we do not, we certainly do not need labor which would come with the idea of division not contribution.

That no European in discussing America ever manifests any understanding of that phase of our history is one of the symptoms of an incipient psychological breach between the peoples of the two continents.

WALL STREET NOTES

New York, May 14.—(AP)—Apart from the continued strength in the public utility division in which various issues are now enjoying support at the year's high quotations, curb exchange today evidenced considerable irregularity on reduced trading volume.

Several higher priced specialties ranged widely at the opening with some receding sharply from the level reached on the preceding vigorous upturn. Ford motor of Canada opened off 15 points and Royal Baking Powder yielded 5 points. Auburn Auto rose sharply at the start, selling up 5½ points and Celanese issues were in supply, the common declining 3 points.

Several public utility shares extended the current movement to new peak quotations for the year. Chief of these were United Gas Improvement, Southeast Power and Penn Ohio Edison. Commonwealth Power gained a point and American Gas was fractionally higher. Oils followed a similar course as on recent sessions. Chesebrough and Humble gained moderately.

The persistent buying that prevailed in an orderly and unidemonstrative manner was effective in lifting numerous issues to top quotations for the year. Tubize Artificial Silk scored the widest movement, advancing 6¾ points to 255. Swift International continued its upward course, reaching a top at 24½.

Strength of industrial mortgages gave the bond market a firm undertone, although profit-taking was in evidence here and there, but did not assume any general scope.

Chesapeake Corporation 5s, which assumed a position of leadership immediately after they were listed early in the week, again were in brisk demand at about yesterday's final prices. Delaware and Hudson convertible 5s gained more than 3 points on a handful of sales, while new top prices for the year were reached by Atchison 4s, Southern Pacific collateral trust 4s and one or two others.

Granby Consolidated Mining 7s, which have been reactionary at periods for some time, recovered more than 4 points. U. S. Steel Sinking Fund 5s were in fairly brisk demand, but Republic Iron and Steel sinking fund 5s lost more than a point.

Public utilities suffered losses of a fractional character. Fourth Liberty 4¼s were active, but the government list otherwise was relatively quiet and irregular.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for last week shows excess reserve of $38,557,710. This is an increase in reserve of $64,305,430, compared with the week before when a deficit in reserve of $25,745,720 was reported.

With the transfer of its assets to the Western Foundry and Pipe corporation, the Replogle Steel company announces the distribution to its stockholders of a complete liquidation divided in the form of one share of Warren Foundry stock for each two shares of Replogle Steel on May 16 at the Empire Trust company.

Independent steel companies in the Youngstown district are scheduled for an average operating rate of 70 per cent this week, with subsidiaries of the U. S. Steel corporation at between 75 and 80 per cent.

Detroit dispatches say the Hall Lamp company has sold the Canadian Lamp and Stamping company to a new corporation, the Canadian Motor Lamps company.

Time for the deposit of Pullman company stock under the reorganization plan expires today. It will be several days before reports on total deposits will be received from depositaries, but an official of the company is of the opinion that deposit time need not be extended to obtain necessary two-thirds assent of outstanding stock to make plan operative.

ILLINOIS FACTORY JOBS DECLINE 0.6% FOR MONTH

Factory employment in Illinois has shown a drop of .6 per cent, as compared with the previous month, according to the monthly review of the industrial situation in the state of the Illinois bureau of industrial accident and labor research, which will be issued tomorrow.

The greatest recession comes from the manufacturers of men's garments. Iron foundry employés increasing .6 per cent is the most significant exception to the downward trend in factory employment. The decline in the central and southern sections of Illinois is attributed to unfavorable weather conditions. Increases in employment were reported by factories in Cicero, Rock Island, Danville, and Peoria.

The coming of spring, with favorable weather in Chicago, is given as the reason for a 9.4 per cent increase in building employment. The overproduction of crude oil can be seen as the reason for a 5.1 per cent drop in employment at oil refineries.

WANTED:
BIG BUSINESS OPENING
Sales—Organizing—Finance

A MAN OF BIG CALIBER
who is financially responsible, besides being an outstanding figure among leaders of men, has commissioned me to invite applications for the services of himself and his selling organization in any legitimate business having a big future; stocks, bonds and real estate excepted.

IN ADDITION TO MAN-POWER
he commands the capital necessary to buying control of a business, the promotion of a national sales campaign, the financing of a large enterprise, or the development of a proposition in the control of another, on a "no advance arrangement."

THIS MAN HAS GREAT CONSTRUCTIVE ABILITY
is honest and fair in his dealings, and will not consider associating with a business of questionable character. He has a large following among managers, salesmen, organizers and financial men who are now or who have in the past been associated with him.

Preference will be given to offers which involve the purchase of control in a potentially big and permanent business. Second choice will be given to an exclusive contract on an article of wide sales appeal which would require a large sales organization combined with national advertising.
However, no really big opportunity will fail to receive attention, so tell us briefly about your proposition to enable us to form a tentative judgment as to its present importance and future possibilities.
All communications will be held in strict confidence.

COTTON CONSUMPTION

Consumption of cotton in the United States in April was disappointing, although it aggregated 619,140 bales, compared with 577,278 bales last year. This led to moderate selling, despite the steadier tone in Liverpool, where the close on futures was unchanged to 2 points higher, with spot sales of 4,000 bales.

Weather over the south, aside from the flood situation along the Mississippi, has been generally clear and favorable for farm work. Week-end evening up made an easier market, while closing trades on futures in Chicago were at losses of 66@17 points, while other markets were off 10@15 points. Spots in New York lost 10 points to 15.65c and New Orleans dropped 15 points to 15.15c.

The last five months have all registered new high levels for the crop, and trade sentiment is mixed at the moment, although mainly favoring purchases on breaks.

Exports for the season to date aggregate 10,034,852 bales, against 7,232,242 bales last year. The detailed consumption follows, exclusive of linters:

SUGAR MARKETS.

NEW YORK, May 14.—SUGAR—Sugar values had more strength, although trading was light, with no particular pressure to sell. Cuban production is nearing the end and the crop will not exceed 4,500,000 tons. Closing trades were at gains of 2@3 points. Prices as wired to Lamborn & Co. follow:

Cattle prices held firm, close to the highest point of the year most of last week, in spite of a substantial increase in receipts. Arrivals at 57,400 were largest since early last February. However, demand improved as the week progressed, outsiders taking over 17,000 head, the largest shipments from Chicago in over two months.

Prime weighty beeves reached $13.85, only 15c under the year's peak. Quality graded good, Nebraska alone sending in over 550 head selling above the $12 line.

Yearlings averaging 937 lbs., brought $12.50. Cheaper grades of cattle finished at the years' highest point. About 200 heifers brought $11.00, with nearly 450 at $10.00 and above. Good beef steers averaged $11.10, against $11.00 the preceding week and $9.35 a year ago. Stockers and feeders were in demand at the highest prices of the year, country buyers paying $10.00@10.25 for selected fleshy feeders averaging around 1,000 lbs.

Hog Prices Decline.

The downward swing of hog prices induced many feeders to unload, swelling last week's receipts to 137,900. Weights were heavier, the week's estimate average at 247 lbs, being the heaviest in seven months, against 243 lbs the preceding week and 253 lbs a year ago, when supplies were unusually small and average weights the heaviest in over half a century for the time of year.

A feature of the trade is the closeness of the supply at Chicago thus far this year and the supply the same period a year ago, the two totals showing less than 1,000 difference. Arrivals at eleven points are smallest in over eight years and 150,000 behind the year to date in 1926, showing a loss of 2,810,000 compared with two years ago and 5,500,000 loss compared with three years ago. Prices at Chicago during the week averaged $9.70, lowest since December, 1924, and $3.65 below a year ago. The high weekly average in 1927 at $12.20 was established last January.

Hogs on the week-end session were too few to fairly test a market, although scattered selling revealed a stronger undertone. Best available reached $10.00, with general average unchanged at $9.55, both showing a 40c drop since the close of the previous week. Large packers were principal buyers, taking 325@375 lbs. barrows at $9.20, and most medium and heavy butchers at $9.80@9.60, better grades clearing largely at $9.65@9.90. Few of the 3,000 left were offered for sale.

Sheep Receipts Increase.

Sheep receipts increased to 64,900 during last week, the largest in two months, but were below normal for the time of year. Sheep at twenty points increased 23,000. Prices moved downward gradually, broad eastern demand blocking any sharp break, with closing prices 25@50c under the close of last week. Colorado wooliskins are becoming scarce and sold up to $17.25. California springers reached $18.00 and natives $17.75. Western feeding lambs without fleece sold at $12.00@12.65.

Receipts at Chicago for Monday are estimated at 19,000 cattle, 42,000 hogs, and 16,000 sheep, against 22,673 cattle, 44,489 hogs, and 17,755 sheep, a week ago, and 21,223 cattle, 35,933 hogs, and 15,934 sheep, the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 53,000 cattle, 130,000 hogs, and 50,000 sheep, against 51,357 cattle, 107,507 hogs, and 52,738 sheep, a year ago.

U. S. TREASURY STATEMENT

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 14.—The following is a statement of the condition of the United States

BALDWIN AGAIN LEADS STOCKS TO HIGH GROUND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 14.—[Special.]—Concentrated buying of selected high grade stocks kept the market in an upward trend today in the face of the customary profit takings at the end of the week. New high quotations for the year were registered by a number of issues, but speculative interest in medium priced shares showed little improvement.

Baldwin Locomotive continued its climb to a new high record of 206¼ and closed at 202½ for a net gain of 3 points for the day. More than 53,400 shares changed hands. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe shared with Baldwin the honors in the industrial section, jumping 7 points to 229.

Rails were led by Nickel Plate during the first hour of trading when the shares went to 224½ but they did not hold, dropping back to 221 for a net loss of two points for the day. Chesapeake and Ohio shares were strong all during the session, closing at 182½ for a net gain of ¾ points. Delaware and Hudson closed at 208½ for a fractional gain, but Erie shares lost fractionally.

Petroleum Shares Uncertain.

Oils as a group were a bit uncertain. Standard Oil was off ¼ and Phillips Petroleum lost ½. Unless a decided improvement comes about in the oils situation soon, a number of oil companies probably will reduce or omit entirely their dividends. Some of the oil men who have refused to join in the agreement to curtail production in the Semi-nole field may yet decide to cooperate, it was said in oil circles here today.

Recognized speculative leaders like United States Steel and General Motors appeared to meet rather persistent attacks and both stocks failed to show a gain at the end of the session. United States Steel common closed at 170⅞ for a loss of ⅝ of a point, while General Motors at 195¼ for a net loss of 1¼ points.

Pullman at 139 touched the highest level it has reached in some time on news that enough stock had been deposited to make the completion of the segregation plan a certainty. It closed at 138 for a gain of 3¾ points.

Some Week-End Profit Taking.

Operators for the rise were evidently more impressed with the many evidences in the security market of abundance of capital seeking investment than with the continued irregularities in business reflected in the weekly trade reviews of mercantile agencies. Despite these irregularities the volume of trade and industry is being maintained as indicated by the car loadings and the huge bank clearings which this week were 5.1 per cent larger than for the corresponding week of last year.

Profit taking, however, was persistent in many directions, and selling for the decline was resumed in some stocks, notably United States Rubber, which closed at 61⅝ for a net loss of 1¼ points. Savage Arms was down 5 points. International Silver 3%, and South Porto Rico Sugar 3½.

Prospects of easier credit conditions after the midmonth settlement were held out. Total sales were 924,700 shares.

Second Liberty Loan Called.

Last week the treasury department called the $1,760,000,000 outstanding bonds of the second Liberty loan.

These bonds represent the balance of the original issue of $3,897,985,000.

They will be paid on Nov. 15 next, and will cease to bear interest after that date.

All possible publicity in announcing the call is planned by the treasury department, as it is very difficult to reach all the scattered holders of these bonds. The fact, which we mentioned in a previous article, that there still are in the hands of their holders $30,000,000 in government securities on which interest has ceased emphasizes the importance of broadcasting notice of the call by every means available.

Holding a security which has ceased to pay interest is allowing one's money to lie idle.

Idle money is unproductive.

It should be put to work again where it will earn income for its owner.

Those who have any government securities in their possession should look these up and ascertain whether or not any of them are bonds of the second Liberty loan.

Both the second Liberty loan 4 per cent bonds and the second Liberties converted 4¼s are called.

If you have any of these in your possession you should be prepared to present them for payment between Oct. 15 and November 15, for interest on them will cease after the latter date.

An opportunity may be afforded to exchange these bonds for other government securities, and many holders probably will want to do this.

Those who want cash for their bonds should begin now to plan how to reinvest that money.

The money has been invested in about as safe a form of security as there is.

There are many securities available for the reinvestment of this money, but the holder should realize that not all bonds, by any means, are as safe as these.

He should decide just how much safety his particular circumstances require, and then be careful to secure that degree of safety in reinvesting this fund.

The called bonds will not be paid at once, but it is well to look them up now and be prepared in advance for their redemption and the reinvestment of the money.

AN OPEN CHALLENGE

The Marmon 8 will show you more in 15 minutes than you ever knew existed in any one automobile—and on any basis of performance you may wish to compare it.

A PERFECT STRAIGHT 8 MOTOR

the greatest performer in the world

PERFORMANCE RESULTS

Speed—70 honest miles per hour, if you care to go that fast.

Acceleration—the fastest ever known—due to most advanced eight-cylinder design. (45–50 m.p.h. in second.)

Handling—beyond all doubt, the easiest in any car. We mean that you can drive on a road at top speed without strain; further, that you can weave in and out of traffic, change gears, turn and park with less effort than in any other automobile.

Comfort—as easy riding as the large Marmon, always known as "the easiest riding car in the world." Most people still don't believe that smaller cars can be actually easy riding—we believe this is the only one that is. (Total spring length equal to 81 per-cent of wheelbase. Springs set in rubber knuckles instead of shackles. Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers.)

PRICES

The only truly fine and distinctive transportation offered today at moderate cost. Six standard body styles, $1795 and upward, all under $2000, f. o. b. factory.

Marmon Credit Plan enables you to take delivery on very moderate down payment. Your present car can apply.

Equipped Ready for the Road

(Included in list price.)

Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers, front and rear. Bumpers, front and rear. Instruments include electric clock, heat indicator and gasoline gauge. Cigar lighter. Double rear-view mirror. Vacuum-type windshield cleaner. Fedco theft protection. Complete and luxurious appointments, such as vanities, toggle grips, robe rail, etc., in sedan.

DURING the next two years you are undoubtedly going to see a flood of fast, trim, agile cars with straight-eight motors.

It is the trend of the times—the one outstanding need of the times—and nothing can stop it.

Marmon's advantage lies in the fact that it has the jump on the field and that the Marmon 8 has years of development behind it—not designed over night to meet a sudden sales emergency, but the result of patient and tireless study of the best automobile minds of the country to meet scientifically a definite motoring need —the fastest and easiest handling car in traffic, but with no limitations as to what it will do on the open road. In fact, it is doubtful if any car outside of its parent, the large Marmon 75, can equal its sustained speed and staying qualities across the continent

—a straight-eight motor (built completely in the Marmon factories) which develops the highest proportion of horsepower to piston displacement of any stock motor to date

—a motor so thoroughly cooled and lubricated that it does not overheat in the highest temperature of the desert or in the thin air of the mountains

—a system of "equi-distant down-draft manifolding" which for the first time completely gets rid of the "starved" cylinder problem in a line-eight motor

—the greatest performer in the world today—a statement which we can back up any day, anywhere, against all comers

—stamina and dependability guaranteed by Marmon engineering, Marmon materials, Marmon precision, by the name of a seventy-five-year-old company whose word the public has come to take as final in fine car manufacture —and by three years of testing in the Alleghanies, the Rockies, on numerous transcontinental runs and on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, the greatest and most severe proving ground in the world.

These are a few of the reasons why people everywhere are buying the Marmon 8 with all reservations removed and why one of the industry's largest and best-equipped factories is working overtime—building as many as it is humanly possible to build well.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

The Summer Ensemble Is Still Smartest When It Is Made Up of One Color, but Two Distinctly Different Shades May Be Used If One Has the Artistic Sense of the Parisienne.

By Bettina Bedwell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS—(Special Correspondence.)—While fashion allows a great deal of liberty in assembling the ensemble this season, the surest short cut to chic is still to be found via the ensemble in one color and not more than two fabrics. Coat and dress in two tones of one color, or in two distinctly different shades, often make striking and extremely smart ensembles, but these variations always require more expertness and artistry than the single theme, and are, therefore, more dangerous.

You cannot outrage either fashion or taste if you wear an ensemble that is all one shade and one fabric, with hat and shoes to match, even if you pick bright red. Of course, this obvious color is going to become wearisome more quickly, and will be the cause of sore eyes after a bit, but the principle is good, just the same. When in doubt, select one color for your ensemble and stick to it. Don't weaken and put on a hat or trimming of something else, even if it looks charming at the moment. You'll be pleased and complimented more for your fidelity in the long run. And Paris backs you up, too.

Two fabrics, if they match exactly, are perfect, and equally ideal if they harmonize without a single sour note. And these simple themes are never difficult, even for the eternal amateur in fashion. The hardest thing to learn in the art of dress is the assembling of the ensemble in all of its details, so that there isn't even one tiny little bit of discord anywhere. I saw a woman come into the Ritz all dressed in gray—just jersey, and the simplest of lines and cut, without any fur or expensive details—who had done her assembling without a flaw. The hat she wore was a plain gray felt, and her shoes and stockings were identical in tone with her clothes. She carried a black bag mounted with gray and wore a black chiffon flower. Nothing marvelous, you might say, in the way of color or material, but she was a delight to the eyes, and all of the blasé and dollar worn orbs there followed her, as if she was some sort of ocular medicine. She was. And she had worked, because getting together a number of articles all in one nuance of gray is a hard labor, to say nothing of choosing good lines and the right kind of materials to set off each other. It's often a rocky road to chic.

I have selected for our sketches today four ensembles that are practically mistake proof, where all of the work is done by Paris experts, as the best examples of the assembled ensemble that is worn with success by smart Parisiennes. Any of these could be worn by very different types of women with success, and they are the creation of two Paris couturiers who have unbroken records of successful ensembles for women of the world over a period of years.

A fashionable and simple color combination of navy blue and white crepe satin is used for the afternoon ensemble. Shown at the extreme left. The tunic is embroidered in silver and the coat in white.

The supremely smart street and travel ensemble is of gray-beige friska with subtle complication of cut, and trimmings of tucks and band. Shown next.

Last, bright navy blue jersey is a favorite fabric for the sports ensemble. The sweater of blue and gray striped jersey has a monogram in blue.

The fourth figure at the right of our sketches shows a Jean Patou ensemble that is similar to the one the gray lady wore at the Ritz. This one is also made of jersey—beautiful, unpretentious material—and the color is a bright navy. More lively than real navy, and never obtrusive. The straight coat, with its flat revers and its bias ends on the sleeves, is a flawless bit of tailoring, and harmonizes well with the box plaited skirt. The sweater, silk and wool jersey, is striped in blue to match the coat and skirt, and in gray. The flower is gray, and the hat is a toque of gray felt trimmed with a diagonal band of blue, felt also. Gray slippers and stockings. It is individual and it's also Any Woman's ensemble who has the good taste to select it.

At the other end is another ensemble for summer which is equally charming, and fully as beautiful. This is the type of costume that is elegant and also simple. Lucien Lelong created it, and it has been tested by his famous kinoptic method. The coat is of navy blue satin, with full length revers and lining of white satin and graceful sleeves which flare a bit toward the wrists. An outline design in white silk is embroidered above the hemline of the coat.

The frock that accompanies the coat is composed of a straight slip of navy blue satin over which is worn a three-quarters length tunic of white satin. The adjustable crossed bands at the square neck of this dress are in themselves an artistic creation. White satin buttons mark the closing, and a white belt with silver buckle marks the waistline. The skirt of the tunic is embroidered in silver, in a sort of drawn work pattern.

This ensemble is a two color harmony that is easy to achieve, and never unbecoming. Such an ensemble can be increased by the addition of another tunic in dark blue trimmed in white, for less formal occasions. The hat of white bakou straw is trimmed with a navy blue flower, and black patent pumps are the proper footgear.

Our second model on the left is another Lucien Lelong ensemble, for all around wear. You couldn't look anything but smart in this type of ensemble while traveling or on the street in summer. It is of gray-beige friska, the Meyer fabric that is semi-transparent, of wool and cotton and that never wrinkles or looks dowdy. Lelong has made a straight coat cleverly trimmed with curved and straight tucks that cover inset pockets at the hips.

The dress is the epitomé of chic simplicity. It is one piece and straight, with movement introduced into the skirt by a single deep box plait at the side front. The waist closes under a row of frisca covered buttons at the left side front, and the triple belts close on the right side front. A hat of beige felt, or felt straw, with a contrasting ribbon, and beige leather single strap slippers complete this outfit. This is the real Parisian chic for practical wear, with nothing of the glaring about it, and everything that is desirable to the discriminating eye.

The model next to it, for real summer wear, has every one of these same charms in the same superlative degree. There is a moving supple grace about this Jean Patou ensemble that reminds you of wistaria waving in the breeze. Patou is a master of the slender line with a certain amount of flare, and this ensemble is an example of how he handles them this season.

The coat, while slender, has slight flares at the sides, and its only trimming is stitched bands. The material is silk rep, or serge, and the color is willow green. The frock is made of the same tone in crêpe satin, and the two materials together show how delightful fabric combinations can be.

The dress suggests the higher-than-normal waistline in an upward point in the front, from which two lines of piping merge into supremely graceful flaring panels at the center front of the skirt. Panels and hemline are also piped in self-material. With such a summery ensemble, a rather large hat of crin or other very light straw is worn, trimmed simply with applique of satin. Shoes of green, beige or black may be worn, and hose of beige or gray.

SAM 'N' HENRY

The Sad Morning After the Glad Night Before!

By Correll & Gosden

[After an evening of caberting Sam and the Most Precious Diamond (the high officer of the colored fraternity, "Jewels of the Crown") returned to Sam and Henry's room in high spirits. Henry finally persuaded the boys to go to bed, and now we find them the morning after the night before. It is 5:30 a. m. and the three boys are sleeping peacefully. . . . The alarm clock rings.]

"De Diamond say he ain't heah."

HENRY—Cut dat thing off—CUT DAT THING OFF! SAM! Cut dat thing off! (Henry jumps out of bed.) I'll do it; I'll do it. (He stops the alarm clock.) Sam! Sam! Git up! SAM! (Sam sleeps peacefully on.) It's six-thirty. Git on down an' hitch dat hoss up. (Sam doesn't move.) A'right—lay dere now an' I'm gonna pour some wateh on yo'. Sam! GIT UP FROM DERE! (Shakes Sam.) Git—git—GIT UP from dere! SAM!

Henry—Well, I'se goin' an' I goin' leave yo' heah.

Henry—I'm goin' down an' git sompin' to eat.

Henry—Ain't no wateh 'round heah. Is yo' goin' git up or not, Sam?

Sam—Henry, I can't. I'm sick. Do sompin' fo' me, Henry; do sompin' fo me.

Henry—Yo' stay heah, den. I'm goin' out an' when de Diamon's wife git oveh heah both of yo' git up an' sing "Sweet Adaline."

Sam (calling after Henry)—Henry!

Diamond—Lock dat door, Henry Lock dat door.

Henry (as he opens door to leave)—I hope yo' wife comes oveh heah an' beat yo' both.

Sam (as Henry slams the door and leaves)—Henry, don' leave me heah. O-o-o-o-oh, Henry, I'se sick.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

Close Fitting Little Hats Boast Earrings —a Pirate Touch That Enhances Their Smartness.

CLOSE fitting models of felt, crochet visca, faille, and pedaline and Milan are in much demand. The skullcap type is seen at all the smart teas and bridge parties.

The hat shown in the cut is called the Black Bottom. It is made of Belgian hare black felt. There is a plait one and one-half inches deep across the back. This plait is two inches up from the bottom of the hat. The brim is cutup in the back just above the hair line. It is left long on the sides and is curved up across the face. The points on the sides come just to the bottom of the ear.

Earrings of antique or bright gold are sewed on those points to give the effect of wearing them on the ears. Do not use the part that screws in or onto the ear. Take this off and use the lower part of the earring.

All colors of hackle feathers made into pads are also extremely smart on their close fitting hats. All kinds of pins are used this season, not so much as a side trim, but put directly in front of the hat. We have the dancing girl and the clown made of solid rhinestones with colored stones for eyes and buttons on the dress and suit; the more sober Buddha is exhibited for hat ornaments in jade green and carnelian red.

Orange blossoms, made in small wheels two and one-half inches in diameter, used on both sides of the hat, are also good. Gardenias of yellow, peach, white and flesh are shown on hats. A single gardenia is sewed on the right side of the hat and another one of the same color is pinned on the left shoulder.

In the new shades for spring, monkey skin—a soft tan with a hint of pink in it—holds good for the light tones. Navy blue and black are also good in the deeper shadings. C. G.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever been a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Unique Procedure.

One of the strangest weddings I ever saw was at our parish church. The bells in the tower rang for ten minutes and when the bride and groom entered they separated and went down the side aisles and the bridesmaids and ushers went down the middle one.

After the ceremony the bride and groom went down the middle aisle while the bridesmaids and ushers went down the side ones.

The maid of honor dropped roses on the carpet.

During the party afterward the bride's slippers were filled with greenbacks. L. K.

Simple Wedding Feast.

I noticed one day, in the restaurant where I dine, one of the white porcelain top tables was spread with a white linen cloth with a bouquet of roses in the center. In fact, it looked fit for a bridal party, so I inquired of friend waitress the reason. She told me a wedding party had stopped on their way to the photographers, saying they would return in half an hour for their wedding dinner and wished to reserve a table for six.

She had been assigned the table and had rushed out and purchased a chicken and flowers extra, and was patting herself on the back for having done so well on so short a notice. The bridal party came in before I had finished my lunch, and to my surprise ordered six cups of coffee and six hot dogs, the entire order amounting to sixty cents.

I slowed up to sympathize with friend waitress. "Anyway," she said, "I never spend a tip until I get it." H. B. W.

HOW TO AVOID FOOT TROUBLES

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—One of the outstanding things about the age in which we live is the concerted effort of the various associations of hygiene to give the public the benefit of their knowledge at little or no cost. The philanthropy thus distributed is of incalculable measurement. There is hardly a branch of hygienic study where information cannot be had for the asking, so many and varied in aim are the sources of supply. But living is a hectic though glorious age, we are often willing to accept these educational advantages as light reading matter and go the way of weak flesh which would rather do what is most agreeable at the moment.

There has just been brought to my attention a valuable leaflet put out by the Illinois Association of Chiropodists meant for distribution among a public whose joy in living would be appreciably increased were feet treated with the consideration these loyal old supports deserve.

A healthy campaign has been in operation for some time past urging women to adopt shoes to fit the needs of the individual foot. The fact that shoe sizes in popular demand have increased from threes and fours to five and half and sixes proves that the educational work is not without success. Just being the sex that we are immediately we get the feet educated to accept their length philosophically and to dress them in the same spirit, that weakness heretofore ascribed to human vanity demands that the appearance of shortness be subscribed to with heels of the most appalling height.

Real Philanthropy.

I claim these educational associations are philanthropic because they could, by keeping to themselves their ethical knowledge of this thing and that, reap a considerable financial harvest from the treatment of the very ills they caution against. Chiropodists assuredly are in a position to line their coffers handsomely by withholding information on the whys and wherefores of corns and calluses and ingrowing nails and more serious foot troubles. But, of course, there is that fruitful human equation, vanity, to be depended upon to keep them out of the poorhouse.

Whether all women ever will be able to adjust their vanity to common sense methods of shodding their feet I have large and reasonable doubts. Being one of them, myself, I feel fully qualified to doubt for the uncommon sense heel is not without its lure to me, too. A spirit of deep humility possesses me when I feel the urge to lay down the law on this subject. However, I cannot let that interfere with my job, which is to carry on my own branch of the educational work in this as well as other items of health and well being.

We all of us know, who have piloted around on heels that throw the body out of balance, cramp the toes and send shooting pains up and down the legs, that we simply are not capable of showing off at our best. Our "pleasant" expression is not nearly so engaging as it might be. And during this particular season if messages of distress are signaled from those pedal extremities of ours we are attacked with the melancholic idea that life isn't what it ought to be one single bit. A heart ache can leave you no more destitute about the futility of living, really, than feet that are groaning with aches and pains.

The Commonest Ailment.

The commonest foot ailments are corns, generally brought about by misfitting shoes and short stockings. And where one of these is jeopardizing the peace of your household, to say nothing of the calm, unwrinkled face, the best thing to do is to hie yourself off to one legally qualified to practice chiropody. The fee is nominal and the relief great. The implements used in a reputable establishment are thoroughly sterilized, which precaution is not always taken in the home treatment.

Soft corns between the toes result from moisture and macerated skin. This thickened skin should be removed and the space between the toes kept dry. Painting the soles and between the toes with a mixture of one-half ounce salicylic acid and four ounces of alcohol is helpful.

Calluses are a thickening of the skin due to friction and a pressure from the footgear. If there is a bone displacement, the abnormal position of the part induces this pressure. The cause has to be investigated and eliminated.

Bunions are a deformitory that often may be corrected in their early stages under competent direction and proper treatment. But once they become a large chronic deformity they require surgical intervention.

The Result of Tight Shoes.

The most thoroughly painful and a frequent foot complaint arises from the healthy nail being forced into the nail fold by pressure from tightly fitted shoes. Ingrowing nail is its familiar cognomen. A nail, if treated civilly, is as harmless as a goldfish, but maltreated it can wreak a horrible vengeance. If a crowded shoe shoves the flesh into the nail, the flap of flesh becomes bright red and painful to touch. Allowed to go unheeded, the nail gradually imbeds itself in the lateral tissues. An irritation sets up which produces excessive granulation or what used to be called proud flesh.

A nail is a protection and should extend a little beyond the flesh and be allowed freedom in that extension. In cutting toenails, remember that. The nail which has a tendency to grow in should have a packing of cotton wedged into the nail groove to keep it separated from the flap of flesh. The person who suffers from this form of foot ailment will never recover peace of mind without taking the precaution to safeguard the foot by a careful selection of shoes. They must be broad in the toe and a thumb's width between the tip of the nail and the tip of the shoe should be permitted. The high heel is particularly disastrous in such cases, since it throws the foot forward upon the shoe tip.

Excessive Perspiration.

Associated with other foot troubles is the common one of excessive perspiration. This may be due to general debility and nervousness. Where an unpleasant odor exists, a one per cent solution of potassium permanganate applied as a lotion after a foot bath and the changing of hosiery twice daily is recommended as a remedy that invariably corrects. Patent leather shoes have a tendency to increase the perspiration trouble, particularly in warm weather.

Pains in the feet and legs arising from the various arch conditions should be accepted as nature's warnings of trouble. Most common factors in creating arch troubles are overweight, occupation, general physical weakness, high heels and improper shoes. Also the method in which the feet are used in walking. In the accompanying illustration you see the correct way to walk is to point the toes almost directly forward; the wrong walk, to turn feet out.

To get an idea of the right or wrong balance you are subjecting yourself to with heels, compare your standing position and the correct position of the organs, spine and weight distribution with the illustrations above.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Parsimonious.

The cheekiest person I know is a young farmer of this community, who replied to the request of a neighbor for help with a job of corn shelling the next day, something like this: "Well, no, I guess I can't. You're going to move out of the neighborhood the first of March, ain't you? And I wouldn't be likely get my help paid back—but say, I would like to get a load of cobs."

The other young fellow replied, "You win. Come and get a free load of cobs," and the tightwad did actually drive up to the job the next day, load up, and drive off home, evidently considering the cobs worth the "ragging" he got from the boys working on the job. Mrs. J. E. M.

Brings the Tea Along.

The cheekiest person I know is a woman who eats her lunch downtown every day and as a part of her noonday meal has to have her cup of tea. Tea is 10 cents a pot. Does she pay her 10 cents like we do? She does not——. Every day she orders a pot of hot water and brings her own tea leaves. Can you imagine that for nerve! C. M.

False Pretenses.

During a visit with a wealthy courin she remarked to me, "I've just bought a new dress and I don't look well in that color. Wouldn't you like to try it on?"

I was delighted and said I would be glad to. I went home proudly bearing my supposed gift on my arm.

A few days later she called me over the telephone and informed me I could settle for the dress at the shop where she had had it charged! A. W. G.

Making the Caddy Pay.

I used to be a caddy at the —— Golf club links. There I met many cheeky persons. The cheekiest of them all was a woman. She hired me for her caddy one day.

Off the side of the first fairway there was a big hill about thirty feet high. It was all covered with tangled grass. She teed off, but instead of the ball going down the fairway it went about half way down the hill. I tried to find it, but it was even hard to walk in the tangled grass. I hunted around about fifteen minutes, when she finally put a new ball on the course.

She was all right until it was time to pay me. The caddy rates were 40c for the nine holes. She gave me 20c and said the other 20c was for the golf ball I lost. A. C. S.

The World's Worst.

A neighbor whom I had known but a short time had a breakdown in his car. He borrowed mine, driving it over a 50 mile R. F. D. route every day for three months. After he finally brought it home (or rather after I had gone and brought it home, for he would not), he came one day while I was away from home and took two of the casings off the car, claiming the ones on it at the time he borrowed the car had worn out, and he had taken two off his own car.

In the meantime, all my best tools had disappeared. When I asked him about settling for the use of the car, he would not pay one cent for the three months' use of it, and to cap the climax, he had me charged with a bill of $8 for repairs.

Did I pay it? M. C.

Making It Worse.

Occasionally the automatic stop on our phonograph would stick, but was so easily adjusted that it did not seem necessary to have it attended to. One day when I came home I found a friend working with it and he announced: "I have taken this stop off. It is no good." When I asked him to put it back as he found it he worked with it a few minutes and left.

Several days later I requested him again to put the stop back, and this time he worked at it until he had it so we could not use the phonograph at all. Then he left with the remark, "I never did know the first thing about phonographs."

Now I am waiting until I have the money and chance to send to the city for repairs. Mrs. B. M. G.

An Unpleasant Neighbor.

The cheekiest person I ever saw was the man who moved his family in the apartment across the hall from me. The first evening he was there he took our paper and read it before we had a chance to. In two weeks after they had moved in they had borrowed my electric iron, sweeper, heater, books, and even asked me to keep the baby for them.

Then, to show his appreciation, he went into a restaurant where we were well known and made all manner of fun of my husband and me. He was a stranger in town, while we were old residents. We surely liked his nerve! F. M. B.

OH YES! I can wear smaller, daintier shoes since I use Tiz. It is because my feet are never swollen or tender any more.
The minute you put your feet in a Tiz bath, you feel pain and tenderness drawn out. Oh! What relief. No more, tired, aching, burning, shoe-chafed feet.
Tiz draws out the poisons and acids that puff up your feet. Get a box of Tiz for a few cents at any drug or department store.

Answers to Beauty Queries

By Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Sky on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MARY G.: FOR THIN EYEBROWS, rub yellow vaseline into them before brushing. Then with an eyebrow brush or a small fine tooth brush brush them night and morning to promote their gloss and train them into shape. Do not allow the vaseline to get into the eyes, as it is irritating to them.

M. I. G.: BUNIONS ARE THE RESULT of great pressure and friction on the joint. They are brought about by wearing too short shoes and stockings. Have yourself fitted to shoes at a reliable shoe store. The joint must be relieved of all pressure if you would find comfort. You may paint the bunion with a lotion of two drams each of carbolic acid, tincture of iodine, and glycerin.

T. H. G.: A GOOD DEPILATORY for the arms or other parts of the body where you wish to remove superfluous hair is: Sulphide of barium, 2 drams; oxide of zinc, 3 drams; starch, 3 drams. Mix well and keep tightly corked. When you wish to use it, add sufficient water to make a paste, and spread over the part, allowing it to remain on several minutes, or until there is a slight burning sensation.

F. B. V.: CLEANLINESS IS THE most important factor in the care of perspiring feet. The feet must be bathed daily and stockings should be changed every day. A twenty-five per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water is an excellent remedy. Apply for three nights, then once a week. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for other helpful suggestions in "The Care of the Feet."

T. McC.: I WOULD NOT RECOMmend the use of peroxide, even in small quantities, for keeping the hair light. It is the natural thing for your hair to grow darker as you grow older. Peroxide dries the hair and gives it a strawy look. Wash the hair with a good castile soap, and if you wish, add lemon juice to the last rinse water, as it gives a golden tint. Instructions for shampooing may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial set? What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Constant Practice.

Wife: Just think, Mrs. Johnson learned to play the banjo in two lessons.

Husband: That's nothing—it should be easy for her—she's been picking on her husband for ten years. Mr. E. F. D.

Quieting Hubby.

Hubby (disgusted over wife's cooking)—Believe me, I certainly would give anything to know why God made you women so beautiful and yet so confoundedly dumb?

Wife—Well, I'll tell you, my dear! God made us beautiful so you men would love us and he made us dumb so we could love you men. G. E.

A Case of Necessity.

He—Wifey, do all women prefer the unmarried men to the other kind?

She—What other kind? D. D.

The Only Caller.

The husband [after a typical family quarrel]: Wasn't that the doorbell? I wonder who it can be.

Wife: Don't worry, dear, it isn't our one. The only caller at our door is the proverbial wolf. A. J. R.

Her Calling.

Hubby and wife, returning from a picture where the great callings of various individuals were discussed, the exceedingly lazy husband remarked:

"Well, I guess I miss my calling. The wife retorted, "Well, I didn't! The work seems to be a-calling you to eat and a-calling you to get up for work—and plenty of calling I have to do for that!" Mrs. S. B.

An insect with a $200,000,000 appetite

You know how women dread the moth. No woolens, silks, furs or down comforters are safe from the insect and her pernicious offspring. Their natural abiding place is in all such household effects folded away in darkness.

Here the moth lays her eggs. The eggs hatch into larvae, or worms. The worms, born naked, need clothes, which they make out of YOURS in the form of a cocoon. In this they grow, meanwhile feeding on the materials and increasing the size of cocoon as needed. Finally they go to sleep, wake up as moths and flit away, leaving ruin behind.

In one year a moth produces four generations of destroyers. The total loss ascribed by authorities to moth damage is close to two hundred millions of dollars annually. The answer is —

THE SUCCESSFUL WOMAN—AND HAPPINESS

Is the Financially Independent Ever Really Contented? Has She Everything Her Heart Desires? Here Are Answers.

By Doris Blake

NOT long ago one of the most successful business women in America took over a building, the transaction of which involved several million dollars. Reporters immediately camped on her trail for stories of the life that led to an unusually great measure of success. To one who suggested that it must be a glorious feeling to review an achievement such as hers, she replied:

"It is terrible. Last night I ran across an old friend of mine with whom I had been out of touch for years on account of my work. There we sat as strangers with nothing in common. The old human touch had evaporated. It is terrible, I say."

One cannot help detecting a note of pessimism in much of the literature dealing with women who thought feminism the direct road to woman's happiness. Some writers have no hesitation in describing the modern independence as blatantly destructive of her happiness. It will remain a debatable question, no doubt, so long as economic conditions force women into the wage earning field. There will be successful women of the world, surrounded with the physical comforts life would have denied them but for the advantages of the modern day, who will scout the theory that independence and personal happiness are impossible of attainment. There are other women who will look back from some pinnacle of achievement and ask, as one woman asked: "What does it profit a woman to gain the whole world of independence and suffer the loss of the things every woman wants, whether she is successful or not?"

Each Woman Has Her Own Ideals.

It depends upon so many circumstances, upon so many individual heart traits whether the game proves worth the candle or not. Men and the sentiments, the attentions and the support or the ministering to they represent may, to one woman, mean nothing. To another, perhaps just as able to sign a check for thousands of dollars, the old Eve with her dependent weaknesses can no more be ruled out of her heart than can be the cardiac organ, itself. And so optimism or pessimism can no more embrace the whole body of so-called successful independence than can the younger generation be embodied in one sweeping statement, pro or con.

But I do hold this, a disturbing observation, if not one containing the seeds of pessimism, women's capacity to hero worship the male has diminished, perhaps not in ratio to her progress beside him as co-worker, but sufficiently in hundreds of instances to make man feel a destructive sense of inferiority. In certain exaggerated cases woman's own sense of power and accomplishment breeds in her a contempt for man. Not a woman, understand, abnormal in any other respect than ensues from her proven results that she is as capable as he, and sometimes more capable. All of which may contribute to her greater success in business—but also to her invariable failure as a domestic partner.

You can argue till the cows come home and until they start out again about the reasonableness of the modern matrimonial partnership arrangements, about women being accepted at full brain power by an appreciative and loving male, but until man has undergone some miraculous change in his construction, no signs of which are upon the horizon at the moment, marriage is never a success where the man is made to feel consciously or unconsciously that he is not just a little bit the superior.

The suggestion is advanced by a visiting English woman journalist that the gold diggers' fascination lies not so much in the fact that men are easily fooled as in the sop to their hunger for that feeling of being fully able to provide and supply for women, dominant in the able bodied male. An American woman author, herself the victim of "successful woman" circumstances, said to me: "No woman is clever whose husband is not made to appear clever by her."

"Slow Torture."

Rita Weiman, well known writer, in a recent story in Liberty magazine, has cleverly portrayed one type of successful business woman who makes marriage Hades for the man who draws her. She called it "Slow Torture," a mild caption for the situation involved.

Mildred is a girl described by the author as the "sort who dominates the room the instant she enters it," a girl marked for success by the sheer force of her personality. David, her adorer, is a plodding student, earnest to the point of struggling long hours over his home work in his young days. Both elected to make architecture a career. They married when the salary of each was fifty dollars a week. Theirs was judged the perfect union, an ideal love match.

They worked in the same office. Mildred continuing with her job. They had been married a year when she got a raise, while David did not. Faint jarring notes had already been struck with Mildred's supervision of problems assigned to David and suggestions from her that held her young spouse up to ridicule before other draftsmen in the office. David made protests on a number of occasions that he would like to puzzle his problems out by himself. She argued that she was only trying to help him.

Finally David took a position with another concern "not for the reason that his wife's salary was more than his own, but because she kept him in mind of the fact. His status became unbearable."

When the Climax Came.

Then we are carried through scenes amid social surroundings made possible by David's financial progress away from the dominating influence of his wife. "On all occasions, in little petty happenings that tear a man's soul and break down his self-respect, devastate his peace of mind—at dinner and bridge parties, in their home, even as they waited for a taxi outside the theater—she told him how to do things. And David's suffering was a cross on which daily he was crucified."

The way David swung his golf club was the occasion for a public reprimand. The scene that followed might have warned Mildred of the latent potentialities in her man.

But the climax came with the interference of Mildred on plans for a Long island show place upon which David had worked for months, the stamp of approval on which, already seen in the owner's enthusiasm meant an ultimate partnership. Mildred insisted upon accompanying him, in spite of David's protest, on a tour of the place, now almost complete.

Overruling his months of work, his pride, she made suggestions to the owner, "the feminine touch" she called the things that David had not included in his plans. She succeeded in making David look and feel his inferiority "as effectively as if she had put a dunce cap on his head." That night he strangled Mildred, not with the finality she deserved, for she recovered. Later she got a divorce on the grounds of extreme cruelty. David went to another city to live and the world judged him harshly.

The Mildreds are not always business women conscious of their superior power. There are wives quite capable of breaking down a man's self-respect. But the earning wife with her additional implement of torture, a pay envelope, has it within her power to be a deadlier enemy in the job of tearing a man's heart and soul up by the roots.

Women the World Over

The honor of being the first woman justice of the peace in the United States rests upon the shoulders of Mrs. Catherine W. McCullough of Chicago. She has been practicing law in Chicago for the last 40 years.

Though she never had boys or girls of her own, Mrs. Josephine L. Petit of Fitchburg, Mass., has had more than 300 children to call her mother. She and her husband take care of the New England French-American Home.

The Woman's Bar association of Washington, D. C., is making a determined effort to put through legislation amending the inheritance laws of the District of Columbia, so that female relatives shall be on an equal footing with the male.

Dr. Elizabeth A. Sullivan, wife of a Boston physician, has been chosen by the welfare societies of that city to do mental diagnosis of difficult cases dealing with estranged parents and unruly children.

At the age of 15 years Barbara Hutton, granddaughter of the late Frank W. Woolworth, with $30,000,000 in her own right, is considered the richest young girl in the country.

For the first time in the history of congress a woman now holds a position as bill clerk in that body. She is Miss Mary Simpson of Vermont, and her salary is $2,800.

Answers to Love Queries

By Doris Blake

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Opened a Letter.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl almost 18 and I go with a fellow 21 who is an organist. We have been going together five months and we are engaged.

"He has some girl from another city write to him and has the letters sent to my house.

"The other day a letter came and I opened it because I was jealous.

"Please tell me what to do. He knows I opened it. HORSES."

You made a ghastly mistake in opening mail addressed to another, Horses. He has good reason to resent your action, and it may take him some time to overlook the offense. You should have given him his mail, explaining your disapproval of such a correspondence, dear.

There Are Others.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl in my teens. I am in love with a young man who showers his attentions on my friend. But I am head over heels in love with him, and I know his head is just turned by her baby ways. I would greatly appreciate your advice in my case.

"HEARTBROKEN."

You can't expect success in winning a man who is so deeply interested in another, Heartbroken. Do the sensible thing and put all thoughts of him out of your head—hard though it may be. There are others, dear.

She Forgot Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going out with a girl for nearly six months. Three weeks ago she told me she was going on her vacation. Since then I never have heard from her. She told me she was going to write to me every three days, but I didn't hear from her. CURLY HAIRED CHARLIE."

She must have been fickle to forget you so quickly, Charlie. Don't feel too badly over the slight, as there are others to take her place.

A Word Would Help.

"Dear Miss Blake: I went with a young man for a year and thought there was nobody like him. I had an argument with him, because I believed things people told me.

"I do not go around with any boy friends at all. I still care for the former one. When he sees me he speaks and is on friendly terms. Do you think we will ever go together again and do you think he still cares for me? SO LONESOME."

Such a lack of confidence is mighty disconcerting, Lonesome. Don't you think a word from you, showing you still believed in him, would do much to reinstate your friendship, dear? Try it.

Overcome Competition.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a girl over a year and love her. Lately she's been telling me she doesn't know if she'll see me or not. She often receives telephone calls from other boys and doesn't care for me any more. Please advise.

"DOWNHEARTED."

Aren't you jealous because others appreciate her good qualities, too, Downhearted? Show your metal by proving you're the best man. Don't lose heart because of competition. Meet and overcome it.

Do as She Does.

"Dear Miss Blake: My girl tells me she goes out with other men, but if she ever found out I went out with other women she would be through with me. SHEIK."

What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Don't let her tell you differently or keep you from seeing other girls.

Sick Stomach Teaches Her a Good Lesson

Miss Jeanne Ginsberg, Bronx, N. Y., writes: "I had become accustomed to arising each day with a heavy head, dizzy, and a bad taste in my mouth. My bowels were frequently clogged and constipated. One day I became so sick to my stomach I had to leave an important job and go home. I tried CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. I feel greatly relieved since using them and whenever my stomach and head goes bad I certainly know what to do."

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are sugar coated, small, easy to swallow, purely vegetable, and relieve the bowels free from pain. They tonic the system as they are purely vegetable and do not contain Mercury, or poisonous drugs.

HORSEMANSHIP

----- How to Ride -----
A Series for Men and Women

By CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS
11th U. S. Cavalry

Horseback riding is being revived with increasing interest throughout the land, so expert advice on riding style and horsemanship generally will be of interest to those who, either as novices or experts, seek such recreation for its healthfulness and for the real joy it affords. The following is the first of a series of articles by Capt. Fenton Stratton Jacobs, United States cavalry, who has had considerable experience in horse training, and who is a graduate of the famous cavalry school at Fort Riley, Kas. Capt. Jacobs' articles will deal with the subject from various angles. He will stress the proper way to ride in order to obtain the greatest enjoyment with the least tiresome effect on horse and rider, as now taught at the cavalry school.

NO sport in recent years has made greater strides in popularity than horseback riding. Why? Because there is no other sport in which men, women and children, alike, can combine pleasure and physical stimulant. The American College of Surgeons, through its late president, Dr. A. J. Ochsner, M. D., LL. D., once said: "There is no other form of exercise that so fully affects every nerve and every organ of the human body in a healthful way as does horseback riding." Dr. Andrew A. Gour writes: "The visible results of the sport are the distinctive bearing and graceful carriage of the person who rides regularly—bright, clear eyes and healthful complexion."

The word horsemanship is as often abused as are the horses in the hands of the unskilled. Horsemanship includes the care and management of horses, as well as being skilled in the training and riding of horses. Frequently, practice alone may produce individual success, and a man on a certain horse may produce astounding results even in violation of well established principles; while on another horse and using other equipment he would be helpless. No intelligent horseman ever claims for his own method the A and Z of equitation, for it is the belief of all who are not hide bound by prejudice that the method of riding, the bit and saddle and breed of a horse are all dependent upon local conditions and the work required.

Should Women Ride Astride?

Before launching into the specific details of our "seat," which will more nearly than any other I have seen produce the ideal, a relaxed rider on a relaxed horse, I wish to discuss at this time certain generalities which so often have been made the subject of debate.

Should women and girls ride astride? Read farther. For three years I was in charge of equitation and tactics at the University of Arizona, Tucson. During that time I had approximately 600 co-eds from nearly every state in the Union, in addition to the 2,000 or more cadets, in my riding classes. They rode the "McClellan" army saddle and the English, French and American flat saddle astride. I gave them as nearly as I could the so-called "Fort Riley" seat. The advanced class included high school work, jumping four feet, and cross country galloping over the roughest terrain in that vicinity. And the girls gave a better exhibition than did the cadets taking the parallel course.

So there is no question in my mind as to whether a woman shall ride astride a horse. It may be interesting to note that a sixth century vase found at Daphnae, lower Egypt, shows a woman riding astride. It has been proved by other sources that women rode astride until the twelfth century. A pillion or pad was then introduced on which a lady rode sidewise behind her husband and steadied herself by holding on to his belt.

History of the Side Saddle.

In "Readings in Social Problems," by Albert Benedict Wolfe, we find that in Europe, several hundred years ago, riding sidewise by women with feet enveloped in a voluminous skirt, was popularized solely because a French princess set the fashion to conceal her deformed spine. In England the side saddle as well as many other other styles and customs was introduced by Anne, daughter of the king of Bohemia, first queen of Richard II., in 1388.

The side saddle when first fully developed had two heads or pommels between which the right leg was supported, the support of the left being the stirrup. The third pommel or leaping head, against which the left leg rests, was, it is said, invented as the result of a match between two gentlemen riders to ride a steeplechase on side saddles. The winner had provided himself with the additional support for his left leg. At first the leaping head was used only in the hunting field and the double "cow horn" was retained; however, as its uselessness became apparent the second pommel disappeared.

Again, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, the side saddle was popularized because a member of her royal household had a withered right limb, which was not noticeable when she rode sidewise wearing a full skirt. Thus we find the side saddle owes its origin to fashion and to the camouflage of infirmities, rather than to a scientific development to benefit women.

CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS.

Riding Has Many Benefits.

In America the women who lived in the west, where the country was rough, and sports such as shooting, contest riding, and racing were done on horseback, were the first to take up the cross seat; because it is the natural, safer, and more efficient way to ride.

For accurate riding, the leg around the horse—thigh, knee, calf contact seat (which in a later installment will be discussed in detail) is obviously more sure of the desired result than the tapping of a riding crop on the right or "off side," necessary when riding the side saddle, to turn the horse on the forehand to the right, on two tracks to the left, or any other movement requiring displacement of the hindquarters to the left. And most important, it enables both rider and horse to be symmetrically developed.

Summing up the question, it has been my observation that horseback riding astride, for girls, aside from being an attractive, clean and exhilarating sport, has been highly beneficial for those who master the art. It stimulates self-confidence, daring, consideration for others, aggressiveness, quick thinking, coördination of mind and body, relaxation, a better posture, and, as President Wilson once said, "The outside of a horse is good for the inside of a man"—or woman. However, regardless of method, style or whatnot, let us ride—ride as often as possible, for the good of this and the generation to follow.

ISN'T IT ODD

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the aphids, those tiny insects that live on the tips of tender plants and the under sides of leaves, should go along for generations without wings and then, of a sudden, finding is necessary to move, should overnight equip themselves with the means of flight!

The aphids are the sapsuckers of the garden, the tiny fellows who settle down, drive their beaks into the bark until they reach the sap, and sit there contentedly for a lifetime drinking their fill. So sure are they that they will not want to move that, in shedding their skins as is the way of insects as they grow, some of them cast off both legs and cling there blind and helpless for the rest of their lives.

Clinging thus, the helpless mothers give birth to their young. These have legs and eyes and run quite actively about until they get located and get their connections made with the sap streams.

The processes are repeated until, perhaps, the plant harboring these tiny creatures gets to have so many of them that they drink all its sap. There is none left to nourish its leaves and fruit and it languishes and dies. Thus the aphids prove very harmful to plant life.

But the aphids themselves, having killed the plant that furnished their food, find themselves facing an emergency. They have got to go away from there and find a new source of food. Possibly it is a cherry tree in which they have been living. Possibly the season has so advanced that a hop field near by is full of young and tender plants. If the aphids could but get from the cherry tree to the hop field they would again be in clover.

It is when faced with this emergency that the insects perform the miracle. All the generations of the summer have been quite wingless. One watching them would long ago have written them down as insects without wings. But here, of a sudden, they need the means of flight that they may preserve themselves. Of a sudden a generation of aphids appears that is possessed of wings. These they unfurl and fly away to the hop field. After the journey they bore into the streams of hop sap, make their connections, shed their traveling skin, wings and all, and again settle down to a quiet life.

But when, later on, the hop plants mature and begin to dry out, a new generation of winged aphids appears and they fly away to some other plant where the sap still flows.

The barometer on the side porch hung rather high and Rowen saw his father take it down one morning to get a more accurate reading.

So Rowen proceeded to do the same thing later, and it fell from his little hands and broke. He ran to his mother with a fragment in his hands. "M-mother, I b-busted the weather," he sobbed. C. M.

"A little girl named Susie took the part of the "queen." When the play came off and we had come to the part where the queen enters the scene, she was slow in coming, and thinking there was a hitch somewhere I said, sotto voce: "Enter, Susie."

"But Susie piped up, much affronted and excited, and said: "You shouldn't say 'Susie,' I'm the queen!"

"It brought down the house." We are "booked" for another night, and Susie's reputation as an actress is speeding towards stardom. H. K.

"The workmen had been grading for a new street past the house and Lloyd, aged 3, had been told to play in the yard and not go out near the place where the men were at work, but during the day he managed to get out there, and was having a grand time when his mother discovered him.

"'Lloyd, I thought I told you to stay in the yard.'

"'I is in the yard. They took it all out in the street, so I had to go out there to play in it, didn't I?'" C. E. O.

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

By KEMBLE

His Ma called him Robin; his Dad called him Son;
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun.
So he called himself Robinson Grewso.

THE sun had been up for several hours when Robin and Chin-Chin finally wakened. Robin rubbed his eyes and looked around.

"Where are we?" he asked, in a small, frightened voice.

"I have an idea we're right here." Chin-Chin tried to laugh as he said it, but the laugh wasn't in him. He was too scared.

"Here, have a soldier."

They ate their breakfast without saying a word to each other. Then Robin said, very seriously: "Chin-Chin, we must start right out and discover what lives on this island. I'll take the gun and the jelly beans, and you fly ahead and if you see anything, just drop to the ground and flap your wings three times and I'll creep up and shoot."

The parrot did as he was told, and as he neared the top of a little hill he dropped to the ground. Flap, flap, flap went his wings. Robin crept up and looked.

"A cannibal. That's what he is," gasped Robin.

Down in the hollow sat a fat little colored boy, eating chocolate soldiers. Robin rushed at him, waving his gun and yelling like an Indian.

"Shoot a jelly bean at him to scare him," screamed Chin-Chin.

The fat little colored boy rose and stood perfectly still.

"What you-all acting so foolish about?" he grinned. "I ain't going to hurt you," and he danced up and down as he stretched out his chubby hand.

"Here, have a soldier. I play with them first; then I eat them. They don't mind at all. I used to lose them all the time, so now I eat them. Then I know just where they are."

Robin could not help laughing at this.

"You're not such a bad cannibal, after all. What's your name?" he said.

"Ain't got no name. Never had none," grinned the little darky.

"Well, I'll give you one," said Robin. "The same name that is in my book at home. I'll call you Friday."

"No, no," screamed Chin-Chin. "It's perfectly foolish to call him Friday. Call him Chocolate Sundae."

"My, my, but that's a sweet name. I never ate one, but I've heard about them. Now you-all come up to my camp and I'll show you how I live."

Sundae led the way, and soon Robin and Chin-Chin found themselves seated on a big mat made of long grass, eating popcorn balls.

"Where do you get these nice popcorn balls?" asked Chin-Chin.

"I'll show you," and Sundae jumped up and took them to his "plant ground." "First I want you to see my digger bug at work."

The biggest beetle Robin had ever seen was busy making holes in the earth. He would poke his nose down and push the dirt back with his claws, then he'd drop a seed in each hole and cover it up and stamp on it.

"He's planting for my next crop. He keeps busy, he does."

Over in another field were cornstalks nearly ten feet high. On the stalks the ears of corn were popping and scattering the big white kernels all about them.

"The sun does that," said Sundae, and he was very proud. "You see, the sun is my best friend. He wakes me up in the morning and tells me when to go to bed at night, and he keeps me warm and makes a fire for me so I can cook my food, and he does lots of kind things just like this."

Sundae gathered up the popcorn and dipped it into a bucket filled with maple sirup, and made some more nice fresh popcorn balls.

"You know, I have a friendly woodpecker that taps the trees for me so I can get this maple sirup. All the birds and beasts on this island are friendly. They won't hurt you if you are kind to them. And funny! Smoky mackerel! But some of them just make you die a-laughing. Funniest things you ever saw. You just stick around and you'll have a good time."

"O, we'll stick," said Robin, "won't we, Chin-Chin?"

"You bet," said Chin-Chin. "We're the sticky kind, especially when we're eating popcorn balls."

Eating popcorn balls.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

HERE'S A CHALLENGE EASY TO MEET.

THERE are many, I know, able to help the young girl who wrote this letter:

"Dear Miss Brown: Owing to a great deal of illness and misfortune for the last six months, we are almost penniless. I am 21 and the oldest in a family of six girls. My mother is a widow. Can any of your readers help us with clothing? We can remodel them, and anything given us will be greatly appreciated. V. P."

Isn't this a challenge to all of us—and one of the easiest chances to help that we could imagine? It is the same story that causes so much misery in the world—illness—too much expense at once, and a breakdown of courage and spirit under the burden.

The case is only one of scores we have on record right now, where illness is falling with crushing force on families whose savings have been exhausted by illness or misfortunes, and whose earnings leave no margin above current living expenses. And when we think of all the clothing outgrown and discarded every day in Chicago, is there any reason why we should allow this hardship to continue bearing upon these families?

There's the happiness of giving and a suggestion to you, my friends. The appeals do not ask for real sacrifice; outgrown clothing still good but which has outlived its usefulness to you means so much and fulfills long felt wants in many cases. Ask yourself whether you can afford to miss the happiness that will come to the recipient and to you from meeting the need. If you do, I'm certain you'll be among those who help.

Song Books to Pass On.

"Our church has four sets of song books, with 24 to 30 in each set. We will gladly pass them on to some organization who can pay the postage on them. MRS. G. B."

Some Sunday school or mission could make splendid use of these song books. If you would like to have them, let me know at once.

Boys Want a Wagon.

"I am a widow and the mother of two boys. They want a wagon to play with and I can't afford to buy it for them, as I am just starting to keep house. I would appreciate anything in the line of furniture or rugs, also. "MRS. H. A."

Children outgrow their playthings so quickly, I am sure there will be a wagon for these small boys. If you have any furniture for the mother, let us know about that, too.

Deserted Mother.

"A young mother with two babies has been deserted by her husband. She has been sick with heart trouble, but hopes to be able to go to work soon. They need clothing badly. She takes size 38 and the children are a girl, 3, and a boy, 2. "MRS. E. O."

This young mother's chances for finding a position probably would be improved greatly if she had some of the clothing you are about to discard. Perhaps you'll have some for the babies, too.

Hard Working Youngster.

"I am just a poor working boy, therefore I come to you for help. I have been promised a job working evenings in a grocery store, but I must have a bicycle to deliver groceries, and I wonder if some one of your readers has one he no longer wants. R. C."

An ambitious lad is this, who could make splendid use of the bicycle you've outgrown. May he have it?

For Youthful Actors.

"The high school in which I teach is putting on 'The Willow Plate,' and some of the pupils cannot afford the Chinese costumes needed. Perhaps some readers have costumes and queues they will be willing to pass on to our school. S. P."

Have you a mandarin coat or a queue to give these high school students? They'll be quite necessary if the performance is to be a success.

Widow Needs Coat and Dress.

"Do you think you could get me a black coat and dress, size 40? My husband is dead and I have a broken ankle, so I can't work. MRS. D. S."

Somewhere, I know, there must be a black coat and a black dress in this poor widow's size, which she might be wearing. Have you either of these garments to give her?

Dog to Give Away.

"I have a white fox terrier, female, clean and intelligent which I will give to some one who can give it a good home. D. K."

Here's a lovely little pet for some one who'd like to have a dog. Would you?

Two Gifts.

"I have a gas iron I would be glad to give any one who could make use of it. I also have a large green glass dome suitable for a dining room electric light fixture. MRS. H. F."

This iron would lighten your work considerably when laundry day comes 'round and the dome would be a great improvement to your dining room.

How I Dress My Hair

By Edna Wallace Hopper

The thousands who see me daily on the stage wonder at my beautiful hair. It is wavy, glossy and abundant. Nearly everyone thinks that some wonderful hair dresser gives it daily care.

Not so—I'm too busy for that. I never go to a hair dresser for a Marcel wave. I simply apply twice weekly a hair dress which great experts made for me. It is not sticky, not greasy. Before they made it I never dreamed a liquid could do so much. Now all toilet counters supply it as Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75c.

Nothing else I know gives a girl or woman so much added loveliness at once. No one can resist it when she knows. My guarantee is enclosed with every bottle, so it costs you nothing if it doesn't please. Go try it at my expense.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

On the Food Piece Called a Sandwich Is Modeled an Array of Edibles Ranging from Humble Snacks to Superdelicacies

By Jane Eddington.

NO ADEQUATE classification of sandwiches can be made, yet we are tempted to make the following:

1. Plain cold sandwiches, or two slices of bread, preferably well buttered, with slices of meat—beef, ham, chicken, etc.—or American or Swiss cheese, or some mince for a filling. And, best of all, often plain bread and butter sandwiches — sometimes substantial, sometimes of the thinnest slices of bread that can be cut.

2. Plain hot sandwiches. A favorite humble form of this type is the sandwich filled with slices of roast beef with a hot gravy over it, but many other sorts have been devised. The summer salad is freshened up often with a slice of hot bacon or of thin broiled ham or cold cooked ham sliced, heated up, or made like broiled meat.

3. Open sandwiches. Here we have possibilities and suggestions. The ship's steward on the great ocean liners serves these. In color and design they furnish interest as an afternoon tea refreshment. The relish called a canape is on this model. In both these cases the size is small, but quite large open sandwiches may be made for luncheon purposes and several served on a plate—one more like a relish, another like a main dish, another much like a salad, and yet another like a dessert.

4. Storied sandwiches. For these more than the original two slices of bread are used, or from three up. These range in variety from the hearty club to the tea delicacy of many thinnest slices of bread with fillings like the thinnest of icings, and these, like cakes, are sometimes finished with pipings of cream cheese, or butter or even of a fondant.

5 Fancy sandwiches. Here we have a medley of true sandwich forms with great variety secured through fillings of the most divers sorts, fish and meat pastes, spicy mixtures and sweet fillings.

6. Dessert sandwiches. In these cake or wafers take the place of bread, and they are only related to the sandwich by their form. Commercially the ice cream sandwich is of this type. Slices of sponge cake toasted, or not, with slices of a brick of ice cream make a pleasant dessert. Some of the elaborate puff paste forms are really on the sandwich model, and so is a cream puff and, for that matter, a layer cake.

Making Plain Sandwiches.

It is a great advantage to cream butter before trying to spread bread with it. Tough crusts must be cut off for politeness' sake, but it is better to leave them on unless the sandwiches are to be closely wrapped, especially if they are to be kept for a half day. This is why rolls and biscuits and even cream puffs replace the slices of bread acceptably. The crusts keep the bread from drying out. Unless the sandwiches are to be put into a press, it is best to use several small slices of meat for filling them, because otherwise all the meat may be pulled out with the first bite.

The meat should not be sliced until the bread has been buttered, and it is best to have each slice of bread buttered because thus the meat is protected, or kept from drying out. It is, in other words, briefly potted.

Sandwich Breads.

Commercially, in this day, there is the special sandwich loaf of white bread, but one of the best ways to keep sandwiches from being monotonously tiresome is to vary the breads with every picnic, or tea party, by using different breads and to depend as much on the dark breads as upon the white.

Home made oatmeal bread that will cut as thin as a wafer makes a delicious foundation for a chopped olive and mayonnaise filling. A good Boston brown bread that will cut in thin slices is wonderfully appetizing with almost all the cream cheese fillings, and in fact is excellent with a thick sour cream filling which old fashioned people might have a prejudice concerning until they tasted the mixture.

Cheese Spiced Sandwich Filling.

One pound of American cheese, two or three beaten eggs, one-half cup of cream, salt and pepper. Cut the cheese fine. Beat the eggs and mix the cream and the cheese with them. Put all in a double boiler or over a gentle fire and stir constantly until the cheese melts. Add the seasonings after taking it from the fire, and it is well to include a few grains of red pepper. Pour into a jar and cool. When it is cool it should be the consistency of soft butter. If it should happen to curdle in cooking, or if we wish to have it extra smooth it should be sieved. It will keep for a week and is An economical way of using cheese, more so than using American cheese sliced.

Stiff Cheese Fillings in General.

The open cheese sandwich for luncheon is excellent, and may be used as the main part, or as a dessert part. In the latter case sprinkle some sugar over the cheese as it melts on the top of a slice of bread which has been toasted on one side, before the small chips of cheese are put on the other and melted under the broiler. Well pressed cheese sandwiches are dipped like French toast and heated up in the same way that it is.

The Cream Cheese Fillings.

Variety in these perhaps began when the cream cheese was mixed with pimento purees, or the red ingredient chopped, and open sandwiches fixed up in all sorts of fancy ways with this combination. Sometimes the cheese was put on the thin and fancy cut of bread, and the pimento cut fine was scattered over it, or crosses made, or lattices. Cream cheese mixed with green sweet pepper chopped fine—the pepper is excellent, also, with butter—makes an attractive filling. Jam and jellies to color the cheese, or dates to make it sweet and tasty or nuts to make it more substantial and some nuts to make it heartier, are other ways of using this exceedingly versatile ingredient in sandwich making. Quite plain it is used for many storied sandwiches well pressed and then sliced to look like a slice of layer cake.

Egg Sandwich Fillings.

Hard but gently cooked eggs, chopped and buttered while hot, salted just a bit, may be used for a thick filling for two slices of well buttered bread. They can be made ideally palatable. Grated cheese mixed with melted butter and mashed egg yolk makes a good variation of this sandwich.

Pressed Eggs.

Hard cook the eggs, drop them into cold water, drain and dry and shell and chop fine with salt, pepper, a bit of prepared mustard, and one teaspoon of melted butter to each egg used. Mix these together and press them into a small square loaf. Slices of these with lettuce dipped in a salad dressing and put together just before eating make a hearty and also a pretty sandwich.

Nut Fillings.

Almost any of the nuts, chopped and salted and mixed to a paste with cream or butter, make a good sandwich filling, without any additions, but figs, or raisins, or dates may be combined with the nuts, or chopped celery. For tea sandwiches almonds blanched and pounded with sugar, then mixed to a paste with rich cream, with a bit of salt added, may be most dainty. A piece of lettuce with the nut fillings always gives character.

Peanut Sandwich Filling or Butter.

Pound or chop home shelled roasted peanuts fine, mix them with cream, or melted butter, or even a fine oil, to the consistency of a good spread.

Peanut Caramels and Sandwich Filling.

Cook to soft ball [238] stage one cup of sugar, six tablespoons of milk, three or six tablespoons of peanut butter. Be sure the sugar is dissolved before the whole boils. Cool when taken from the fire, and then beat to the opera caramel stage, adding a few drops of vanilla, if you wish. With a sweet bread of the type of a coffee cake or bun this makes a delicious filling, or it may be set and cut into caramels. This recipe will make filling enough for from fifteen to twenty large sandwiches, best for a dessert, perhaps. But it is a bit heavy, and should not be indulged in by some people. After a light meal it will be a good dessert for a child, who is likely to love it. Cut the bread thin, thinly butter, and then crush the caramels for it, if that form has been made.

Sweet Fillings in General.

Chocolate drops crushed, soft caramels and bon bons, and all such make pleasant variation of the perhaps childish luncheon of bread and butter with sugar.

The Green Sandwiches.

These sandwiches and those of tomato and cucumber have the disadvantage of needing to be made just as they are used, but lettuce leaves, cress, nasturtium leaves [a sort of cress] and even the blossom dipped in mayonnaise, or a cooked salad dressing, make delightful fillings for tea sandwiches cut in strips, or crescents, or small rounds or squares. Nut bread with any of these fillings, perhaps the quick home made sort, is dainty. The fine stems of lettuce cut in thin disks and mixed with fine celery, finely chopped olives and perhaps a few nut meats can be mixed with mayonnaise for an acceptable and inexpensive filling.

Tomato Sandwiches.

Slices of tomato of a fine spicy quality—some do not have this quality—is without any addition of seasoning an agreeably cool filling for a sandwich But it may be combined daintily with chopped chives or have some crisp bacon powdered over it. Or it may be mixed with just a bit of mayonnaise and a chopped caper or two.

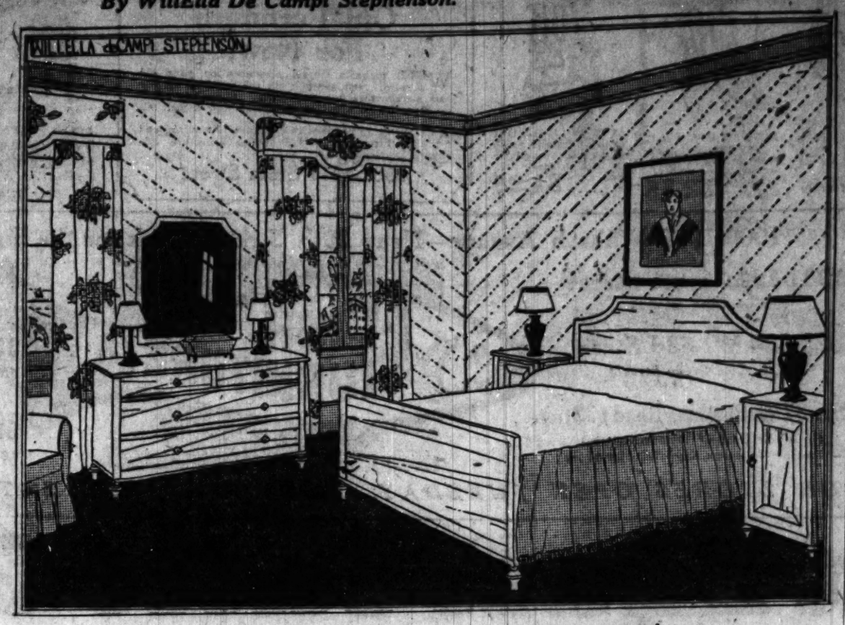
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

This Suburban Home Is Beautifully Carried Out and Is Perfect in Every Detail.



Simplicity is the keynote of the young man's bedroom shown today.

INDIVIDUALITY may be as strongly expressed in the decorations and furnishings of a house as in the actual manners and speech of those people who occupy it. In order properly to serve as a home for the owner, the house must be more than a mere dwelling place. It must satisfy, in its plan and design, in its equipment and decorative treatment, the individual requirements and personal needs of those who live in it. The furnishing of a house affords wonderful opportunity for the expression of originality.

Beautifully carried out and perfect in every detail is a suburban home which has just been completed. The house is divided in the center by a spacious entrance and stair hall. A lovely scenic paper is used in panels on the walls. It is done in tones of ecru and ivory. Woodwork is painted ivory. Taupe carpeting is used on the floor and stairs. At the windows are ivory silk and wool casement cloth glass curtains, beneath draperies of sepia colored velvet. A Queen Anne sofa at one side of the hall is upholstered in soft red damask. Against the opposite wall space is a console table, flanked by a pair of William and Mary chairs. A lovely mirror hangs above the table.

An open doorway leads into the living room. Here there are many windows, and the room is flooded with light. Consequently, a dark wall covering combining amethyst and sepia is used satisfactorily. Several portraits in dull gold frames show to advantage against this background. The woodwork is painted a soft cream color. Natural colored silk and wool casement cloth glass curtains are edged with a narrow block fringe of the same color. Amethyst velvet makes the draperies. Drawn up near an open fireplace is a comfortable sofa upholstered in a deep amethyst block patterned mohair. One large arm chair is done in an exceptionally handsome tapestry, and another is in the drapery material. The remainder of the furniture is mahogany. Tables holding lamps and decorative accessories are conveniently placed. Deep amethyst carpeting is supplemented by interesting Oriental rugs.

Adjoining this living room is a delightful library. Woodwork and the many built-in, open book shelves are finished in dark walnut. A coarse ecru grass cloth wall covering is used. At the windows are curtains of heavy ecru linen, decorated with crewel embroidery in deep, rich tones. They are finished at the edges with a thick, short, worsted fringe in many colors. Pulley cords are arranged so the curtains may be drawn together at will. A large wing chair is upholstered in the same embroidered linen. Matching the deep red of the crewel work is the velvet upholstery of a comfortable sofa. Deep blue wool damask covers a luxurious arm chair. Lamp shades and shields are made of parchment, decorated with bands of color, matching those in the draperies. A full, rich tone is given to the room by means of a large Bokhara rug.

The dining room and a charming little breakfast room are across the hall. In the dining room, woodwork and dado are painted cream color. The wall space above is covered with an interesting Japanese tea box paper in gold. It is finished with a coat of shellac, which gives it a mellow tone and a most substantial feeling. Cream colored silk and wool casement cloth, like that in the living room and hall, is used for glass curtains. Having the glass curtains alike in these three rooms which face the front of the house, produces a pleasing result from the exterior. Ample variety is given in the draperies. In this room they are made of a sumptuous black and gold damask. Chinese Chippendale furniture is used. A Chinese rug, in soft colors, almost completely covers the floor.

For informal use is the lovely little breakfast room. Here the walls are done in a dull gold grass cloth. Woodwork is painted sage green. Gold colored gauze makes glass curtains. Sage green and gold sunfast, in a damask pattern, is used for long draperies. The furniture is painted sage green, high lighted with gold, and decorated with floral motifs. Plate glass protects the table top. Chair seats are upholstered in mohair, in a jacquard pattern, in sage green and gold color. The floor is made of deep green square tiles, set in old ivory mortar. It is unrugged.

All of the bedrooms are charming. In the largest of them is used a wall paper showing clusters of flowers on an ivory ground. Woodwork is painted ivory. Glass curtains are of ivory point d'esprit. Changeable dull rose and gold taffeta make the draperies and covers for the twin beds. A Dresden lamp, on the night stand, has a soft rose silk shade, decorated with French silk flowers. Shields on the side lights and a shade for the drop light over the dressing table are made to match. The furniture, of French design, is made of walnut. A large, plain, mulberry rug covers the floor, leaving a border of about eighteen inches around the edge.

Expressly furnished for the young man of the house is the bedroom shown in today's illustration. The wall paper is in two tones of gray. Draperies at the windows are of a semi-glazed chintz, flowered, on a blue-green ground, and topped by shaped lambrequins, which are finished with an edging of plain raspberry red chintz. Glass curtains are dispensed with. The furniture is mahogany. A cover on the bed is made of raspberry red poplin, piped with blue-green, and finished with a narrow, multi-colored upholsterers' fringe. A large, comfortable arm chair, upholstered in the flowered chintz, is accompanied by a low table, which holds books and a lamp. Deep red pottery lamps, on commodes at each side of the bed, have parchment shades. Plain blue-green chenille, in a deep, dark tone, covers the floor.

American colonial furniture, in a modern adaptation, furnishes the young daughter's room. The wall paper shows tiny sprigs of flowers on a pale gray ground. Woodwork is ivory. At the windows are ivory silk gauze glass curtains. Producing an unusual effect are overdraperies of silk gauze, showing fairylike rainbow colors in an ombré treatment. They are finished at the edges with a French ribbon trim. Wooden cornices topping these draperies are painted leaf green, outlined with a fine band of straw color and decorated with floral medallions.

The bed and one chair are painted in the same way. Plain leaf green furniture is made of maple. Leaf green wool chenille rugs are used.

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh, really! It is so easy and doesn't hurt one bit!

Drop "Freezone" on that old, bothersome corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you lift that sore, touchy corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and calluses—Try it!

Gray Hair Tinted FOR 50¢

In Just 5 Minutes

Why pay $10 to the hair dresser?

Don't throw your money away by needlessly paying from ten to fifteen dollars to a hairdresser to restore your gray, faded, or dingy hair to its youthful shade and lustre. Every woman can now immediately bring back the original color to her hair right in the privacy of her own home—for a few cents.

BROWNATONE, the one guaranteed harmless hair tint, in just five minutes, will transform gray or streaky hair to any beautiful shade that you favor. And there isn't the slightest danger of poisoning, which sometimes results from the harmful dyes used by many professionals. Just sit before your dressing table and brush BROWNATONE through the gray strands. Immediately the color will start to develop. Even your closest friends will be unable to detect that your hair is tinted.

BROWNATONE is so perfect—so precise in shade—so easy to apply—permeates gray hair in such a natural way—that without any previous experience, you are sure to obtain professional results.

BROWNATONE is guaranteed harmless to hair, scalp or skin. It is so scientific in formula that self hair tinting treatments cannot be discovered in strongest lights—even in sunlight. It is the one bottle preparation that does not require the use of harmful peroxide, which must first be applied with many hair coloring preparations.

Test it for yourself. You will be amazed and delighted at the marvelous results you will so easily obtain. Any shade desired from two colors. (Blonde to Medium Brown), (Dark Brown to Black). Sold Back Guarantee. At toilet counters. Two and $1.50—the larger size containing five times as much.

They Say:

"I can recommend BROWNATONE in the highest terms. It is easily the best thing for the purpose that I ever used." — Mrs. C. E. Goodlet, Strother, S. C.

"I never found its equal for tinting hair and stopping hair from falling out. I have used BROWNATONE about ten years and can give it a 100 percent endorsement." — H. Buterbaugh, Commodore, Pa.

Easy to Apply, Wonderful in Results

BROWNATONE penetrates all of the hair. It does not wash off—will not fade or rub because the hair absorbs it. Only one application is necessary. It permits waving, marcelling, curling, shampooing and is even unaffected by perspiration. Further applications needed only as new hair grows.

MY GREATEST THRILL—A Boy's Lucky Break

My Greatest Thrill

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter, we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

A Practical Joker.

I was visiting my girl friend whose brother is a great cut-up and keeps the family in round eyed terror of his next prank. We were sitting up late telling ghost stories and weird tales and finally Gracie and I went upstairs to bed. We felt our way along the dark hall and into the bedroom where we groped around for the chain that pulls the electric light.

Suddenly my fingers clutched something soft and warm and furry. With a wild scream I fled from the room and down stairs with Gracie tearing along behind me, sobbing at some unknown danger. Terrified, we waited while the family investigated.

Result: Brother had tied a dead mouse to the light cord with a fancy red ribbon! I. S. J.

In a Runaway Car.

By far the "greatest thrill" of my life occurred last summer while visiting some friends in Denver. We had motored to the mountains and spent a wonderful day and were returning by way of Bear Creek canyon in the evening. The driver was having trouble with the car when a motor cop stopped to help us, and suggested pushing the machine over the edge of a descent and that the momentum of the car would start the engine.

Well, it did, but imagine our horror when we found the driver had no control of the car. The brakes wouldn't work, a rear hub was broken and we were a runaway machine with the mountains on one side, the canyon 2,000 feet deep on the other, a sharp curve about 100 yards ahead—every revolution of the wheels taking us nearer to certain death.

I covered my eyes for the end, but Fate was kind, for the driver, seeing a little jut in the side of the mountain, managed to turn the car in and the impact killed the engine. We were saved. K. C.

Working on the Railroad.

Years ago I was working for a short while with a gang of hobos laying steel on a railroad between St. Louis and Cape Girardeau.

On my first morning the boss sent a number of us up the track with a half dozen steel rails on a push car. One of the men was supposed to have charge of the rest of us.

The region was hilly and the road rather crooked, so that you could not see far up the track. Presently we were startled by the whistle of a freight train and at the same time we saw it rounding the curve altogether too close for comfort.

The "straw" boss rushed forward, frantically waving a red flag. There was nothing for the rest of us to do but scatter, which we did like scared chickens.

We left the push car and steel rails on the track. I climbed over the right of way fence and did not feel safe till quite a way beyond it. I never expected anything any more in my life than I did to see those freight cars pile up on top of one another and come rolling down the embankment.

The engineer set the brakes hard and he and the fireman got down on the lower steps of the engine ready to jump. The engine hit the push car, shoving it along ahead. Some of the rails got jammed through the bars of the pilot and got tangled up in the machinery of the engine. One rail was bent like a fish hook. But the engine did not leave the track and it presently came to a stop. It was disabled, though, and another had to be sent for to take the train on.

As one engineer expressed it, "A fellow thinks some pretty d——d funny things when something of this kind is about to happen." C. J. B.

In a Storm.

My greatest thrill happened about four years ago. I went boat riding with a friend of mine who was eight years older than I. We started up the river and had gone about two miles when a storm came up.

I became frightened and hollered. In a few minutes the wind blew the boat over, throwing us in the stream. I could not swim, but my friend could swim a little. He grabbed hold of me, but the wind was so strong he could not make much headway. He managed to get hold of a floating log and by this method we were both saved. R. J. H.

Child in a Runaway.

My friend, who lives on a farm, asked me to take charge of her four year old child at her home while she and her husband went to the city for a day. The little boy asked for permission to ride into the corn field with the hired man as had been his habit of doing.

The man lifted the child on the wagon and stepped back to pick up his gloves which he had dropped. The horses suddenly became frightened and started running wildly down the lane.

My greatest thrill was one of terror to see the child intrusted to my care being carried swiftly down the road and expecting any moment to see him fall and be run over, or to have the wagon strike a stump and turn over on the child. Grateful indeed was I to see the little boy running to meet me uninjured after the team had been caught. L. M. W.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness.

A New Skin — Your Own! — at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

You Look Years Younger—Assist Nature if she needs your help. Obtain an ounce of Mercolized Wax from your druggist or department store, use as directed—and you will bless the day that you made the acquaintance of this wonder working product.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by SARA MOORE

CALLED!

He was a gay philanderer;
Primrose the paths he tarried;
Wooing all beauty ardently;
Sighing—"If I weren't married."

Now is the rascal well reformed—
Simple the fact that forced him—
Dares he no pleasant dalliance,
Now that his wife's divorced him.

ROUTINE.

Do not let my quick retreat
Chill you or dismay you;
I admit that in the end
I shall not gainsay you.
Never fear that I intend
You shall be rejected;
I'm compelled to be as shy
As you, sir, expected.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

HE'S JESTING.

[I hope the more rounded figure becomes the standard of fashion . . . and that women hasten that time by dressing to enhance, not to hide, their curves.—Paul Poiret, dressmaker, to Liberty.]

While not disputing there are points
To favor forms with subtle curve,
Girls cannot follow Paul's advice;
To do so takes—much more than nerve.
For, as scant fashions run today,
With neck, spine, legs, and arms revealed,
A man can see with half an eye
They've no curves left to keep concealed.

INFORMALLY—No. 1: Yesterday's Assignments - By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

Reminiscences—They Make a Reporter's Life Worth Living

THEY'VE asked me to write a bit about the experiences of of a newspaper woman. Which is an ungallant assignment for any man to give a woman. For it is reasonable to assume that when a woman gets to that point where she begins to chart the reminiscences of the "way-back-when", days she has likewise reached that plateau of complaisancy where tea rests her. I hate tea.

But I like reminiscences.

They are a generous portion of the law of compensation operative in the life of a reporter, man or woman. They are the rhetorical recompenses for many an hour in the rain, for many a door banged in the face, for many an icy word from many an important sub-secretary. And the further into the past the reminiscences retreat, the brighter they polish themselves, until they are likely to make of the teller of the tale, a story book hero, or a cinema heroine, with a routine daily dozen of scoops.

Would you believe it, the girl has fooled them all!

THE STORY BOOK HEROINE

But my autobiographical recollections can't be like that.

I never won the war with any desk sergeant in any police station.

I never got a confession from any beauteous woman who had just murdered her husband.

And never, so long as I live, shall I be able, by glimpsing the right side of a man's nose, to tell whether he poisoned the girl, or just happened to cross the lawn the moment she swallowed it.

Nor was my first assignment that brilliant success they tell about in classes of journalism.

In the story books, I believe, the girl reporter, seeking a job, importunes the managing editor. She is usually an enigmatic combination of a wistful wisp of a girl and a valiant soul who says, with quiet determination, "Mr. Editor, I can do anything a man can do." But the story book managing editor is unmoved. He leaves her sitting out in the corridor, on such a hard wooden bench.

Next day she returns and the next day and the next.

THE GAL FOOLS 'EM

Along about the fourth day (this is in the story book, or the motion picture) the young heroine is again sitting on the hard wooden bench. The managing editor, thinking forever to cure the girl of a longing for newspaper work, gives her an assignment. It's a tough one. So tough that all the veteran men on the staff have tried and failed. The stern managing editor hands it out, with malicious quietness, to the combination Pollyanna and female Mussolini who sharpens her pencil and starts away.

An hour passes, two, three. Presently, along about time for the deadline for the first heroine walks into the office. All the boys are laughing, for they know the plot. But the girl fools them. She sits down before a desk, pounds gently along on the caligraph. Then, nonchalantly, she takes her pieces of copy paper over to the managing editor's desk, and places them there.

The managing editor—and this is usually a splendid scene in the films—jumps up, and jumps around, and expresses all manner of surprised delight. Would you believe it, the gal has fooled them all! She has beaten the veteran reporters, who remember the horse car days. She has scooped the opposition. She has got the diary, or the letters, or the confession, or the interview with the governor, or whatever it was they had given her, as a joke on her. Her story makes page one; it carries the eight column line. Her name, in letters that look as large as the ones that spell out "Soda" in the electric sign across the street from the newspaper office, strides its prideful way across the page.

And that is the girl reporter, in the story book; on the screen.

A MINOR POET

It's a little bit different in Chicago.

For instance, take the case of the newspaper woman whom I know best. Her first assignment didn't hit the front page. It hit a commodious waste basket. This task was to interview a very, very minor British poet who was tarrying the day in the city. He was so minor that he was intrusted to this reporter.

On her way to the interview at the Stratford hotel [if that dates the story at all] this reporter's chief concern was not journalistic, but social. Her motivating thought was not, "Shall I ask him what he thinks of the Spencerian stanza, and short skirts for women?" It was, rather, a perpetual refrain of "I wonder if he'll come down to the lobby or if I'll have to go up to his suite."

He came down.

The reporter had nothing specific to ask the minor poet.

The minor poet has nothing to say to the reporter.

And they both worked at it for hours.

PLENTY OF NOTES

It takes no school of journalism to teach any person, artist, artisan, reporter or carpenter, that he minimizes his opportunity for a free flow of speech if he takes incessant notes, and obviously, on everything his interviewee says. But this reporter didn't even know that simple, universal rule of psychology.

Every time the minor British poet cleared his throat or said the city was "wonderful," she scribbled it down. Two pencil points were worn down, and all the note paper covered with notes. Then she left. She walked loftily down Michigan boulevard, trying not to feel too important.

She heard some one coming along from behind. She felt some one touch her sleeve. There stood the very, very minor British poet. His hands were filled with pieces of yellow copy paper, all written over with pencil. She had left her notes in the lobby of the Stratford hotel, and another piece of great literature was nearly lost, but for the enterprise and fast walking of the poet.

The reporter stuck the notes in her purse and hurried back to the office. She began to write, and write. At last this unabridged encyclopedia of the poet's life and thoughts was finished and turned in. The girl reporter—not, you understand, of the movies or of the story book—went home, confident that journalism had a new lease on life. Next morning she got the paper early. Her story wasn't on the front page, but there was a lot of foreign news about wars and things there. Nor on the second page, but perhaps the important trial had shoved it away from that space.

It wasn't on the third page, nor the fourth, nor the fourteenth. Back she went, to the steamship sailings and the obituary notices. But there wasn't a sentence nor a syllable about the minor, the very minor British poet written by the minor, very minor girl reporter.

AN IRISH IMMIGRANT

Sometimes, even a long time after your first assignment, it's something more direct than a mute waste baskat which puts the chill into the fiction of "experiences of a newspaper woman."

There was that brisk appraisal which I received from a "lady" friend of mine in the steerage of a trans-

She began to write, and write.

Atlantic steamer, and which I hope I shall never forget.

I was in the steerage, America bound with a hundred or so Irish girls and several hundred continental immigrants, in order that I might see just what happened to the immigrants on their trip across, and at Ellis island. There was only one way to do it. That was to be an immigrant.

I should have liked to have gone as a Swedish immigrant, but I'm not a blonde. Or a French girl, but my French is my own, and nobody else could understand it. And so, for one reason or another, I had to be an immigrant from an English speaking country. I chose Ireland. I elected the rôle of hired girl. Not of governess or nursemaid; of cook or housemaid or domestic, but, quite simply, of a hired girl.

I well knew that in an assignment like that a little conversation was likely to be a dangerous thing, and greater loquacity a very bad thing. So I didn't grow too confidential during those twelve days.

JULIA'S AMBITIONS

The five girls who shared with me our tiny cabin were so full of their plans and ambitions for America that I listened with but slight obligation to speak. Particularly voluble was Julia. Lovable, aggressive, courageous Julia. She was 17; had worked for many years on a farm in Ireland; was bound for domestic service in the states. Julia had three mighty ambitions she hoped to realize in the land that was shadowed by the statue of liberty.

First of all, Julia wanted a hair net. Again, to date the story, it was in the days when bobbed hair, down in the steerage, meant only one thing. And that one thing was a mandate from the ship's doctor and nurse after they had examined the scalp. So Julia had long, curly hair, and she wanted an American hair net to plaster over her curls.

Second, Julia longed for a fur coat. Back home her earnings had been about $4 a month, she told me and that didn't leave much of a margin for a fur coat.

Third—and this was Julia's almost prayerful wish—she wanted a gold tooth.

Knowing Julia as well as I got to in those twelve days, I am pretty sure that in these five years she has bought dozens of hair nets. Only she probably has a shingle bob now. I believe, too, that her imitation fur coat is something better, with, perhaps, a summer fur thrown in. And, if she wants it, I know she has a gold tooth.

WASN'T A LADY

But it was not Julia, nor any of my cabin mates who put me, as I started out to say, definitely, bluntly in my niche. Fearful of too much conversation, I was especially on my guard when I came near Mrs. Casey. She was the ship's volunteer news service. She wanted to know everyhing about everybody and had a nearly 100 per cent record. It was she, not I, who should have been the reporter.

For several days I had evaded her happy interrogatories. At last she cornered me. I knew I was homesick and thought I was going to be seasick, so there wasn't much fight in me, and she found me an easy victim.

"And what do you do for a living, my dear?" she queried.

Without a moment's hesitation, I, remembering my credentials, said:

"Me? O, I'm a hired girl."

Mrs. Casey's face lighted. Her mouth curved into an ecstatic smile. Her eyes danced. She was pleased through and through.

"A hired girl. A hired girl," she mouthed the words lovingly as she went on. "I knew it, I knew it. My daughter thought you were a lady, but I just knew you weren't."

SAM 'N' HENRY

By Correll & Gosden

The Sad Morning After the Glad Night Before!

[After an evening of cabareting Sam and the Most Precious Diamond (the high officer of the colored fraternity, "Jewels of the Crown") returned to Sam and Henry's room in high spirits. Henry finally persuaded the boys to go to bed, and now we find them the morning after the night before. It is 4:30 a. m. and the three boys are sleeping peacefully. . . . The alarm clock rings.]

HENRY—Cut dat thing off—CUT DAT THING OFF! SAM! Cut dat thing off! (Henry jumps out of bed.) I'll do it; I'll do it. (He stops the alarm clock.) Sam! Sam! Git up! SAM! (Sam sleeps peacefully on.) It's six-thirty. Git on down an' hitch dat hoss up. (Sam doesn't move.) A'right—lay dere now an' I'm gonna pour some watch on yo'. Sam! GIT UP FROM DERE! (Shakes Sam.) Git—git—GIT UP from dere! SAM!

Sam—Henry, I'm sick.

Henry—Yo' ought to be sick. Git up from dere.

Sam—O, Henry—my head.

Henry—Don' start no argument now. Git up. It's six-thirty an' we gotta git to work heah.

Sam—Henry, who's dis in bed heah wid me?

Henry—Dat's de Mos' Precious Diamon'.

Sam—Git up, Diamon'; git up.

Diamond—Now listen, sweetheart; eveh since we'se been married you've been after me to git up. Lemme lay heah dis mornin'.

Henry—Oh-oh.

Sam—Dis ain't yo' wife, Diamon'. Dis heah's me—I'se sick.

Diamond—Who is ME?

Henry—Listen, Diamon'; yo' betteh git up. Yo' wife is worried 'bout yo'—maybe.

Diamond—Where is my wife?

Henry—She ain't heah. She's home, I guess.

Diamond—Jus' so she ain't heah—let her worry.

"De Diamond' say he ain't heah."

O-O-OH, HENRY!

Sam—O-o-o-oh, Henry, I'm sick, Henry. De sompin' fo' me, will yo'?

Henry—I'll bus' yo' in de head, dat's what I'll do.

Sam—Henry, my head, Henry. My head is killin' me.

Henry—Now, yo' betteh git up like I tell yo' to do. Yo' gotta hitch up de hoss an' git out an' go to work.

Sam—Diamon', is yo' sick, too?

Diamond—Is any wateh 'round heah anywhere?

Henry—Ain't no wateh 'round heah. I goin' dress.

Sam—Henry, do me a favor, will yo'?

Henry—Whut yo' want me to do? I'se gotta git out an' go to work.

Sam—Henry, go down an' hitch up de hoss an' go ovah to de depot an' git dem trunks fo' me, will yo'?

Henry—I'm gonna dress an' go down to de corner an' git sompin' to eat. Git up an' dress an' hitch up de hoss yo'self.

Diamond—Listen, Henry; if yo' run into my wife tell her dat I is done been kidnaped. Tell her yo' is out lookin' fo' me—an' gimme a drink o' wateh.

Henry—Ain't no wateh 'round heah. Git up, Sam! Whut's de matteh wid you?

Sam—Henry, I b'lieve my head's goin' bus' open. I ain't NEVEH been dis sick befo'. Put dat towel oveh here in de wateh an' hand it to me, will yo'?

Henry—Dat's de only towel we got. Dat's whut yo' git fo' stayin' out all night.

Diamond—If yo' run into my wife, Henry, tell her yo' ain't seen me.

Henry—Git up from dere Sam an' go down an' git dat hoss out.

Sam—Henry, I can't git up. I'se sick. My head's bus'n' open.

(The telephone rings.)

Henry—Who in de world is callin' up heah at dis hour?

Sam—If dat's de 'larm clock ringin', Henry, cut it off.

Henry—Dat's de telephone ringin'.

Sam—Answer de telephone, yill yo'?

Henry—Answer it yo'self. Git up out o' de bed an' answer de telephone.

Sam—I'll git up, den, Henry. O-o-o, my head. Henry, it's 'bout to kill me.

Henry—Answer de telephone an' shut up.

Sam—Hello! Whut? Dis heah is Sam talkin'. Who is dis? O, de Mos' Precious Diamon's wife, huh?

Henry—Oh-oh.

Diamond (in whisper)—Tell her I ain't heah; tell her I ain't heah.

Sam—De Diamon' say he ain't heah.

Henry—Oh-oh.

HE SAY HE AIN'T HEAH

Sam (speechless)—Awa—awa——

Diamond—Don' let her know I'se heah.

Sam (excited and repeating)—Don' let her know he's heah. Wait a minute dere; wait a minute. (To Henry) Henry, I'se sick. Talk to de lady.

Henry—I'se dressin'. I ain't goin' talk to her. Talk to her yo'self.

Diamond—Now, wait a minute, boys. If my ol' lady knows I'm oveh heah she'll come oveh heah an' beat all three of us. Tell her dat yo' ain't seed me.

Sam (on telephone)—Hello! De Diamon' tol' me to tell yo' dat we ain't seed him.

Sam—Hello! Whut's dat? Tell him if he ain't home in ten minutes yo' goin' do whut? Break ev'vy bone in his body?

Diamond—Tell her dat I ain't heah.

Henry—When his wife finish wid de three o' us all of us is gonna be sick.

Diamond—Listen, Sam. Don't let her know dat I'm heah. Tell her dat I done been kidnaped.

Sam (to Diamond's wife)—He say he done been kidnaped. I don't know WHO kidnaped him—I think Miss Ella did it.

Henry (seeing trouble brewing)—Oh-oh.

Sam (in phone)—Awa—— (To Henry)—Henry! O-o-oh, I'se sick.

Henry—Hang up; hang up.

Sam (repeating in phone)—Hang up; hang up. (To Henry) She won't do it. (To Diamond's wife) Hol' de phone a minute. Wait till I talk to de Mos' Precious Diamon' again.

Henry—Diamon', go to de telephone 'fore yo' wife come oveh heah.

Sam—Heah, Diamon', yo' take it. I'se goin' back to bed. O-o-o-h, my head is killin' me.

Sam (as Henry slams the door and leaves)—Henry, don' leave me heah. O-o-o-o-oh, Henry, I'se sick.

LITTLE TALES of BIG HEADS

What's your pet little tale of a Big Head? Send it to Big Heads, Sunday Tribune, and we'll pay you $1 if we print it.

One of the Few!

Dorothy was entertaining a group of young girls at her home. Suddenly she announced, "I'm going to put on my new dress that I bought at a sale yesterday and see what you think of it."

Presently she appeared clad in an attractive and becoming frock, which the girls frankly admired.

"It cost only eight dollars!" she gleefully declared. Several of her friends declared their intention of trying to get one, also.

"I am never lucky enough to get a readymade dress becoming and cheap like that," modestly admitted a pretty young girl.

"Of course not, few girls can," promptly conceded Dorothy. "It's impossible unless you happen to have an unusually good figure like mine. I never have the least trouble in getting lovely readymade garments ridiculously reasonable!" F. J.

And She Meant It.

One day my girl friend and I were talking about the prom dance. The boy she liked had invited another girl to it, which made her quite jealous.

After a while she remarked to me that she thought he had only invited the other girl because he was under obligation to her. When I asked her why she thought this, she said, "O, well you know I am so popular all the boys would ask me, only they had to invite somebody else."

And she meant it, too! E. S.

Her Custom.

Recently I was a bride and, as usual, my girl friends gave me a bridal shower.

I thanked the girls for their kind remembrances, but one girl wasn't there, so I called her on the phone and expressed my gratitude for her gift.

She added, "Why, I always give the best presents at showers and I never give anything cheap." T. H.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

By Snowshoe Al

A Hermit's a Guy Wot Looks at a Dame an' Picks a Dog

A COUPLE uv days ago me an' Mickey Flynn went squirrel hunting. We headed for a large tract uv timber wich is several miles frum town, an' wich is called The Haunted Woods, probably due to the fact that no squirrels ever haunted it. We figured that out ourselves after searching all morning for the galloping nut-crackers. Jist as we wuz ready to beat it for home a big rainstorm came up.

"There's a hermit wot lives in theez woods sumplace," sez Mr. Flynn; "let's find his joint before we git drowned."

We searched around until we found a tiny clearing, in the middle uv wich wuz a cabin. By that time the sky wuz spilling grief-water in over-doses, so we galloped up to the door uv the cabin an' knocked plenty.

"If that's a woman, go away!" howls a voice.

"Well, aint yew the conceited cuss!" squawks Mickey; "I'll bet chorus girls jist hammer on yer door all day long."

"Aha, a man's voice!" sez Mr. Hermit; "nobody can say that Big-hearted Ben turned men frum his door in a storm. Kum in!"

DIZZIEST LOOKIN' GUY

That hermit wuz the dizziest looking hunk uv humanity wot ever rolled a cigarette. He had so much whiskers that he looked like an advertisement for cough drops. Also, he wuz fat, dirty an' gloomy. His clothes wuz so old he must have inherited them frum either the last uv the Aztecs or the first uv the Pharaohs. He wuz standing by the stove, watching sum object wich wuz boiling in a kettle. Strange odors issued forth frum that kettle. They wuz worse than strange—they wuz punk!

"D'yuh mind if we stay here long enough to git dry?" sez I; "we'll beat it as soon as it stops raining, because I've always heard that hermits don't exactly yearn for company."

"Sit down," sez he, so we parked our carcasses on a bench by the stove.

"Wot in gawd's name are yew cooking?" asks Mickey, holding his nose.

"A bird," sez Big-hearted Ben, stirring the object with a stick.

"I didn't know that polecats had wings," sez Mr. Flynn.

"Wot kind uv a bird?" sez I to the hermit.

"Dam if I know," sez he; "I thought at first it wuz an eagle; then I decided it wuz a hawk; now I think it's a buzzard."

"Did yew shoot him?" I asks.

"Certainly I shot him," sez the hermit; "did yew think I climbed a tree an' bit him to death?"

"On the contrary," sez I, "I thought maybe yew wuz digging a hole an' found him. At least he smells that way to me."

Big-hearted Ben poked the bird several times with the stick an' then removed the kettle frum the stove.

IT'S A SAD STORY

"I think he's done," sez he; "I hope so—I'm gitting tired uv cooking him. I've bin boiling the sun-uv-a-gun for 4 days."

"I think anybody wot eats him is also done," sez Mickey; "that dodo bird wuz in its second childhood wen King Tut wuz rolling a hoop."

"How did yew happen to bekum a hermit, Ben?" asks I, offering him a plug uv tobacco, wich he grabbed. Then he sat down an' wiped a tear frum his eye.

"It's a sad story," sez he. "I wuz once a lion tamer in a circus, an' had all kinds uv money. I wuz absolutely fearless, I wuz, an' my favorite stunt wuz to stick my head in a lion's mouth an' then kick him in the ribs. It brot thunderous applause!"

"Big Boy, yew must have bin good," sez I; "rave on, Ananias!"

"Well, boys," sez Ben, "everything wuz going swell until a female calamity, who traveled with the circus, decided that I'd make a good husband. I didn't wanta git married, I wuz perfectly happy the way I wuz, but she made life miserable for me by telling everybody that we wuz gonna git married. She had a trapeze act, an' I used to watch her an' wish she wood fall an' break her contract."

"Maybe it wuz yer money she wanted," sez Mickey.

"I don't think so—I wuz pritty good looking," sez he; "never-the-less, this damsel bothered me so much that at last I moved my baggage into the lions' cage an' had my meals an' mail brot to me. I even slept in the cage. It got to a point where the lions began to sympathize with me, an' wenever they saw this dame kumming towards the cage they wood knock me down an' push me under the bed."

"Wonderful co-operation!" sez I.

"Yup," sez he, "but one morning the circus broke up an' I lost my job, so I had to kum out uv the cage. She got me!" He wiped sum more tears frum his lamps.

SHE GETS HIM

"Aw, ain't that a shame!" sez us.

"Well, boys," sez Ben, "we rented a little furnished house an' got married. Two minutes after we got hooked the trouble started. After we came out uv the church we climbed into a taxi an' started for home. On the way home I gits one uv them blue melancholy feelings so I knocks her off the seat. She picks herself up an' sez I didn't have no reason for hitting her. It got me sore to have her question my judgment, so I socks her an' knocks her off the seat again. Wen we gits in the house she handed me a dirty look so I socks her again. After that we didn't speak to each other for 3 days."

"Did yew hit her during that time?" sez I.

"Jist once," sez he, "to let her know I wuz still mad at her. However, being one uv them guys wot can't carry a grudge forever, I decided to let by-gones be by-gones, so at last I walks up to her an' sez, 'Well, kiddo, I am now ready to forgive yew.' Wot do yuh think she did, boys? Wot do yuh think that bimbo did?"

"She kissed yew!" howls us.

"!%$$!%&$$!&!!!" roars the hermit; "she busted a broom on my bean, that's wot she did! Can yew imagine it? Me, Big-hearted Ben, goes up an' offers to forgive her an' she socks me over the hat-rack with a broomstick!"

"Can it be possible that any woman kood be so narrow minded!" we squawks.

A WOLF IN LINGERIE

"I tell yuh, I wuz dazed by such conduct," sez he, "so I rebuked her——"

"How?" sez I.

"With 3 chairs," sez he, "although the first one missed her by a mile. Then she pulled a stunt wot almost broke my tender heart to think that any woman kood have such a terrible burst uv temper. She beat me up!"

"Migawd! A wolf in sheep's lingerie!" wails Mickey.

"Yup," agrees Ben. "Then she went to work in a restaurant. A couple uv weeks later she insisted that I also try an' find work. This hurt my feelings, so after another battle wich I lost via the knock-out route, I goes out an' gits me a job selling lots for a sub-division outfit. Three months later, during wich time my original cash had dwindled away, she got after me for not making any sales yet. How kood I help it? My prospect had changed his mind, dog-gone him, after me working 90 days on him. If I had landed that guy I wood have dragged down over 32 bucks commission. So I told my wife that I wood rest for a few weeks an' then attempt to locate another prospect. Two minutes later I got hit in the teeth with my suitcase, an' wuz told to float away because she wuz tired uv trying to support both uv us. That's the last I ever saw uv her. Woman's inhumanity to man is unbelievable! I never want to see another dame as long as I live. Never git married, boys. Take Big-hearted Ben's advice. Theez squaws are too narrow minded!"

He put 3 plates on the table an' drags the bird over. It wooden't have bin polite to refuse to eat, so we decided to tackle the dodo.

"Lissen," sez I a minute later, "I still claim this boiled ostrich tastes punk. I'm willing to believe yew shot him, but wen did yew shoot him?"

"In March," sez Ben; "he kept pritty good, didn't he?"

RELIABLE MERCHANDISE

Uptown Chicago

May 10, 1927.

Chicago Tribune,
435 N. Michigan Av.,
Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen:-

We want you to know that the new Metropolitan Section of your Sunday Paper which we have been using for our advertisements since its inception, has helped us materially to show the greatest gains in the history of this business for the period from February 1st to May 1st.

Nothing can stop the growth of the outlying business sections, but that growth will be materially greater in those sections where the merchants use the columns of the Sunday Tribune to reach practically every home in the district from which they draw business.

The present make up of this section is very good, and we hope that you will continue and add to the interesting features that are now making it more popular each issue.

Very truly yours,

LOREN MILLER & COMPANY.

Loren Miller

LM*ED

LOREN MILLER and Company, uptown Chicago's big department store, are well experienced in the use of newspaper advertising. They have been using The Chicago Tribune for years, and making it profitable while buying the full city and suburban circulation.

Now they can buy north side city and suburban circulation only, and they have used The Tribune on this basis since the inauguration of the Metropolitan Section. Has it been profitable? Read Mr. Miller's letter:

"The new Metropolitan Section," writes Mr. Miller, "has helped us materially to show the greatest gains in the history of this business for the period from February 1st to May 1st. Nothing can stop the growth of the outlying business sections, but that growth will be materially greater in these sections where the merchants use the columns of the Sunday Tribune to reach practically every home in the district from which they draw business."

Merchants can now buy the most complete coverage available in Chicago, paying only for Sunday Tribune circulation convenient to their stores. They reach approximately a quarter of a million families—a circulation equivalent to blanketing a city of a million persons. Employ this new force—the greatest for the money outlying stores have ever had—in building your sales and profits. A Tribune man will be glad to give you all the facts.

Convincing!

A look at the circulation figures of The Sunday Tribune for the north side and suburbs should convince any merchant of the value of the Metropolitan Section to him. Just a few of the circulation figures for north side sections and suburbs:

District	Families	Sunday Tribune
Rogers Park	21,072	18,165
Edgewater	26,022	24,418
Ravenswood	34,148	29,205
Lake View	36,014	35,502
North Halsted	16,788	14,460

Suburbs	Families	Sunday Tribune

Glencoe	1,161	1,228
Highland Park	1,992	1,718

Similar ratios of coverage apply in nearly every section of Chicago and suburbs. Exact figures will be supplied on request for any of the 48 districts in Chicago, or any of the suburbs.

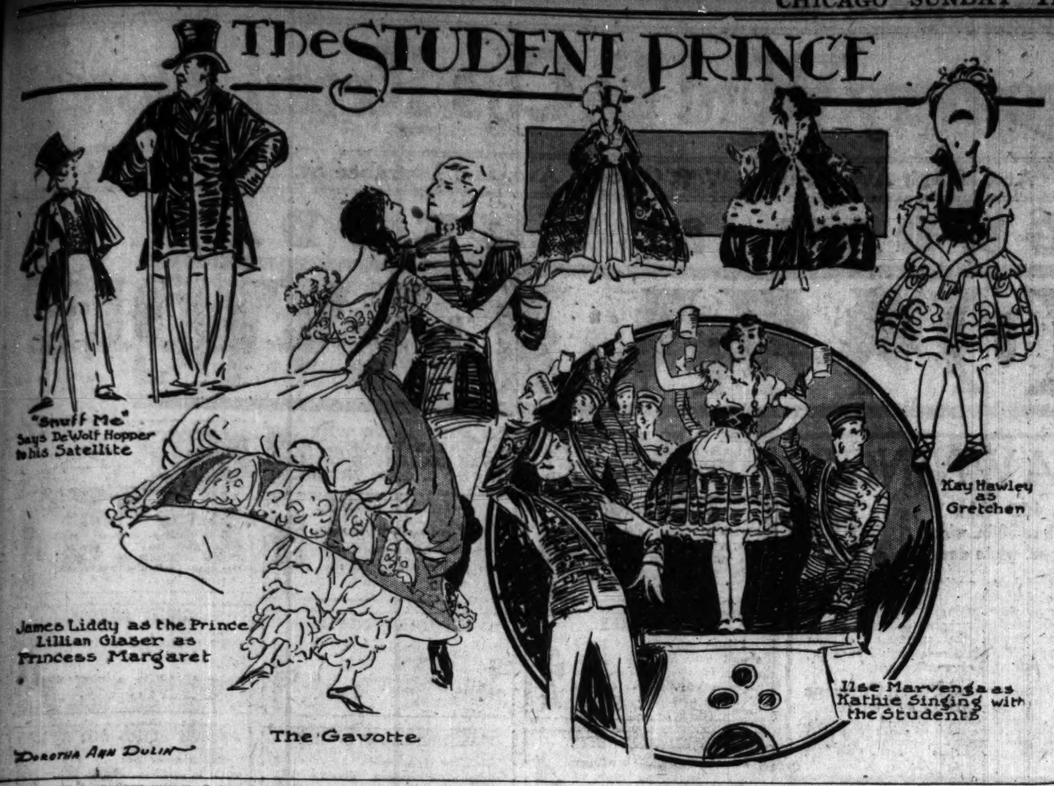
The STUDENT PRINCE



THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Bakrak

Fore! Our Hero Takes Up the Grand and Ancient Game

HEAR Ye! Hear Ye! You are now about to read sumthin which you should try an remember, cause in about a 150 years from now, when I'm tha World's Champeen, you can brag to your grand-children as how you remember when the Duke took his first lesson.

At tha supper table lass Tuesday, I noticed as how tha B. and C. has got sumthin to say besides the regular "Soup should be seen, not heard," "Why didn' you wash yer hands," and "Ya got yer feet against that new table again."

Well, here's tha dirt. Seems as how Mrs. Mudge was paying a call in the afternoon and she has taken up golf. She just loves the pastime and couldn' tha B. and C. induce me to take up the game so as the 4 of us could go out from time to time and play.

A DELICATE MATTER

Right off the bat I told the mama that there's not a chance, and I cood give her a dozen reasons, but that one reason was enough. This excuse don't call for the other eleven, and should be listed in the financial embarrassment column. I tried to explain that you got to join a club, buy equiptment in tha way of clubs, and clothes, and stock a nineteenth hole. Then I get told that Mrs. Mudge has already spoken of the matter to John and we could be their guests until such time as we decided we liked tha sport.

If I do happen to get a kick out of the thing I certainly wood be damn foolish to admit it if John's gonna foot tha bills. Ennyway tha B. and C. has made up my mind and it's all set that I meet John at half past one Saturday and give the other members a lot to laugh about and also a excuse for trying out any new cuss words which they are trying to master.

HARD ON RETAILERS

Some birds don't believe in ever giving a retailer a chance. This is not my idea of fairness. When I called up my friend Buchanan, who incidentally has got a drag where he even gets his razor blades wholesale, and asked him if he could give me a card to some guy fer a wholesale golf outfit, he says, "Sure, any particular firm you want to go to?" I told him I wood naturally prefer one where he's got a charge account.

The bird what waited on me was very pleasant. This made me a little suspisicious as to whether both he and Buckie wasn't hookin on a few bucks fer themselves. Ennyway before I left I was tha possessor of a set of instruments by the names of smashie, driver, brass E, kniblick, midiron, and one what he called a putter. If I don't like the sport I figger at least I can putter around the garden with this crow bar, also I was hung for a ½ dozen balls, a pair of boy's pants, long stockings, and a pair of shoes what aint gonna be worth a damn at tha office so I guess I just better like tha amusement or be out tha price of tha feet decorations.

When I got home I put on tha outfit, and if that pay check grabber of mine ever pulls a series of laughs like she did I will have her put under observation fer a cupple of weeks. While I figgerred I looked pretty nifty, she's scaring me to death with what I diagnozed as histericks.

KELLY POOL IS NO AID

Yesterday I bring all tha equiptment with me to tha office, and after John an' me had a little lunch (on him) we get in his Four-in-line an' start for tha club. On the way out he tries to give me a idea of the game, and on account I used ta be a pretty good hand at Croquet I figgerred as how in a cupple minutes of practice I wood show up a lotta guys what's been braggin' about shootin' eighty-sixes an' eighty-fours. One thing what I learned was that having a good eye playing Kelly Pool don't mean a damn thing when it comes to trying to sock one of those pock-marked overgrown moth balls.

After getting introduced to maybe forty or fifty guys in tha locker room I'm told that the first thing I wood tackle was some driving. Just then one of tha guys what I met comes over with a bottle of Scotch. Well, I passed mine up cause I ain't gonna take no chance on gettin' pinched for driving while intoxicated. If I'd known this bozo for any length of time I wood of asked fer a rain check. Next time I go out I will take a empty bottle along cause I think the gentleman felt a little bit insulted when I turned him down.

The first thing what we did was to approach what John called tha 1st hole; not seeing anything what looked like a hole I figgered, me being new at the racket, they was kidding me an' I shut up like a clam an' didn' give 'em a chance to give me the Ha! Ha! The next funny crack was, "Did I bring any tea with me?" If this outfit is so ladylike that you gotta have tea before you start I will damn soon check 'em out. Besides, coffee is what I always take.

PANTS, CHANCE, STANCE!

From then on all I hear is a lodda instructions what was all Greek to me. When I got told my stance was terrible, I didn' know fer a minute whether John said pants or chance. A stance to me meant anything from a soused mackerel to a pickled herring. Well, I get all set and believe me or not I socked that pill a city block [if I would of hit it.] On the next wallop I shaded my eyes to see how far the damn thing went and either my club is no good or that ball aint made right, cause it went about three feet in front of me, off to the left, and I hit it so it should go to the right.

My stance was terrible.

The red cap what was carrying the clubs should be called catty instead of caddy, as he gives me a look which was as much as to say, "They don't make 'em any dumber." After making tha 1st hole in one [hundred] I was thinking of getting even with tha club carrier by making him carry a adding machine the next time I came out.

About the fifth hole some guy in back of me started to holler "Four," guess he was tryin' to show off a bit cause I was told that that hole aint never been made in less than five. If I remembered right, it was about the 8th hole when John tells me I would come up to a water hole. I took a healthy swat and right here is where I got all full of pep cause believe me or not I went right in the middle of it. When I turned around and said "Some shot, what?" I got told that you was supposed to miss the damn thing altogether and land on the other side.

FINDS USE FOR CLUBS

Well, after 9 holes, five disgusted guys check back into the clubhouse, I was four of them and John was the fifth. We took a shower bath, which incidentally didn' get me sore, 'cause I wouldn' hafta do it when I got home. After meeting some more ginks who don't know anything to say except "How's your game?" we start back home an' I get dropped off in front of the house.

About this time my real troubles start. I was so damn stiff I could hardly climb the stairs. The B. and C. was all excited when I got in and wanted to know all about it. It took me about two minutes to tell her to put a ad in the paper an' see if we couldn' get part of our money back by selling tha equipment.

After we eat supper every bone in me ached and I said I would hafta go to bed. Then a real use for the clubs come to my mind or rather of tha following conversation:

"Whatta ya mean, bed?"

"You heard me, I know your dumb but not in the ears."

"Wasn't I sitting home all day while you was havin' a swell time?"

"Swell time hell."

"Well I wanna go out tonight."

"Who's ahead of you?"

"I can't go alone."

"Who said ya couldn'?"

"I promised Mr. and Mrs. Black we would be over."

"O, now it comes out."

DUKE RULES ROOST

There comes time in every guy's life when he's just got to be tha boss in his house and I flatly refused to go.

WANT YOUR WAREHOUSE ROBBED?

Odd Sidelights on Prohibition

By Edward Burns.

THERE'S no questioning the fact that many persons actually took the Volstead act seriously for several months after the law was placed on the statute books. Like all innovations meant to be revolutionary, the dry law offered many stern mysteries to those whom its measures affected. Brave men who had large quantities of liquors on hand suddenly became panicky when they first had the opportunity to read the well chosen legal words which Mr. Volsted thought up out of his own head.

Three days after the prohibition law had been imposed upon our liberty loving nation, it became apparent that the country was suffering from a new thirst, never suspected in the wet days of the preceding week. The old philosophy of the forbidden fruit had taken hold with a vengeance. But the men who had the stuff to drink for a few hours didn't know how to proceed.

THE ANCIENT ALIBI

Then some reminiscent whisky man recalled the ancient alibi that deceitful men for years have been presenting to their wives after losing the weekly stipend in a poker game. If poker players could fool suspicious helpmeets by saying they had been held up, why couldn't a whisky man fool the government by reporting that some vile thief had robbed his warehouse?

From Jan. 16, 1920, to May 30, 1920—four months and a half—there were in Chicago 170 major booze robberies. Some of these were bona fide thefts, but a tremendous majority were the flimsiest sort of subterfuges. This rate of self-looting enterprise has not been maintained, but warehouse robberies in which those robbed did not show great grief at the loss of treasure has continued periodically all through the Volstead era.

The last notable booze robbery in Chicago was, unlike most of the preceding ones, thwarted before all the desired contraband had been removed. A few weeks ago four distinguished bootleggers were caught in the act of pumping pre-war Bourbon from a warehouse through a line of hose to a building some yards away. There were 100 barrels, worth about $2,000 each, in the warehouse when the boys started pumping. They were interrupted before they had evolved a scheme of getting 10,000 cases, valued at $140 a case, out of the place, but they had succeeded in pumping more than 100 barrels of the bulk goods.

SCHEME AN OLD ONE

In printing accounts of the thief technique—the use of hose and a pressure pump—newspapers commented on the ingenuity of these latest robbers. The scheme, however, was one of the first used as a means of cheating Volstead. In fact, it was used downstate in 1919—one month before the prohibition era began—in a $70,000 job.

In Peoria in November, 1922, the system was employed as a part of a $500,000 robbery. A former Chicago police court and divorce lawyer, who is reputed to have made from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000 out of whisky since the beginning of prohibition, relied upon his hose as a part of a plot to empty the warehouses which he bought from less eager and industrious men. The retired lawyer was not content to use manual pumps of the type generally used in warehouse robberies. He had constructed a large portable power pump which could suck out the stuff with great speed at a minimum of effort. The contrivance was so successful that he shipped it all over the middle west before it finally was seized in St. Louis.

Hidden, but permanent, pipe lines also have played a prominent part in bootleg maneuvering. This system has been particularly effective in illicit alcohol removals from legalized distilleries and real beer removals from legalized near plants.

Equipment of one brewery was found to include a fake heating plant which embodied elaborate radiators in a garage across the street from the brewery. Real beer was forced through the layout into a racking machine in the garage, where it was placed in barrels and shipped out, at times when prohibition agents were guarding the gates of the brewery yard.

Several big robberies were executed by tunneling, but as a general rule this proposition offered too many engineering problems and consumed too much time to engage the interest of the highly aggressive bootleggers.

LIQUID DIVIDENDS

During the first year of prohibition warehouse robberies enjoyed their most exclusive vogue. Later the series of robberies became interspersed with other methods, principally those having to do with fraudulent withdrawal papers or documents obtained through official irregularities or extreme generosity and leniency.

One of the first striking cases in this category was a now famous declaration of booze dividends by an old time liquor firm which desired to clean up its stores and get out of the business. The ingenious plan, as many will recall, was to sell stock in the firm. After the stock had been sold it was announced that the principal assets of the company were liquid. The firm then announced its program of dissolution and stated the assets—rare old liquors which included whiskies, vintages, rum, and cordials—would be distributed among the stockholders of the company.

The stockholders had no difficulty in getting permits to remove their potable dividends. The plan was laid out so well that prohibition agents rode the trucks. Motorcycle policemen, who were voted dividends of from five to ten cases, acted as convoys to help guard the stocks from hijackers.

A trial followed, in which the prohibition director in office at the time of the distribution, a former judge, a banker, and several others were the defendants. The jury could not see that there had been any intent to circumvent the Volstead act and so voted a verdict of not guilty.

Among the stockholders was a former Chicago alderman, who received booze dividends valued at $90,000. He was more careless than a certain high Cook county official and other stockholders and did not conceal the storage place where he had placed his booze dividends. After more than three years of legal skirmishing the former alderman's property finally was destroyed by the government.

THE LANCASTER CASE

Another notable case where government documents were manipulated, involved the withdrawal of $900,000 worth of whisky from a government concentration depot in Chicago. Most of the whisky, which was in bottles, bore the brand "Lancaster," a standard Bourbon for many years. After the plot had been discovered the best known government investigators were sent on the trail of Lancaster. One tip led to a big south side furniture storage warehouse. A large sized, boarded-off, section had been designated as the hiding place of a considerable quantity of Lancaster. Search warrants were obtained for an inspection of the premises. Among the investigators was a man who has been in the revenue department for many years. When the raiders entered the designated section of the warehouse he sniffed a highly trained sniff.

"I've been a revenooer for more than 30 years and this old nose knows. I smell Lancaster just as sure as I'm a foot high."

Thus encouraged, the raiders ripped through partitions and found nothing but vinegar. The next day, however, an operative of comparatively meager experience in government work went to the warehouse and found, in a far distant corner on another floor of the big structure, a sizeable quantity of the greatly sought Lancaster.

There was a stirring trial of a number of prominent defendants and some well known hoodlums. The prominent ones were acquitted and the hoodlums sent to jail for short terms.

ROB ARMY DEPOT

One of the most startling robberies was that of the army warehouse at Pershing road and Wood street in Chicago. The building was erected as a quartermaster's depot for this corps area, but one entire floor was rented to the treasury department as a storage place for seized liquors during the intervals that extend from the time of confiscation until cases are disposed of in court.

At the time of the robbery more than $3,000,000 worth of all kinds of rare and good liquors were stored in the warehouse. The place was supposed to be patrolled constantly by guards in the employ of the quartermaster's department. One night in November, 1924, thieves entered the place, first getting into a room partitioned off from the liquor area by heavy fireproof tile and plaster. With sledges and fire axes the thieves tore holes in the walls sufficiently large to permit the passage of hand trucks.

The amount of the loot never has been made known, but has been estimated as high as $800,000.

Of course there was a feverish investigation of the robbery, but no one ever was arrested and the matter soon was officially forgotten. The warehouse still is used as a storage place, but in the last year nothing worth stealing has been stored there with the exception of grain alcohol.

NO HONOR AMONG THIEVES

During all the robberies and illicit withdrawals the robbers and cheaters have had the added responsibility of making sure that they themselves weren't robbed after they had succeeded in getting the stuff out of confinement. Hijackers have an uncanny way of learning about booze robberies and illicit withdrawals even before they are executed. And long ago they forgot there is supposed to be honor among thieves.

One instance of the accurate information obtained by hijackers was revealed in the interception by three well known bootleggers of a $30,000 load of whisky moving under permit. At 11 o'clock in the morning at the intersection of Indiana and 20th street, a busy corner, the booze truck and the hijackers arrived simultaneously. It so happened that a detective bureau squad also arrived at the spot, also on the stroke of 11. The hijackers, after a mistrial, pleaded guilty and spent short terms in jail.

Remarkable as it may seem, there still are many thousand gallons of good whisky in warehouses. If you happen to own some of it, and haven't found a way to get it out, there still are quite a few young men to whom you can go and say: "Here are the keys to my storerooms. Don't you dare rob my warehouse at Rock and Rye streets." These young fellows are dependable business men, and you can rest assured you will get your end of the proceeds, either in merchandise or cash. And if you have enough of the stuff on hand, you can even arrange an advance payment from the men you ask to steal it.

WHAT HE NEEDED.

A student nurse, inexperienced in reading the clinical thermometer, was horrified when, taking the temperature of a patient, that instrument apparently registered 120. She hurriedly dispatched a note to the doctor, reading: "Please come at once. Mr. Jones' temperature is 120." The doctor did not come, but he sent his message: "You had better send for the fire engine. I can do no good."—The Argonaut, San Francisco.

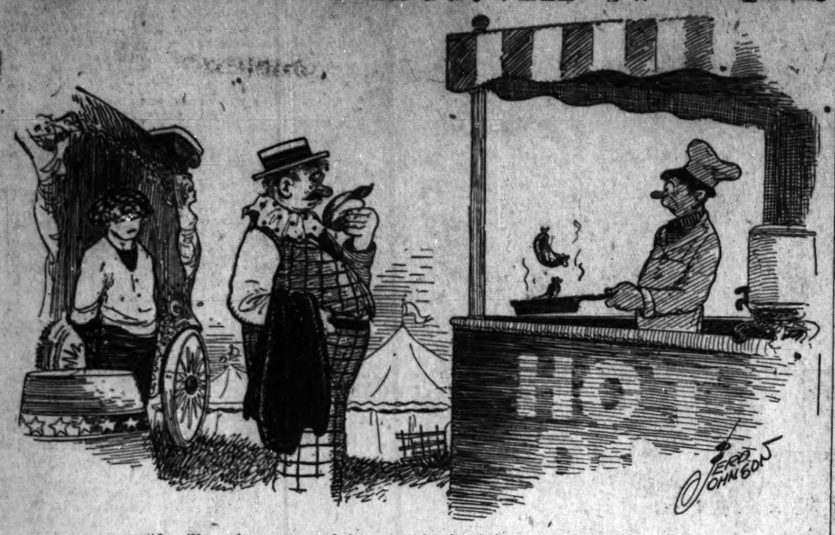
THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL — by Westbrook Pegler



"I will trade you my fighter on the hoof for your grease joint."

Success Makes an Ingrate of a Fightin' Bum

SOMETIMES I get very disgusted with the way things are going in this country, and one of the most disgusting things to me is the way people are always running around talking about success, as I have known of cases where success would change a man's character in a very disgusting way.

I have been thinking about a heavyweight bum of mine who became successful and the ungrateful way he treated me in later years has turned me against success forever.

We had a change of administration in our town some years ago, and for chief of police they put in a very ignorant man who promptly housed up a number of prominent citizens. The outrage made me so indignant that I immediately left town for a tour of the country, and a couple of weeks later I found myself in a place called Des Moines, Ia.

A $1.35 FIGHTER

One evening after I had eaten my dinner in the drug store, which was the center of the fashionable night life in this city, I discovered that I did not have any funds left, and when I stated the facts to the cashier he asserted that if I did not pay him $1.35 he would come out of his cage and cuff me around.

"Well," I replied, tactfully, "I am not a fighter myself, but I can lick any $1.35 fighter in the world with a bowl of hot soup in one hand. But if you are a real fighter, I will just put the halter on you and take you around the country and we will both make some funds."

This chump was a big skinny bum but his hand would cover the top of a keg and he weighed about 185 pounds, so I thought he might be good enough to keep me going until the right minded citizens at home could turn the new chief of police around and see what was on his price tag. So I haltered the party.

"You're on the pay roll," I said to him. "Have you got any money?"

He had about $150, which he had saved to pay for a correspondence course in prize fighting, but I changed these plans and we went to Kansas City.

NO BUSINESS

Owing to conditions, we did not get any work in this town and after a time we did not have any funds left. I am not given to boasting about my courage, but I will state that I was so desperate that I would willingly have let my bum fight the champion of the world for $50.

"Get me the toughest bum you can find," I said to the promoter. "I am not afraid to let my chump fight anybody."

Still we could not get any business, and naturally I was feeling very discouraged when I returned to the hotel that night. As I am in the habit of carrying large sums of dough, I always pack a shooting pistol, and when I came into the room I unstrapped the shooter and laid it on the bureau. Then I lay down in the bed with my face toward the wall, as I was very tired, and I said to my bum:

"Well, there isn't any sugar in the bowl tonight so it's up to you to go out and get us some eating dollars by some honest means or another."

When I looked up my bum was gone and my shooter was missing, but I am strictly honest by nature, and I only thought he had taken the shooter along to protect his funds from lawless characters after he procured the eating dollars. And, naturally, when he came back in an hour with about $300, I did not ask any questions. In fact, I did not have any evil thoughts even when the morning papers printed an article stating "fashionable crap game held up by large sized gunman." But inasmuch as we were making no progress, I thought it would be an injustice to the boy's career to keep him there any longer, so we went to Bartlesville, Okla.

STILL NO SUSPICIONS

There was a circus playing in this town, and on our way out to the grounds a policeman asked me if we had come from Kansas City. Thinking they might be looking for some criminal and not wishing to become the victim of a mistake in identity, I said we had just come from Fort Smith, so the policeman apologized and said he was looking for the large sized gunman who robbed the crap game in Kansas City.

Still I did not have any suspicions, but I was beginning to wonder if I was standing in the way of my bum's advancement, and I was asking myself this question when I stopped at a grease joint to eat a frankfurter. These joints are called grease joints because they sell strictly hygienic frankfurters stuffed with sanitary sawdust and sage instead of pork, which is likely to be unhygienic, and as there is no fat in the sawdust, it is necessary for the proprietor to grease the stove with a rag all the time. There are so many joints allowed on the circus lot and you have to own a sort of franchise or the circus management will take steps.

TRADES HIS FIGHTER

As I was eating my frankfurter the proprietor remarked that he was tired of the spangles and the tinsel of circus life and wished to enter some honest, sedate profession, so I said to him:

"Do you see that big, clean cut athletic lad over there? Well, he is the coming heavyweight champion and I am his manager, but I have always longed for a circus career, so I will trade you my fighter on the hoof for your grease joint."

The proprietor was game, so I called my bum over and made the trade, and you may imagine my surprise and sorrow a few days later when I read an article stating that the police had sent my bum back to Kansas City for robbing that crap game.

I followed the grease business for several seasons, and one spring a new heavyweight champion bobbed up. I had not been following the bums very closely, so I was astonished to see by his picture that he was my old bum, under the management of the man who sold me the grease joint.

Naturally, after winning the championship, this bum did not wish to fight any more, and just before the season began he joined our circus.

DISGUSTED WITH SUCCESS

And now I will tell you how success makes ingrates of people and you will understand why I have been turned against success forever. Because the first thing that ungrateful bum did was to have the manager of the circus run my grease paint off the lot and put an old pal out of business.

Success had completely changed the character of a fine, generous boy, and that is why I say it disgusts me to hear people running around talking about what a fine thing success is.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

The Summer Ensemble Is Still Smartest When It Is Made Up of One Color, but Two Distinctly Different Shades May Be Used If One Has the Artistic Sense of the Parisienne.

By Bettina Bedwell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS—(Special Correspondence.)—While fashion allows a great deal of liberty in assembling the ensemble this season, the surest short cut to chic is still to be found via the ensemble in one color and not more than two fabrics. Coat and dress in two tones of one color, or in two distinctly different shades, often make striking and extremely smart ensembles, but these variations always require more expertness and artistry than the single theme, and are, therefore, more dangerous.

You cannot outrage either fashion or taste if you wear an ensemble that is all one shade and one fabric, with hat and shoes to match, even if you pick bright red. Of course, this obvious color is going to become wearisome more quickly, and will be the cause of sore eyes after a bit, but the principle is good, just the same. When in doubt, select one color for your ensemble and stick to it. Don't weaken and put on a hat or trimming of something else, even if it looks charming at the moment. You'll be pleased and complimented more for your fidelity in the long run. And Paris backs you up, too.

Two fabrics, if they match exactly, are perfect, and equally ideal if they harmonize without a single sour note. And these simple themes are never difficult, even for the eternal amateur in fashion. The hardest thing to learn in the art of dress is the assembling of the ensemble in all of its details, so that there isn't even one tiny little bit of discord anywhere. I saw a woman come into the Ritz all dressed in gray—just jersey, and the simplest of lines and cut, without any fur or expensive details—who had done her assembling without a flaw. The hat she wore was a plain gray felt, and her shoes and stockings were identical in tone with her clothes. She carried a black bag mounted with gray and wore a black chiffon flower. Nothing marvelous, you might say, in the way of color or material, but she was a delight to the eyes, and all of the blasé and dollar worn orbs there followed her, as if she was some sort of ocular medicine. She was. And she had worked, because getting together a number of articles all in one nuance of gray is a hard labor, to say nothing of choosing good lines and the right kind of materials to set off each other. It's often a rocky road to chic.

I have selected for our sketches today four ensembles that are practically mistake proof, where all of the work is done by Paris experts, as the best examples of the assembled ensemble that is worn with success by smart Parisiennes. Any of these could be worn by very different types of women with success, and they are the creation of two Paris couturiers who have unbroken records of successful ensembles for women of the world over a period of years.

A fashionable and simple color combination of navy blue and white crepe satin is used for the afternoon ensemble. Shown at the extreme left. The tunic is embroidered in silver and the coat in white.

The supremely smart street and travel ensemble is of gray-beige friska with subtle complication of cut, and trimmings of tucks and band. Shown next.

It is the clever cut of this ensemble (sketched third from the left), its graceful flaring panels, and its combination of willow green crepe satin with green silk rep that make it one of the smartest Paris summer costumes.

Last, bright navy blue jersey is a favorite fabric for the sports ensemble. The sweater of blue and gray striped jersey has a monogram in blue.

The fourth figure at the right of our sketches shows a Jean Patou ensemble that is similar to the one the gray lady wore at the Ritz. This one is also made of jersey—beautiful, unpretentious material—and the color is a bright navy. More lively than real navy, and never obtrusive. The straight coat, with its flat revers and its bias ends on the sleeves, is a flawless bit of tailoring, and harmonizes well with the box plaited skirt. The sweater, silk and wool jersey, is striped in blue to match the coat and skirt, and in gray. The flower is gray, and the hat is a toque of gray felt trimmed with a diagonal band of blue, felt also. Gray slippers and stockings. It is individual and it's also Any Woman's ensemble who has the good taste to select it.

At the other end is another ensemble for summer which is equally charming, and fully as beautiful. This is the type of costume that is elegant and also simple. Lucien Lelong created it, and it has been tested by his famous kinoptic method. The coat is of navy blue satin, with full length revers and lining of white satin and graceful sleeves which flare a bit toward the wrists. An outline design in white silk is embroidered above the hemline of the coat.

The frock that accompanies the coat is composed of a straight slip of navy blue satin over which is worn a three-quarters length tunic of white satin. The adjustable crossed bands at the square neck of this dress are in themselves an artistic creation. White satin buttons mark the closing, and a white belt with silver buckle marks the waistline. The skirt of the tunic is embroidered in silver, in a sort of drawn work pattern.

This ensemble is a two color harmony that is easy to achieve, and never unbecoming. Such an ensemble can be increased by the addition of another tunic in dark blue trimmed in white, for less formal occasions. The hat of white bakou straw is trimmed with a navy blue flower, and black patent pumps are the proper footgear.

Our second model on the left is another Lucien Lelong ensemble, for all around wear. You couldn't look anything but smart in this type of ensemble while traveling or on the street in summer. It is of gray-beige friska, the Meyer fabric that is semi-transparent, of wool and cotton and that never wrinkles or looks dowdy. Lelong has made a straight coat cleverly trimmed with curved and straight tucks that cover inset pockets at the hips.

The dress is the epitomé of chic simplicity. It is one piece and straight, with movement introduced into the skirt by a single deep box plait at the side front. The waist closes under a row of frisca covered buttons at the left side front, and the triple belts close on the right side front. A hat of beige felt, or felt straw, with a contrasting ribbon, and beige leather single strap slippers complete this outfit. This is the real Parisian chic for practical wear, with nothing of the glaring about it, and everything that is desirable to the discriminating eye.

The model next to it, for real summer wear, has every one of these same charms in the same superlative degree. There is a moving supple grace about this Jean Patou ensemble that reminds you of wistaria waving in the breeze. Patou is a master of the slender line with a certain amount of flare, and this ensemble is an example of how he handles them this season.

The coat, while slender, has slight flares at the sides, and its only trimming is stitched bands. The material is silk rep, or serge, and the color is willow green. The frock is made of the same tone in crêpe satin, and the two materials together show how delightful fabric combinations can be.

The dress suggests the higher-than-normal waistline in an upward point in the front, from which two lines of piping merge into supremely graceful flaring panels at the center front of the skirt. Panels and hemline are also piped in self-material. With such a summery ensemble, a rather large hat of crin or other very light straw is worn, trimmed simply with applique of satin. Shoes of green, beige or black may be worn, and hose of beige or gray.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

TWO piece dresses are much liked and every woman will want to have one or more in her wardrobe this summer. Pattern No. 766 is a smart but simple design and is suitable for one or two materials. The stores show beautiful printed crêpes for blouses, and in a dress of this kind the skirt would be of a solid color, matching the ground of the printed crêpe.

The skirt is cut in two piece and is quite plain. For size 36 it measures at the bottom about 1 1-3 yards. There are many women who like the very narrow skirts, and some who prefer having a little more width at the bottom. If you are one of the latter it may be a good idea to leave the seams open at the bottom the depth of the hem. To do this properly, find out the exact length the finished skirt will be and then clip the seam edges a little above where the hem will come. Turn one of the loose edges to the wrong side, fold exactly where the hem is to be and run a seam by hand up as far as the seam is clipped. Then turn it right side out. Do this to the four loose seam ends.

Fasten the seams well where they end, turn in the hem all around and put in by hand. This sort of an opening isn't at all noticeable—the skirt hanging together at the bottom unless in motion, and it makes walking easy.

The blouse is cut with the popular square neck, and finished with a flat trimming. A jabot at one side of the front of the blouse makes it a little different from those usually seen; and full length sleeves gathered into narrow wristbands, and a narrow belt complete the dress.

Two shades of a single color would be smart for this dress, and one of the gaily colored trimming bands could be used as a finish.

Pattern No. 767 is for a pretty little dress for a small girl. No branch of sewing is more fascinating than making pretty things for children. Any of the usual wash materials that are used for small dresses will be suitable; and it may be entirely made of one, or two may be used. There is a panel front that would be pretty made of a plain chambray, for instance—and the dress could be cut from one of the pin checked materials. The scalloped edges may be hemstitched, or a narrow, bias binding set on. The dress is cut with short kimono sleeves, finished with turned back cuffs. A collar with scalloped edge finishes the neck.

Still another way of finishing the scalloped edges would be to face the front edges, stitching on the scalloped outline, clipping the edge of each scallop and turning right side out. Then just inside the scalloped edge do the single feather stitch. It is extremely pretty on these small clothes and may be worked in a color or white.

Pattern No. 768 is for a summer dress, and is suitable for any of the crêpes, taffeta, satin, or the silk and cotton materials. It is cut in two pieces—front and back—and the drop shoulders form short kimono sleeves. The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front and the edges are bound. The slashed opening makes it possible to slip the dress on and off easily.

Hemstitching is suggested as a trimming, and a contrasting colored thread could be used for the work. Or, if you are inclined to spend more time on it, the dress would be charming with the neck and sleeves embroidered. The cross stitch is effective and goes rapidly. Then there are ribbons and fancy braids, any of which will look well.

766—Woman's or miss' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4⅝ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

768—Woman's or miss' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 3½ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

767—Child's dress. Sizes 2, 4, and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1¾ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

Close Fitting Little Hats Boast Earrings —a Pirate Touch That Enhances Their Smartness.

CLOSE fitting models of felt, crochet visca, faille, and pedaline and Milan are in much demand. The skullcap type is seen at all the smart teas and bridge parties.

The hat shown in the cut is called the Black Bottom. It is made of Belgian hare black felt. There is a plait one and one-half inches deep across the back. This plait is two inches up from the bottom of the hat. The brim is cutup in the back just above the hair line. It is left long on the sides and is curved up across the face. The points on the sides come just to the bottom of the ear.

Earrings of antique or bright gold are sewed on those points to give the effect of wearing them on the ears. Do not use the part that screws in or onto the ear. Take this off and use the lower part of the earring.

All colors of hackle feathers made into pads are also extremely smart on their close fitting hats. All kinds of pins are used this season, not so much as a side trim, but put directly in front of the hat. We have the dancing girl and the clown made of solid rhinestones with colored stones for eyes and buttons on the dress and suit; the more sober Buddha is exhibited for hat ornaments in jade green and carnelian red.

Orange blossoms, made in small wheels two and one-half inches in diameter, used on both sides of the hat, are also good. Gardenias of yellow, peach, white and flesh are shown on hats. A single gardenia is sewed on the right side of the hat and another one of the same color is pinned on the left shoulder.

In the new shades for spring, monkey skin—a soft tan with a hint of pink in it—holds good for the light tones. Navy blue and black are also good in the deeper shadings. C. G.

Strange Weddings.

Have you ever seen a wedding or luncheon that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Simple Wedding Feast.

I noticed one day, in the restaurant where I dine, one of the white porcelain top tables was spread with a white linen cloth with a bouquet of roses in the center. In fact, it looked fit for a bridal party, so I inquired of friend waitress the reason. She told me a wedding party had stopped on their way to the photographers, saying they would return in half an hour for their wedding dinner and wished to reserve a table for six.

She had been assigned the table and had rushed out and purchased a chicken and flowers extra, and was patting herself on the back for having done so well on so short a notice. The bridal party came in before I had finished my lunch, and to my surprise ordered six cups of coffee and six hot dogs, the entire order amounting to sixty cents.

I slowed up to sympathize with friend waitress. "Anyway," she said, "I never spend a tip until I get it."

H. B. W.

Forgot Something.

It was a church wedding and in the church were as many people as the place could hold. The chancel looked beautiful with all the pretty flowers. The organist played the wedding march while the bridal party marched into the church.

When the bride and groom, the four bridesmaids and the best men and even the dear little flower girls had taken their places, the pastor whispered some question to the groom, who turned scarlet, shook his head, turned and fled from the church.

O, the excitment of it! The bride fainted and looked just like a corpse in her lovely white dress and the long tulle veil. The maids and little flower girls were all weeping and from all sides such remarks were heard as "What a shame!" and "What a disgrace!" and "I never thought that of him!"

A young doctor from the audience took care of the bride and she soon revived. She was leaning on her mother's shoulder when in came—all out of breadth and wiping his perspiring face—the groom.

He handed the marriage license to the pastor, which he had forgotten to bring along as he had promised to do.

A great sigh of relief went through the church and the ceremony was performed without any further disturbance.

G. M. W.

Unique Procedure.

One of the strangest weddings I ever saw was at our parish church. The bells in the tower rang for ten minutes and when the bride and groom entered they separated and went down the side aisles and the bridesmaids and ushers went down the middle one.

After the ceremony the bride and groom went down the middle aisle while the bridesmaids and ushers went down the side ones.

The maid of honor dropped roses on the carpet.

During the party afterward the bride's slippers were filled with greenbacks.

L. K.

Covered with Money.

The pastor just finished, "I now pronounce you man and wife," when there was a great rush in the audience. The men seemed to be pushing forward. Each had in his hand a roll of money in bills.

Then each one tried to see who could pin the most bills on the bride's dress. She was literally covered with five, ten, and twenty dollar bills.

Quite agreeable to the bride, don't you think?

MRS. H. O. L.

Aha!

The strangest wedding I have in mind took place in England several years ago and, of course, was a church wedding. The bride was a "live wire" and always the life of a crowd. Just before the ceremony she was joking and laughing, when the groom, who appeared to be nervous, said rather abruptly, "Don't be so foolish." Everything went off beautifully and the minister had asked the question, "Do you take this man to be your wedded husband?" Whereupon, quick as a flash, the bride-to-be answered, "Not so foolish," and walked out of the church.

Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the monster that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes business quarrels, and generally plays havoc with us mortals. We'd like to know your most notable experience with a jealous person or persons. If you have encountered a situation where jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealous Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Threw Away Note.

I had written a note of thanks to a young man for the flowers which he had sent me while I was in the hospital and gave it to a friend of mine to mail. She had been a former friend of his.

Some time later I saw him, and he inquired as to whether I had received the flowers. "Why, didn't you receive my note of thanks I sent you?" I asked. He said that he hadn't, so of course my first thought was to ask Alice, whom I had intrusted with the note if she had mailed it.

Upon answering she replied, "O, I couldn't be bothered." MRS. H. M. O.

A Jealous Fisherman.

Last summer when we went fishing to a near by lake our neighbor, Mr. R., was fishing on the other side. My dad had a big catch with several large fish, while Mr. R. caught only two small fish. The next week we also caught many fish, while our neighbor caught none. The third week Mr. R. brought a group of boys out to the lake, and as the water was shallow they waded across and had a good time on our side. Mr. R. did not try to stop the boys and we did not catch any fish that day.

L. McC.

A Prize Snooper.

My sister's husband has a jealous disposition. His line of work does not keep him busy continually and as he lives a half a block from his work he comes home at almost any hour to see if his wife is alone.

My husband and I motored 300 miles to pay them a surprise visit. After showing us to our room, she said, "If you hear Henry coming, hide!"

Before we had time to reply we heard Henry's, "I knew I'd catch you if I tried hard enough."

When he saw who it was he felt embarrassed, but sis says he isn't cured.

MRS. E. F.

Unhappy.

I had a beautiful new hat and received many compliments because of it, until one day my friend's fiancé admired it. She borrowed it and kept it for some time. When she returned it I almost cried in front of her, for I could never wear it again. The poor girl has never found happiness, and it is due to her jealous disposition.

HOW TO AVOID FOOT TROUBLES

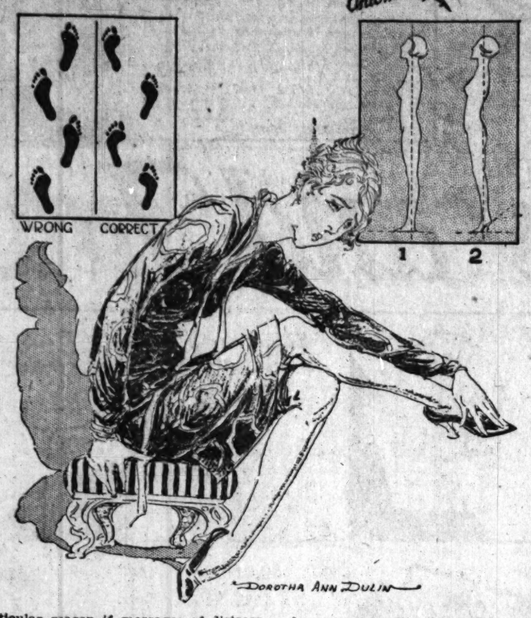
by Antoinette Donnelly



NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—One of the outstanding things about the age in which we live is the concerted effort of the various associations of all sorts to give the public the benefit of their knowledge at little or no cost. This philanthropy thus distributed is of incalculable measurement. There is hardly a branch of hygienic study whose information cannot be had for the asking, so many and varied in aim are the sources of supply. But living at a hectic though glorious age, we are often willing to accept these educational advantages as light reading matter and go the way of weak flesh which would rather do what is most agreeable at the moment.

There has just been brought to my attention a valuable leaflet put out by the Illinois Association of Chiropodists meant for distribution among a people whose joy in living would be appreciably increased were feet treated with the consideration these loyal old members deserve.

A healthy campaign has been in operation for some time past urging women to adopt shoes to fit the needs of the individual foot. The fact that the shoe sizes in popular demand have increased from threes and fours to five and half and sixes proves that the educational work is not without success. Considering the sex that we are immediately we get the feet educated to accept their length philosophically and dress them in the same spirit, that coldness heretofore ascribed to human foot demands that the appearance of coldness be subscribed to with heels of the most appalling height.

Real Philanthropy.

I claim these educational associations as philanthropic because they could, in keeping to themselves their ethical knowledge of this thing and that, reap considerable financial harvest from the treatment of the very ills they caution against. Chiropodists assuredly are in a position to line their coffers handsomely by withholding information on the whys and wherefores of corns and calluses and ingrowing nails and more serious foot troubles. But, of course, there is that fruitful human institution, vanity, to be depended upon to keep them out of the poorhouse.

Whether all women ever will be able to adjust their vanity to common sense methods of shodding their feet I have large and reasonable doubts. Being one of them, myself, I feel fully entitled to doubt for the uncommon sense heel is not without its lure to me too. A spirit of deep humility possesses me when I feel the urge to lay down the law on this subject. However, I cannot let that interfere with my job, which is to carry on my own branch of the educational work in this as well as other items of health and well being.

We all of us know, who have piloted around on heels that throw the body out of balance, cramp the toes and send shooting pains up and down the legs, that we simply are not capable of showing off at our best. Our "pleasant" expression is not nearly so engaging as it might be. And during this particular season if messages of distress are signaled from those pedal extremities of ours we are attacked with the melancholic idea that life isn't what it ought to be one single bit. A heart ache can leave you no more destitute about the futility of living, really, than feet that are groaning with aches and pains.

The Commonest Ailment.

The commonest foot ailments are corns, generally brought about by misfitting shoes and short stockings. And where one of these is jeopardizing the peace of your household, to say nothing of the calm, unwrinkled face, the best thing to do is to hie yourself off to one legally qualified to practice chiropody. The fee is nominal and the relief great. The implements used in a reputable establishment are thoroughly sterilized, which precaution is not always taken in the home treatment.

Soft corns between the toes result from moisture and macerated skin. This thickened skin should be removed and the space between the toes kept dry. Painting the soles and between the toes with a mixture of one-half ounce salicylic acid and four ounces of alcohol is helpful.

Calluses are a thickening of the skin due to friction and a pressure from the footgear. If there is a bone displacement, the abnormal position of the part induces this pressure. The cause has to be investigated and eliminated.

Bunions are a deformitory that often may be corrected in their early stages under competent direction and proper treatment. But once they become a large chronic deformity they require surgical intervention.

The Result of Tight Shoes.

The most thoroughly painful and a frequent foot complaint arises from the healthy nail being forced into the nail fold by pressure from tightly fitted shoes. Ingrowing nail is its familiar cognomen. A nail, if treated civilly, is as harmless as a goldfish, but maltreated it can wreak a horrible vengeance. If a crowded shoe shoves the flesh into the nail, the flap of flesh becomes bright red and painful to touch. Allowed to go unheeded, the nail gradually imbeds itself in the lateral tissues. An irritation sets up which produces excessive granulation or what used to be called proud flesh.

A nail is a protection and should extend a little beyond the flesh and be allowed freedom in that extension. In cutting toenails, remember that. The nail which has a tendency to grow in should have a packing of cotton wedged into the nail groove to keep it separated from the flap of flesh. The person who suffers from this form of foot ailment will never recover peace of mind without taking the precaution to safeguard the foot by a careful selection of shoes. They must be broad in the toe and a thumb's width between the tip of the nail and the tip of the shoe should be permitted. The high heel is particularly disastrous in such cases, since it throws the foot forward upon the shoe tip.

Excessive Perspiration.

Associated with other foot troubles is the common one of excessive perspiration. This may be due to general debility and nervousness. Where an unpleasant odor exists, a one per cent solution of potassium permanganate applied as a lotion after a foot bath and the changing of hosiery twice daily is recommended as a remedy that invariably corrects. Patent leather shoes have a tendency to increase the perspiration trouble, particularly in warm weather.

Pains in the feet and legs arising from the various arch conditions should be accepted as nature's warnings of trouble. Most common factors in creating arch troubles are overweight, occupation, general physical weakness, high heels and improper shoes. Also the method in which the feet are used in walking. In the accompanying illustration you see the correct way to walk is to point the toes almost directly forward; the wrong walk, to turn the feet out.

To get an idea of the right or wrong balance you are subjecting yourself to with heels, compare your standing position and the correct position of the organs, spine and weight distribution with the illustrations above.

I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MARY G.: FOR THIN EYEBROWS, rub yellow vaseline into them before brushing. Then with an eyebrow brush or a small fine tooth brush brush them night and morning to promote their gloss and train them into shape. Do not allow the vaseline to get into the eyes, as it is irritating to them.

T. I. G.: BUNIONS ARE THE result of great pressure and friction on the joint. They are brought about by wearing too short shoes and stockings. Have yourself fitted to shoes at a reliable shoe store. The joint must be relieved of all pressure if you would find comfort. You may paint the portion with a lotion of two drams each of carbolic acid, tincture of iodine, and glycerin.

T. H. G.: A GOOD DEPILATORY for the arms or other parts of the body where you wish to remove superfluous hair is: Sulphide of barium, 2 drams; oxide of zinc, 3 drams; starch, 3 drams. Mix well and keep tightly corked. When you wish to use it, add sufficient water to make a paste, and spread over the part, allowing it to remain on several minutes, or until there is a slight burning sensation.

F. B. V.: CLEANLINESS IS THE most important factor in the care of perspiring feet. The feet must be bathed daily and stockings should be changed every day. A twenty-five per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water is an excellent remedy. Apply for three nights, then once a week. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for other helpful suggestions in "The Care of the Feet."

T. McC.: I WOULD NOT RECOMmend the use of peroxide, even in small quantities, for keeping the hair light. It is the natural thing for your hair to grow darker as you grow older. Peroxide dries the hair and gives it a strawy look. Wash the hair with a good castile soap, and if you wish, add lemon juice to the last rinse water, as it gives a golden tint. Instructions for shampooing may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a classic saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial team? What was that bright saying, Mrs. Mrs.? Send it to us, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Constant Practice.

Wife: Just think, Mrs. Johnson learned to play the banjo in two lessons.

Husband: That's nothing—it should be easy for her—she's been picking at her husband for ten years.

MRS. E. F. D.

Quieting Hubby.

Hubby (disgusted over wife's cooking)—Believe me, I certainly would like anything to know why God made us women so beautiful and yet so confoundedly dumb?

Wife—Well, I'll tell you, my dear! He made us beautiful so you men would love us and he made us dumb so we could love you men. G. E.

A Case of Necessity.

Son—Wifey, do all women prefer the married men to the other kind?

Dad—What other kind? D. D.

The Only Caller.

The husband [after a typical family quarrel]: Wasn't that the doorbell? I wonder who it can be.

Wife: Don't worry, dear, it isn't for me. The only caller at our door is the proverbial wolf. A. J. R.

Her Calling.

Hubby and wife, returning from a party where the great callings of various individuals were discussed, the exceedingly lazy husband remarked:

"Well, I guess I miss my calling." The wife retorted, "Well, I didn't! All his work seems to be a-calling you to eat and a-calling you to get up for work—and plenty of calling I have to do for that!" MRS. S. B.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Parsimonious.

The cheekiest person I know is a young farmer of this community, who replied to the request of a neighbor for help with a job of corn shelling the next day, something like this: "Well, no, I guess I can't. You're going to move out of the neighborhood the first of March, ain't you? And I wouldn't be likely get my help paid back—but say, I would like to get a load of cobs."

The other young fellow replied, "You win. Come and get a free load of cobs," and the tightwad did actually drive up to the job the next day, load up, and drive off home, evidently considering the cobs worth the "razzing" he got from the boys working on the job. Mrs. J. E. M.

Brings the Tea Along.

The cheekiest person I know is a woman who eats her lunch downtown every day and as a part of her noonday meal has to have her cup of tea. Tea is 10 cents a pot. Does she pay her 10 cents like we do? She does not——. Every day she orders a pot of hot water and brings her own tea leaves. Can you imagine that for nerve! C. M.

False Pretenses.

During a visit with a wealthy cousin she remarked to me, "I've just bought a new dress and I don't look well in that color. Wouldn't you like to try it on?"

I was delighted and said I would be glad to. I went home proudly bearing my supposed gift on my arm.

A few days later she called me over the telephone and informed me I could settle for the dress at the shop where she had had it charged! A. W. G.

Making the Caddy Pay.

I used to be a caddy at the —— Golf club links. There I met many cheeky persons. The cheekiest of them all was a woman. She hired me for her caddy one day.

Off the side of the first fairway there was a big hill about thirty feet high. It was all covered with tangled grass. She teed off, but instead of the ball going down the fairway it went about half way down the hill. I tried to find it, but it was even hard to walk in the tangled grass. I hunted around about fifteen minutes, when she finally put a new ball on the course.

She was all right until it was time to pay me. The caddy rates were 40c for the nine holes. She gave me 20c and said the other 20c was for the golf ball I lost. A. C. S.

The World's Worst.

A neighbor whom I had known but a short time had a breakdown in his car. He borrowed mine, driving it over a 50 mile R. F. D. route every day for three months. After he finally brought it home (or rather after I had gone and brought it home, for he would not), he came one day while I was away from home and took two of the casings off the car, claiming the ones on it at the time he borrowed the car had worn out, and he had taken two off his own car.

In the meantime, all my best tools had disappeared. When I asked him about settling for the use of the car, he would not pay one cent for the three months' use of it, and to cap the climax, he had me charged with a bill of $8 for repairs.

Did I pay it? M. C.

Making It Worse.

Occasionally the automatic stop on our phonograph would stick, but was so easily adjusted that it did not seem necessary to have it attended to. One day when I came home I found a friend working with it and he announced: "I have taken this stop off. It is no good." When I asked him to put it back as he found it he worked with it a few minutes and left.

Several days later I requested him again to put the stop back, and this time he worked at it until he had it so we could not use the phonograph at all. Then he left with the remark, "I never did know the first thing about phonographs."

Now I am waiting until I have the money and chance to send to the city for repairs. Mrs. B. M. G.

An Unpleasant Neighbor.

The cheekiest person I ever saw was the man who moved his family in the apartment across the hall from me. The first evening he was there he took our paper and read it before we had a chance to. In two weeks after they had moved in they had borrowed my electric iron, sweeper, heater, books, and even asked me to keep the baby for them.

Then, to show his appreciation, he went into a restaurant where we were well known and made all manner of fun of my husband and me. He was a stranger in town, while we were old residents. We surely liked his nerve! F. M. B.

OH YES! I can wear smaller, daintier shoes since I use Tiz. It is because my feet are never swollen or tender any more.

The minute you put your feet in a Tiz bath, you feel pain and tenderness drawn out. Oh! What relief. No more, tired, aching, burning, shoe-chafed feet.

Tiz draws out the poisons and acids that puff up your feet. Get a box of Tiz for a few cents at any drug or department store.

An insect with a $200,000,000 appetite

You know how women dread the moth. No woolens, silks, furs or down comforters are safe from the insect and her pernicious offspring. Their natural abiding place is in all such household effects folded away in darkness.

Here the moth lays her eggs. The eggs hatch into larvae, or worms. The worms, born naked, need clothes, which they make out of YOURS in the form of a cocoon. In this they grow, meanwhile feeding on the materials and increasing the size of cocoon as needed. Finally they go to sleep, wake up as moths and flit away, leaving ruin behind.

In one year a moth produces four generations of destroyers. The total loss ascribed by authorities to moth damage is close to two hundred millions of dollars annually. The answer is —

Get protection...in one of these regular $50.00 Lane Cedar Chests...

THE SUCCESSFUL WOMAN AND HAPPINESS

Is the Financially Independent Ever Really Contented? Has She Everything Her Heart Desires? Here Are Answers.

By Doris Blake

NOT long ago one of the most successful business women in America took over a building, the transaction of which involved several million dollars. Reporters immediately camped on her trail for stories of the life that led to an unusually great measure of success. To one who suggested that it must be a glorious feeling to review an achievement such as hers, she replied:

"It is terrible. Last night I ran across an old friend of mine with whom I had been out of touch for years on account of my work. There we sat as strangers with nothing in common. The old human touch had evaporated. It is terrible, I say."

One cannot help detecting a note of pessimism in much of the literature dealing with women who thought feminism the direct road to woman's happiness. Some writers have no hesitation in describing the modern independence as blatantly destructive of her happiness. It will remain a debatable question, no doubt, so long as economic conditions force women into the wage earning field. There will be successful women of the world, surrounded with the physical comforts life would have denied them but for the advantages of the modern day, who will scout the theory that independence and personal happiness are impossible of attainment. There are other women who will look back from some pinnacle of achievement and ask, as one woman asked: "What does it profit a woman to gain the whole world of independence and suffer the loss of the things every woman wants, whether she is successful or not?"

Each Woman Has Her Own Ideals.

It depends upon so many circumstances, upon so many individual heart traits whether the game proves worth the candle or not. Men and the sentiments, the attentions and the support or the ministering to they represent may, to one woman, mean nothing. To another, perhaps just as able to sign a check for thousands of dollars, the old Eve with her dependent weaknesses can no more be ruled out of her heart than can be the cardiac organ, itself. And so optimism or pessimism can no more embrace the whole body of so-called successful independence than can the younger generation be embodied in one sweeping statement, pro or con.

But I do hold this, a disturbing observation, if not one containing the seeds of pessimism, women's capacity to hero worship the male has diminished, perhaps not in ratio to her progress beside him as co-worker, but sufficiently in hundreds of instances to make man feel a destructive sense of inferiority. In certain exaggerated cases woman's own sense of power and accomplishment breeds in her a contempt for man. Not a woman, understand, abnormal in any other respect than ensues from her proven results that she is as capable as he, and sometimes more capable. All of which may contribute to her greater success in business—but also to her invariable failure as a domestic partner.

You can argue till the cows come home and until they start out again about the reasonableness of the modern matrimonial partnership arrangements, about women being accepted at full brain power by an appreciative and loving male, but until man has undergone some miraculous change in his construction, no signs of which are upon the horizon at the moment, marriage is never a success where the man is made to feel consciously or unconsciously that he is not just a little bit the superior.

The suggestion is advanced by a visiting English woman journalist that the gold diggers' fascination lies not so much in the fact that men are easily fooled as in the sop to their hunger for that feeling of being fully able to provide and supply for women, dominant in the able bodied male. An American woman author, herself the victim of "successful woman" circumstances, said to me: "No woman is clever whose husband is not made to appear clever by her."

"Slow Torture."

Rita Weiman, well known writer, in a recent story in Liberty magazine, has cleverly portrayed one type of successful business woman who makes marriage Hades for the man who draws her. She called it "Slow Torture," a mild caption for the situation involved.

Mildred is a girl described by the author as the "sort who dominates the room the instant she enters it," a girl marked for success by the sheer force of her personality. David, her adorer, is a plodding student, earnest to the point of struggling long hours over his home work in his young days. Both elected to make architecture a career. They married when the salary of each was fifty dollars a week. Theirs was judged the perfect union, an ideal love match.

They worked in the same office, Mildred continuing with her job. They had been married a year when she got a raise, while David did not. Faint jarring notes had already been struck with Mildred's supervision of problems assigned to David and suggestions from her that held her young spouse up to ridicule before other draftsmen in the office. David made protests on a number of occasions that he would like to puzzle his problems out by himself. She argued that she was only trying to help him.

Finally David took a position with another concern "not for the reason that his wife's salary was more than his own, but because she kept him in mind of the fact. His status became unbearable."

When the Climax Came.

Then we are carried through scenes amid social surroundings made possible by David's financial progress away from the dominating influence of his wife. "On all occasions, in little petty happenings that tear a man's soul and break down his self-respect, devastate his peace of mind—at dinner and bridge parties, in their home, even as they waited for a taxi outside the theater—she told him how to do things. And David's suffering was a cross on which daily he was crucified."

The way David swung his golf club was the occasion for a public reprimand. The scene that followed might have warned Mildred of the latent potentialities in her man.

But the climax came with the interference of Mildred on plans for a Long island show place upon which David had worked for months, the stamp of approval on which, already seen in the owner's enthusiasm meant an ultimate partnership. Mildred insisted upon accompanying him, in spite of David's protest, on a tour of the place, now almost complete.

Overruling his months of work, his pride, she made suggestions to the owner, "the feminine touch" she called the things that David had not included in his plans. She succeeded in making David look and feel his inferiority "as effectively as if she had put a dunce cap on his head." That night he strangled Mildred, not with the finality she deserved, for she recovered. Later she got a divorce on the grounds of extreme cruelty. David went to another city to live and the world judged him harshly.

The Mildreds are not always business women conscious of their superior power. There are wives quite capable of breaking down a man's self-respect. But the earning wife with her additional implement of torture, a pay envelope, has it within her power to be a deadlier enemy in the job of tearing a man's heart and soul up by the roots.

Women the World Over

The honor of being the first woman justice of the peace in the United States rests upon the shoulders of Mrs. Catherine W. McCullough of Chicago. She has been practicing law in Chicago for the last 40 years.

Though she never had boys or girls of her own, Mrs. Josephine L. Petit of Fitchburg, Mass., has had more than 300 children to call her mother. She and her husband take care of the New England French-American Home.

The Woman's Bar association of Washington, D. C., is making a determined effort to put through legislation amending the inheritance laws of the District of Columbia, so that female relatives shall be on an equal footing with the male.

Dr. Elizabeth A. Sullivan, wife of a Boston physician, has been chosen by the welfare societies of that city to do mental diagnosis of difficult cases dealing with estranged parents and unruly children.

At the age of 15 years Barbara Hutton, granddaughter of the late Frank W. Woolworth, with $30,000,000 in her own right, is considered the richest young girl in the country.

For the first time in the history of congress a woman now holds a position as bill clerk in that body. She is Miss Mary Simpson of Vermont, and her salary is $2,800.

Answers to Love Queries

—By Doris Blake

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Opened a Letter.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl almost 18 and I go with a fellow 21 who is an organist. We have been going together five months and we are engaged.

"He has some girl from another city write to him and has the letters sent to my house.

"The other day a letter came and I opened it because I was jealous.

"Please tell me what to do. He knows I opened it. HORSES."

You made a ghastly mistake in opening mail addressed to another, Horses. He has good reason to resent your action, and it may take him some time to overlook the offense. You should have given him his mail, explaining your disapproval of such a correspondence, dear.

There Are Others.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl in my teens. I am in love with a young man who showers his attentions on my friend. But I am head over heels in love with him, and I know his head is just turned by her baby ways. I would greatly appreciate your advice in my case.

"HEARTBROKEN."

You can't expect success in winning a man who is so deeply interested in another, Heartbroken. Do the sensible thing and put all thoughts of him out of your head—hard though it may be. There are others, dear.

She Forget Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going out with a girl for nearly six months. Three weeks ago she told me she was going on her vacation. Since then I never have heard from her. She told me she was going to write to me every three days, but I didn't hear from her. CURLY HAIRED CHARLIE."

She must have been fickle to forget you so quickly, Charlie. Don't feel too badly over the slight, as there are others to take her place.

A Word Would Help.

"Dear Miss Blake: I went with a young man for a year and thought there was nobody like him. I had an argument with him, because I believed things people told me.

"I do not go around with any boy friends at all. I still care for the former one. When he sees me he speaks and is on friendly terms. Do you think we will ever go together again and do you think he still cares for me? SO LONESOME."

Such a lack of confidence is mighty disconcerting, Lonesome. Don't you think a word from you, showing you still believed in him, would do much to reinstate your friendship, dear? Try it.

Overcome Competition.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a girl over a year and love her. Lately she's been telling me she doesn't know if she'll see me or not. She often receives telephone calls from other boys and doesn't care for me any more. Please advise.

"DOWNHEARTED."

Aren't you jealous because others appreciate her good qualities, too, Downhearted? Show your metal by proving you're the best man. Don't lose heart because of competition. Meet and overcome it.

Do as She Does.

"Dear Miss Blake: My girl tells me she goes out with other men, but if she ever found out I went out with other women she would be through with me. SHEIK."

What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Don't let her tell you differently or keep you from seeing other girls.

Sick Stomach Teaches Her a Good Lesson

Miss Jeanne Ginsberg, Bronx, N. Y., writes: "I had become accustomed to arising each day with a heavy head, dizzy, and a bad taste in my mouth. My bowels were frequently clogged and constipated. One day I became so sick to my stomach I had to leave an important job and go home. I tried CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. I feel greatly relieved since using them and whenever my stomach and head goes bad I certainly know what to do."

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are sugar coated, small, easy to swallow, purely vegetable, and relieve the bowels free from pain. They tonic the system as they are purely vegetable and do not contain Mercury, or poisonous drugs.

HORSEMANSHIP

How to Ride

A Series for Men and Women

By CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS
11th U. S. Cavalry

Horseback riding is being revived with increasing interest throughout the land, so expert advice on riding style and horsemanship generally will be of interest to those who, either as novices or experts, seek such recreation for its healthfulness and for the real joy it affords. The following is the first of a series of articles by Capt. Fenton Stratton Jacobs, United States cavalry, who has had considerable experience in horse training, and who is a graduate of the famous cavalry school at Fort Riley, Kas. Capt. Jacobs' articles will deal with the subject from various angles. He will stress the proper way to ride in order to obtain the greatest enjoyment with the least tiresome effect on horse and rider, as now taught at the cavalry school.

NO sport in recent years has made greater strides in popularity than horseback riding. Why? Because there is no other sport in which men, women and children, alike, can combine pleasure and physical stimulant. The American College of Surgeons, through its late president, Dr. A. J. Ochsner, M. D., LL. D., once said: "There is no other form of exercise that so fully affects every nerve and every organ of the human body in a healthful way as does horseback riding." Dr. Andrew A. Gour writes: "The visible results of the sport are the distinctive bearing and graceful carriage of the person who rides regularly—bright, clear eyes and healthful complexion."

The word horsemanship is as often abused as are the horses in the hands of the unskilled. Horsemanship includes the care and management of horses, as well as being skilled in the training and riding of horses. Frequently, practice alone may produce individual success, and a man on a certain horse may produce astounding results even in violation of well established principles; while on another horse and using other equipment he would be helpless. No intelligent horseman ever claims for his own method the A and Z of equitation, for it is the belief of all who are not hide bound by prejudice that the method of riding, the bit and saddle and breed of a horse are all dependent upon local conditions and the work required.

Should Women Ride Astride?

Before launching into the specific details of our "seat," which will more nearly than any other I have seen produce the ideal, a relaxed rider on a relaxed horse, I wish to discuss at this time certain generalities which so often have been made the subject of debate.

Should women and girls ride astride? Read farther. For three years I was in charge of equitation and tactics at the University of Arizona, Tucson. During that time I had approximately 600 co-eds from nearly every state in the Union, in addition to the 2,000 or more cadets, in my riding classes. They rode the "McClellan" army saddle and the English, French and American flat saddle astride. I gave them as nearly as I could the so-called "Fort Riley" seat. The advanced class included high school work, jumping four feet, and cross country galloping over the roughest terrain in that vicinity. And the girls gave a better exhibition than did the cadets taking the parallel course.

So there is no question in my mind as to whether a woman shall ride astride a horse. It may be interesting to note that a sixth century vase found at Daphnae, lower Egypt, shows a woman riding astride. It has been proved by other sources that women rode astride until the twelfth century. A pillion or pad was then introduced on which a lady rode sidewise behind her husband and steadied herself by holding on to his belt.

History of the Side Saddle.

In "Readings in Social Problems," by Albert Benedict Wolfe, we find that in Europe, several hundred years ago, riding sidewise by women with feet enveloped in a voluminous skirt, was popularized solely because a French princess set the fashion to conceal her deformed spine. In England the side saddle as well as many other other styles and customs was introduced by Anne, daughter of the king of Bohemia, first queen of Richard II., in 1388.

The side saddle when first fully developed had two heads or pommels between which the right leg was supported, the support of the left being the stirrup. The third pommel or leaping head, against which the left leg rests, was, it is said, invented as the result of a match between two gentlemen riders to ride a steeplechase on side saddles. The winner had provided himself with the additional support for his left leg. At first the leaping head was used only in the hunting field and the double "cow horn" was retained; however, as its uselessness became apparent the second pommel disappeared.

Again, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, the side saddle was popularized because a member of her royal household had a withered right limb, which was not noticeable when she rode sidewise wearing a full skirt. Thus we find the side saddle owes its origin to fashion and to the camouflage of infirmities, rather than to a scientific development to benefit women.

CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS.

Riding Has Many Benefits.

In America the women who lived in the west, where the country was rough, and sports such as shooting, contest riding, and racing were done on horseback, were the first to take up the cross seat; because it is the natural, safer, and more efficient way to ride.

For accurate riding, the leg around the horse—thigh, knee, calf contact seat (which in a later installment will be discussed in detail) is obviously more sure of the desired result than the tapping of a riding crop on the right or "off side," necessary when riding the side-saddle, to turn the horse on the forehand to the right, on two tracks to the left, or any other movement requiring displacement of the hindquarters to the left. And most important, it enables both rider and horse to be symmetrically developed.

Summing up the question, it has been my observation that horseback riding astride, for girls, aside from being an attractive, clean and exhilarating sport, has been highly beneficial for those who master the art. It stimulates self-confidence, daring, consideration for others, aggressiveness, quick thinking, coördination of mind and body, relaxation, a better posture, and, as President Wilson once said, "The outside of a horse is good for the inside of a man"—or woman. However, regardless of method, style or whatnot, let us ride—ride as often as possible, for the good of this and the generation to follow.

ISN'T IT ODD

by William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the aphids, those tiny insects that live on the tips of tender plants and the under sides of leaves, should go along for generations without wings and then, of a sudden, finding is necessary to move, should overnight equip themselves with the means of flight!

The aphids are the sapsuckers of the garden, the tiny fellows who settle down, drive their beaks into the bark until they reach the sap, and sit there contentedly for a lifetime drinking their fill. So sure are they that they will not want to move that, in shedding their skins as is the way of insects as they grow, some of them cast off both legs and cling there blind and helpless for the rest of their lives.

Clinging thus, the helpless mothers give birth to their young. These have legs and eyes and run quite actively about until they get located and get their connections made with the sap streams.

The processes are repeated, until, perhaps, the plant harboring these tiny creatures gets to have so many of them that they drink all its sap. There is none left to nourish its leaves and fruit and it languishes and dies. Thus the aphids prove very harmful to plant life.

But the aphids themselves, having killed the plant that furnished their food, find themselves facing an emergency. They have got to go away from there and find a new source of food. Possibly it is a cherry tree in which they have been living. Possibly the season has so advanced that a hop field near by is full of young and tender plants. If the aphids could but get from the cherry tree to the hop field they would again be in clover.

It is when faced with this emergency that the insects perform the miracle. All the generations of the summer have been quite wingless. One watching them would long ago have written them down as insects without wings. But here, of a sudden, they need the means of flight that they may preserve themselves. Of a sudden a generation of aphids appears that is possessed of wings. These they unfurl and fly away to the hop field. After the journey they bore into the streams of hop sap, make their connections, shed their traveling skin, wings and all, and again settle down to a quiet life.

But when, later on, the hop plants mature and begin to dry out, a new generation of winged aphids appears and they fly away to some other plant where the sap still flows.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The barometer on the side porch hung rather high and Rowen saw his father take it down one morning to get a more accurate reading.

So Rowen proceeded to do the same thing later, and it fell from his little hands and broke. He ran to his mother with a fragment in his hands. "M-mother, I b-busted the weather," he sobbed. C. M.

I am a country school teacher. Recently we gave a little playlet. I had memorized most of it hearing the children rehearse, and expected to be able to prompt any who needed it without reference to the book.

A little girl named Susie took the part of the "queen." When the play came off and we had come to the part where the queen enters the scene, she was slow in coming, and thinking there was a hitch somewhere I said, lotto voce: "Enter, Susie."

But Susie piped up, much affronted and excited, and said: "You shouldn't say 'Susie,' I'm the queen!"

"It brought down the house." We are "booked" for another night, and Susie's reputation as an actress is speeding towards stardom. H. K.

The workmen had been grading for a new street past the house and Lloyd, aged 3, had been told to play in the yard and not go out near the place where the men were at work, but during the day he managed to get out there, and was having a grand time when his mother discovered him.

"Lloyd, I thought I told you to stay in the yard."

"I is in the yard. They took it all out in the street, so I had to go out here to play in it, didn't I?" C. E. O.

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

By KEMBLE

His Ma called him Robin; his Dad called him Son;
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun.
So he called himself Robinson Grewso.

THE sun had been up for several hours when Robin and Chin-Chin finally wakened. Robin rubbed his eyes and looked around.

"Where are we?" he asked, in a small, frightened voice.

"I have an idea we're right here." Chin-Chin tried to laugh as he said it, but the laugh wasn't in him. He was too scared.

"Here, have a soldier."

They ate their breakfast without saying a word to each other. Then Robin said, very seriously: "Chin-Chin, we must start right out and discover what lives on this island. I'll take the gun and the jelly beans, and you fly ahead and if you see anything, just drop to the ground and flap your wings three times and I'll creep up and shoot."

The parrot did as he was told, and as he neared the top of a little hill he dropped to the ground. Flap, flap, flap went his wings. Robin crept up and looked.

"A cannibal. That's what he is," gasped Robin.

Down in the hollow sat a fat little colored boy, eating chocolate soldiers. Robin rushed at him, waving his gun and yelling like an Indian.

"Shoot a jelly bean at him to scare him," screamed Chin-Chin.

The fat little colored boy rose and stood perfectly still.

"What you-all acting so foolish about?" he grinned. "I ain't going to hurt you," and he danced up and down as he stretched out his chubby hand.

"Here, have a soldier. I play with them first; then I eat them. They don't mind at all. I used to lose them all the time, so now I eat them. Then I know just where they are."

Robin could not help laughing at this.

"You're not such a bad cannibal, after all. What's your name?" he said.

"Ain't got no name. Never had none," grinned the little darky.

"Well, I'll give you one," said Robin. "The same name that is in my book at home. I'll call you Friday."

"No, no," screamed Chin-Chin. "It's perfectly foolish to call him Friday. Call him Chocolate Sundae."

"My, my, but that's a sweet name. I never ate one, but I've heard about them. Now you-all come up to my camp and I'll show you how I live."

Sundae led the way, and soon Robin and Chin-Chin found themselves seated on a big mat made of long grass, eating popcorn balls.

"Where do you get these nice popcorn balls?" asked Chin-Chin.

"I'll show you," and Sundae jumped up and took them to his "plant ground." "First I want you to see my digger bug at work."

The biggest beetle Robin had ever seen was busy making holes in the earth. He would poke his nose down and push the dirt back with his claws, then he'd drop a seed in each hole and cover it up and stamp on it.

"He's planting for my next crop. He keeps busy, he does."

Over in another field were cornstalks nearly ten feet high. On the stalks the ears of corn were popping and scattering the big white kernels all about them.

"The sun does that," said Sundae, and he was very proud. "You see, the sun is my best friend. He wakes me up in the morning and tells me when to go to bed at night, and he keeps me warm and makes a fire for me so I can cook my food, and he does lots of kind things just like this."

Sundae gathered up the popcorn and dipped it into a bucket filled with maple sirup, and made some more nice fresh popcorn balls.

"You know, I have a friendly woodpecker that taps the trees for me so I can get this maple sirup. All the birds and beasts on this island are friendly. They won't hurt you if you are kind to them. And funny! Smoky mackerel! But some of them just make you die a-laughing. Funniest things you ever saw. You just stick around and you'll have a good time."

"O, we'll stick," said Robin, "won't we, Chin-Chin?"

"You bet," said Chin-Chin. "We're the sticky kind, especially when we're eating popcorn balls."

Eating popcorn balls.

It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

HERE'S A CHALLENGE EASY TO MEET.

THERE are many, I know, able to help the young girl who wrote this letter:

"Dear Miss Brown: Owing to a great deal of illness and misfortune for the last six months, we are almost penniless. I am 21 and the oldest in a family of six girls. My mother is a widow. Can any of your readers help us with clothing? We can remodel them, and anything given us will be greatly appreciated. V. P."

Isn't this a challenge to all of us—and one of the easiest chances to help that we could imagine? It is the same story that causes so much misery in the world—illness—too much expense at once, and a breakdown of courage and spirit under the burden.

The case is only one of scores we have on record right now, where illness is falling with crushing force on families whose savings have been exhausted by illness or misfortunes, and whose earnings leave no margin above current living expenses. And when we think of all the clothing outgrown and discarded every day in Chicago, is there any reason why we should allow this hardship to continue bearing upon these families?

There's the happiness of giving and a suggestion to you, my friends. The appeals do not ask for real sacrifice; outgrown clothing still good but which has outlived its usefulness to you means so much and fulfills long felt wants in many cases. Ask yourself whether you can afford to miss the happiness that will come to the recipient and to you from meeting the need. If you do, I'm certain you'll be among those who help.

Song Books to Pass On.

"Our church has four sets of song books, with 24 to 30 in each set. We will gladly pass them on to some organization who can pay the postage on them. "MRS. G. B."

Some Sunday school or mission could make splendid use of these song books. If you would like to have them, let me know at once.

Boys Want a Wagon.

"I am a widow and the mother of two boys. They want a wagon to play with and I can't afford to buy it for them, as I am just starting to keep house. I would appreciate anything in the line of furniture or rugs, also. "MRS. H. A."

Children outgrow their playthings so quickly, I am sure there will be a wagon for these small boys. If you have any furniture for the mother let us know about that, too.

Deserted Mother.

"A young mother with two babies has been deserted by her husband. She has been sick with heart trouble, but hopes to be able to go to work soon. They need clothing badly. She takes size 38 and the children are a girl, 3, and a boy, 2. MRS. E. O."

This young mother's chances for finding a position probably would be improved greatly if she had some of the clothing you are about to discard. Perhaps you'll have some for the babies, too.

Hard Working Youngster.

"I am just a poor working boy, therefore I come to you for help. I have been promised a job working evenings in a grocery store, but I must have a bicycle to deliver groceries, and I wonder if some one of your readers has one he no longer wants. R. C."

An ambitious lad is this, who could make splendid use of the bicycle you've outgrown. May he have it?

For Youthful Actors.

"The high school in which I teach is putting on 'The Willow Plate,' and some of the pupils cannot afford the Chinese costumes needed. Perhaps some readers have costumes and queues they will be willing to pass on to our school. S. P."

Have you a mandarin coat or a queue to give these high school students? They'll be quite necessary if the performance is to be a success.

Widow Needs Coat and Dress.

"Do you think you could get me a black coat and dress, size 40? My husband is dead and I have a broken ankle, so I can't work. MRS. D. S."

Somewhere, I know, there must be a black coat and a black dress in this poor widow's size, which she might be wearing. Have you either of these garments to give her?

Dog to Give Away.

"I have a white fox terrier, female, clean and intelligent which I will give to some one who can give it a good home. D. K."

Here's a lovely little pet for some one who'd like to have a dog. Would you?

Two Gifts.

"I have a gas iron I would be glad to give any one who could make use of it. I also have a large green glass dome suitable for a dining room electric light fixture. MRS. H. F."

This iron would lighten your work considerably when laundry day comes 'round and the dome would be a great improvement to your dining room.

How I Dress My Hair

By Edna Wallace Hopper

The thousands who see me daily on the stage wonder at my beautiful hair. It is wavy, glossy and abundant. Nearly everyone thinks that some wonderful hair dresser gives it daily care.

Not so—I'm too busy for that. I never go to a hair dresser for a Marcel wave. I simply apply twice weekly a hair dress which great experts made for me. It is not sticky, not greasy. Before they made it I never dreamed a liquid could do so much. Now all toilet counters supply it as Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75c.

Nothing else I know gives a girl or woman so much added loveliness at once. No one can resist it when she knows. My guarantee is enclosed with every bottle, so it costs you nothing if it doesn't please. Go try it at my expense.

FOR PERFECT PERMANENT WAVING

A Wave like Nature's Own —and equally Safe!

A Circuline Wave assures you of two things—a wave as tight or as loose as you yourself prefer; and absolute freedom from chemicals such as lye, ammonia or potash, injurious to the hair. With Circuline your hair is as beautiful, as naturally flowing, as though Nature herself had waved it. Because Circuline treats your hair according to its individual requirements, it assures you in advance of perfect results in the end!

But to be sure that you are getting a Circuline Wave, make certain that your hairdresser uses authentic Circulines. You will recognize them as she immerses one for each curl in clear, fresh water. Each is individually wrapped, and stamped with the name "Nestle Circuline". Only when you see them, when your hairdresser uses them, are you sure of a Circuline Wave. Write for Circuline booklet to:

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

On the Food Piece Called a Sandwich Is Modeled an Array of Edibles Ranging from Humble Snacks to Superdelicacies

By Jane Eddington.

NO ADEQUATE classification of sandwiches can be made, yet we are tempted to make the following:

1. Plain cold sandwiches, or two slices of bread, preferably well buttered, with slices of meat—beef, ham, chicken, etc.—or American or Swiss cheese, or some mince for a filling. And, best of all, often plain bread and butter sandwiches — sometimes substantial, sometimes of the thinnest slices of bread that can be cut.

2. Plain hot sandwiches. A favorite humble form of this type is the sandwich filled with slices of roast beef with a hot gravy over it, but many other sorts have been devised. The summer salad is freshened up often with a slice of hot bacon or of thin broiled ham or cold cooked ham sliced, heated up, or made like broiled meat.

3. Open sandwiches. Here we have possibilities and suggestions. The ship's steward on the great ocean liners serves these. In color and design they furnish interest as an afternoon tea refreshment. The relish called a canape is on this model. In both these cases the size is small, but quite large open sandwiches may be made for luncheon purposes and several served on a plate—one more like a relish, another like a main dish, another much like a salad, and yet another like a dessert.

4. Storied sandwiches. For these more than the original two slices of bread are used, or from three up. These range in variety from the hearty club to the tea delicacy of many thinnest slices of bread with fillings like the thinnest of icings, and these, like cakes, are sometimes finished with pipings of cream cheese, or butter or even of a fondant.

5 Fancy sandwiches. Here we have a medley of true sandwich forms with great variety secured through fillings of the most divers sorts, fish and meat pastes, spicy mixtures and sweet fillings.

6. Dessert sandwiches. In these cake or wafers take the place of bread, and they are only related to the sandwich by their form. Commercially the ice cream sandwich is of this type. Slices of sponge cake toasted, or not, with slices of a brick of ice cream make a pleasant dessert. Some of the elaborate puff paste forms are really on the sandwich model, and so is a cream puff and, for that matter, a layer cake.

Making Plain Sandwiches.

It is a great advantage to cream butter before trying to spread bread with it. Tough crusts must be cut off for politeness' sake, but it is better to leave them on unless the sandwiches are to be closely wrapped, especially if they are to be kept for a half day. This is why rolls and biscuits and even cream puffs replace the slices of bread acceptably. The crusts keep the bread from drying out. Unless the sandwiches are to be put into a press, it is best to use several small slices of meat for filling them, because otherwise all the meat may be pulled out with the first bite.

The meat should not be sliced until the bread has been buttered, and it is best to have each slice of bread buttered because thus the meat is protected, or kept from drying out. It is, in other words, briefly potted.

Sandwich Breads.

Commercially, in this day, there is the special sandwich loaf of white bread, but one of the best ways to keep sandwiches from being monotonously tiresome is to vary the breads with every picnic, or tea party, by using different breads and to depend as much on the dark breads as upon the white.

Home made oatmeal bread that will cut as thin as a wafer makes a delicious foundation for a chopped olive and mayonnaise filling. A good Boston brown bread that will cut in thin slices is wonderfully appetizing with almost all the cream cheese fillings, and in fact is excellent with a thick sour cream filling which old fashioned people might have a prejudice concerning until they tasted the mixture.

Cheese Spiced Sandwich Filling.

One pound of American cheese, two or three beaten eggs, one-half cup of cream, salt and pepper. Cut the cheese fine. Beat the eggs and mix the cream and the cheese with them. Put all in a double boiler or over a gentle fire and stir constantly until the cheese melts. Add the seasonings after taking it from the fire, and it is well to include a few grains of red pepper. Pour into a jar and cool. When it is cool it should be the consistency of soft butter. If it should happen to curdle in cooking, or if we wish to have it extra smooth it should be sieved. It will keep for a week and is an economical way of using cheese, more so than using American cheese sliced.

Stiff Cheese Fillings in General.

The open cheese sandwich for luncheon is excellent, and may be used as the main part, or as a dessert part. In the latter case sprinkle some sugar over the cheese as it melts on the top of a slice of bread which has been toasted on one side, before the small chips of cheese are put on the other and melted under the broiler. Well pressed cheese sandwiches are dipped like French toast and heated up in the same way that it is.

The Cream Cheese Fillings.

Variety in these perhaps began when the cream cheese was mixed with pimento purees, or the red ingredient chopped, and open sandwiches fixed up in all sorts of fancy ways with this combination. Sometimes the cheese was put on the thin and fancy cut of bread, and the pimento cut fine was scattered over it, or crosses made, or lattices. Cream cheese mixed with green sweet pepper chopped fine—the pepper is excellent, also, with butter—makes an attractive filling. Jam and jellies to color the cheese, or dates to make it sweet and tasty or nuts to make it more substantial and some nuts to make it heartier, are other ways of using this exceedingly versatile ingredient in sandwich making. Quite plain it is used for many storied sandwiches well pressed and then sliced to look like a slice of layer cake.

Egg Sandwich Fillings.

Hard but gently cooked eggs, chopped and buttered while hot, salted just a bit, may be used for a thick filling for two slices of well buttered bread. They can be made ideally palatable. Grated cheese mixed with melted butter and mashed egg yolk makes a good variation of this sandwich.

Pressed Eggs.

Hard cook the eggs, drop them into cold water, drain and dry and shell and chop fine with salt, pepper, a bit of prepared mustard, and one teaspoon of melted butter to each egg used. Mix these together and press them into a small square loaf. Slices of these with lettuce dipped in a salad dressing and put together just before eating make a hearty and also a pretty sandwich.

Nut Fillings.

Almost any of the nuts, chopped and salted and mixed to a paste with cream or butter, make a good sandwich filling, without any additions, but figs, or raisins, or dates may be combined with the nuts, or chopped celery. For tea sandwiches almonds blanched and pounded with sugar, then mixed to a paste with rich cream, with a bit of salt added, may be most dainty. A piece of lettuce with the nut fillings always gives character.

Peanut Sandwich Filling or Butter.

Pound or chop home shelled roasted peanuts fine, mix them with cream, or melted butter, or even a fine oil, to the consistency of a good spread.

Peanut Caramels and Sandwich Filling.

Cook to soft ball [238] stage one cup of sugar, six tablespoons of milk, three or six tablespoons of peanut butter. Be sure the sugar is dissolved before the whole boils. Cool when taken from the fire, and then beat to the opera caramel stage, adding a few drops of vanilla, if you wish. With a sweet bread of the type of a coffee cake or bun this makes a delicious filling, or it may be set and cut into caramels. This recipe will make filling enough for from fifteen to twenty large sandwiches, best for a dessert, perhaps. But it is a bit heavy, and should not be indulged in by some people. After a light meal it will be a good dessert for a child, who is likely to love it. Cut the bread thin, thinly butter, and then crush the caramels for it, if that form has been made.

Sweet Fillings in General.

Chocolate drops crushed, soft caramels and bon bons, and all such make pleasant variation of the perhaps childish luncheon of bread and butter with sugar.

The Green Sandwiches.

These sandwiches and those of tomato and cucumber have the disadvantage of needing to be made just as they are used, but lettuce leaves, cress, nasturtium leaves [a sort of cress] and even the blossom dipped in mayonnaise, or a cooked salad dressing, make delightful fillings for tea sandwiches cut in strips, or crescents, or small rounds or squares. Nut bread with any of these fillings, perhaps the quick home made sort, is dainty. The fine stems of lettuce cut in thin disks and mixed with fine celery, finely chopped olives and perhaps a few nut meats can be mixed with mayonnaise for an acceptable and inexpensive filling.

Tomato Sandwiches.

Slices of tomato of a fine spicy quality—some do not have this quality—is without any addition of seasoning an agreeably cool filling for a sandwich But it may be combined daintily with chopped chives or have some crisp bacon powdered over it. Or it may be mixed with just a bit of mayonnaise and a chopped caper or two.

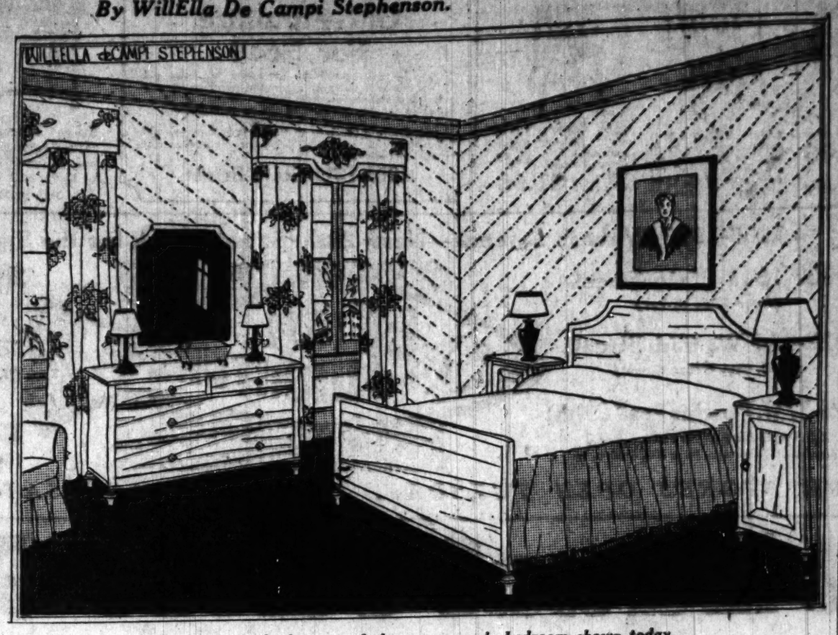
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

This Suburban Home Is Beautifully Carried Out and Is Perfect in Every Detail.



Simplicity is the keynote of the young man's bedroom shown today.

INDIVIDUALITY may be as strongly expressed in the decorations and furnishings of a house as in the actual manners and speech of those people who occupy it. In order properly to serve as a home for the owner, the house must be more than a mere dwelling place. It must satisfy, in its plan and design, in its equipment and decorative treatment, the individual requirements and personal needs of those who live in it. The furnishing of a house affords wonderful opportunity for the expression of originality.

Beautifully carried out and perfect in every detail is a suburban home which has just been completed. The house is divided in the center by a spacious entrance and stair hall. A lovely scenic paper is used in panels on the walls. It is done in tones of ecru and ivory. Woodwork is painted ivory. Taupe carpeting is used on the floor and stairs. At the windows are ivory silk and wool casement cloth glass curtains, beneath draperies of sepia colored velvet. A Queen Anne sofa at one side of the hall is upholstered in soft red damask. Against the opposite wall space is a console table, flanked by a pair of William and Mary chairs. A lovely mirror hangs above the table.

An open doorway leads into the living room. Here there are many windows, and the room is flooded with light. Consequently, a dark wall covering combining amethyst and sepia is used satisfactorily. Several portraits in dull gold frames show to advantage against this background. The woodwork is painted a soft cream color. Natural colored silk and wool casement cloth glass curtains are edged with a narrow block fringe of the same color. Amethyst velvet makes the draperies. Drawn up near an open fireplace is a comfortable sofa upholstered in a deep amethyst block patterned mohair. One large arm chair is done in an exceptionally handsome tapestry, and another is in the drapery material. The remainder of the furniture is mahogany. Tables holding lamps and decorative accessories are conveniently placed. Deep amethyst carpeting is supplemented by interesting Oriental rugs.

Adjoining this living room is a delightful library. Woodwork and the many built-in, open book shelves are finished in dark walnut. A coarse, ecru grass cloth wall covering is used. At the windows are curtains of heavy ecru linen, decorated with crewel embroidery in deep, rich tones. They are finished at the edges with a thick, short, worsted fringe in many colors. Pulley cords are arranged so the curtains may be drawn together at will. A large wing chair is upholstered in the same embroidered linen. Matching the deep red of the crewel work is the velvet upholstery of a comfortable sofa. Deep blue wool damask covers a luxurious arm chair. Lamp shades and shields are made of parchment, decorated with bands of color, matching those in the draperies. A full, rich tone is given to the room by means of a large Bokhara rug.

The dining room and a charming little breakfast room are across the hall. In the dining room, woodwork and dado are painted cream color. The wall space above is covered with an interesting Japanese tea box paper in gold. It is finished with a coat of shellac, which gives it a mellow tone and a most substantial feeling. Cream colored silk and wool casement cloth, like that in the living room and hall, is used for glass curtains. Having the glass curtains alike in these three rooms which face the front of the house, produces a pleasing result from the exterior. Ample variety is given in the draperies. In this room they are made of a sumptuous black and gold damask. Chinese Chippendale furniture is used. A Chinese rug, in soft colors, almost completely covers the floor.

For informal use is the lovely little breakfast room. Here the walls are done in a dull gold grass cloth. Woodwork is painted sage green. Gold colored gauze makes glass curtains. Sage green and gold sunfast, in a damask pattern, is used for long draperies. The furniture is painted sage green, high lighted with gold, and decorated with floral motifs. Plate glass protects the table top. Chair seats are upholstered in mohair, in a jacquard pattern, in sage green and gold color. The floor is made of deep green square tiles, set in old ivory mortar. It is unrugged.

All of the bedrooms are charming. In the largest of them is used a wall paper showing clusters of flowers on an ivory ground. Woodwork is painted ivory. Glass curtains are of ivory point d'esprit. Changeable dull rose and gold taffeta make the draperies and covers for the twin beds. A Dresden lamp, on the night stand, has a soft rose silk shade, decorated with French silk flowers. Shields on the side lights and a shade for the drop light over the dressing table are made to match. The furniture, of French design, is made of walnut. A large, plain, mulberry rug covers the floor, leaving a border of about eighteen inches around the edge.

Expressly furnished for the young man of the house is the bedroom shown in today's illustration. The wall paper is in two tones of gray. Draperies at the windows are of a semi-glazed chintz, flowered, on a blue-green ground, and topped by shaped lambrequins, which are finished with an edging of plain raspberry red chintz. Glass curtains are dispensed with. The furniture is mahogany. A cover on the bed is made of raspberry red poplin, piped with blue-green, and finished with a narrow, multi-colored upholsterers' fringe. A large, comfortable arm chair, upholstered in the flowered chintz, is accompanied by a low table, which holds books and a lamp. Deep red pottery lamps, on commodes at each side of the bed, have parchment shades. Plain blue-green chenille, in a deep, dark tone, covers the floor.

American colonial furniture, in a modern adaptation, furnishes the young daughter's room. The wall paper shows tiny sprigs of flowers on a pale gray ground. Woodwork is ivory. At the windows are ivory silk gauze glass curtains. Producing an unusual effect are overdraperies of silk gauze, showing fairylike rainbow colors in an ombré treatment. They are finished at the edges with a French ribbon trim. Wooden cornices topping these draperies are painted leaf green, outlined with a fine band of straw color and decorated with floral medallions.

The bed and one chair are painted in the same way. Plain leaf green sateen, piped with straw color, and finished with straw colored ruchings, makes the bed cover. Except for the bed and chair, the remainder of the furniture is made of maple. Leaf green wool chenille rugs are used.

Gray Hair Tinted FOR 50¢

In Just 5 Minutes

Why pay $10 to the hair dresser?

Don't throw your money away by needlessly paying from ten to fifteen dollars to a hairdresser to restore your gray, faded, or dingy hair to its youthful shade and lustre. Every woman can now immediately bring back the original color to her hair right in the privacy of her own home—for a few cents.

BROWNATONE, the one guaranteed harmless hair tint, in just five minutes, will transform gray or streaky hair to any beautiful shade that you favor. And there isn't the slightest danger of poisoning, which sometimes results from the harmful dyes used by many professionals. Just sit before your dressing table and brush BROWNATONE through the gray strands. Immediately the color will start to develop. Even your closest friends will be unable to detect that your hair is tinted.

BROWNATONE is so perfect—so precise in shade—so easy to apply—permeates gray hair in such a natural way—that without any previous experience, you are sure to obtain professional results.

BROWNATONE is guaranteed harmless to hair, scalp or skin. It is so scientific in formula that self hair tinting treatments cannot be discovered in strongest lights—even in sunlight. It is the one bottle preparation that does not require the use of harmful peroxide, which must first be applied with many hair coloring preparations.

Test it for yourself. You will be amazed and delighted at the marvelous results you will so easily obtain. Any shade desired from two colors. (Blonde to Medium Brown), (Dark Brown to Black). Sold Back Guarantee. At toilet counters. Two and $1.50—the larger size containing five times as much.

They Say:

"I can recommend BROWNATONE in the highest terms. It is easily the best thing for the purpose that I ever used." — Mrs. C. E. Goodlet, Strother, S. C.

"I never found its equal for tinting hair and stopping hair from falling out. I have used BROWNATONE about ten years and can give it a 100 percent endorsement." — H. Butterbaugh, Commodore, Pa.

Easy to Apply, Wonderful in Results

BROWNATONE penetrates all of the hair. It does not wash off—will not fade or rub because the hair absorbs it. Only one application is necessary. It permits waving, marcelling, curling, shampooing and is even unaffected by perspiration. Further applications needed only as new hair grows.

MY GREATEST THRILL—A Boy's Lucky Break

My Greatest Thrill

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter, we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

A Practical Joker.

I was visiting my girl friend whose brother is a great cut-up and keeps the family in round eyed terror of his next prank. We were sitting up late telling ghost stories and weird tales and finally Gracie and I went upstairs to bed. We felt our way along the dark hall and into the bedroom where we groped around for the chain that pulls the electric light.

Suddenly my fingers clutched something soft and warm and furry. With a wild scream I fled from the room and down stairs with Gracie tearing along behind me, sobbing at some unknown danger. Terrified, we waited while the family investigated.

Result: Brother had tied a dead mouse to the light cord with a fancy red ribbon! I. S. J.

In a Runaway Car.

By far the "greatest thrill" of my life occurred last summer while visiting some friends in Denver. We had motored to the mountains and spent a wonderful day and were returning by way of Bear Creek canyon in the evening. The driver was having trouble with the car when a motor cop stopped to help us, and suggested pushing the machine over the edge of a descent and that the momentum of the car would start the engine.

Well, it did, but imagine our horror when we found the driver had no control of the car. The brakes wouldn't work, a rear hub was broken and we were a runaway machine with the mountains on one side, the canyon 2,000 feet deep on the other, a sharp curve about 100 yards ahead—every revolution of the wheels taking us nearer to certain death.

I covered my eyes for the end, but Fate was kind, for the driver, seeing a little jut in the side of the mountain, managed to turn the car in and the impact killed the engine. We were saved. K. C.

Working on the Railroad.

Years ago I was working for a short while with a gang of hobos laying steel on a railroad between St. Louis and Cape Girardeau.

On my first morning the boss sent a number of us up the track with a half dozen steel rails on a push car. One of the men was supposed to have charge of the rest of us.

The region was hilly and the road rather crooked, so that you could not see far up the track. Presently we were startled by the whistle of a freight train and at the same time we saw it rounding the curve altogether too close for comfort.

The "straw" boss rushed forward, frantically waving a red flag. There was nothing for the rest of us to do but scatter, which we did like scared chickens.

We left the push car and steel rails on the track. I climbed over the right of way fence and did not feel safe till quite a way beyond it. I never expected anything any more in my life than I did to see those freight cars pile up on top of one another and come rolling down the embankment.

The engineer set the brakes hard and he and the fireman got down on the lower steps of the engine ready to jump. The engine hit the push car, shoving it along ahead. Some of the rails got jammed through the bars of the pilot and got tangled up in the machinery of the engine. One rail was bent like a fish hook. But the engine did not leave the track and it presently came to a stop. It was disabled, though, and another had to be sent for to take the train on.

As one engineer expressed it, "A fellow thinks some pretty d——d funny things when something of this kind is about to happen." C. J. B.

In a Storm.

My greatest thrill happened about four years ago. I went boat riding with a friend of mine who was eight years older than I. We started up the river and had gone about two miles when a storm came up.

I became frightened and hollered. In a few minutes the wind blew the boat over, throwing us in the stream. I could not swim, but my friend could swim a little. He grabbed hold of me, but the wind was so strong he could not make much headway. He managed to get hold of a floating log and by this method we were both saved. R. J. H.

Child in a Runaway.

My friend, who lives on a farm, asked me to take charge of her four year old child at her home while she and her husband went to the city for a day. The little boy asked for permission to ride into the corn field with the hired man as had been his habit of doing.

The man lifted the child on the wagon and stepped back to pick up his gloves which he had dropped. The hirses suddenly became frightened and started running wildly down the lane.

My greatest thrill was one of terror to see the child intrusted to my care being carried swiftly down the road and expecting any moment to see him fall and be run over, or to have the wagon strike a stump and turn over on the child. Grateful indeed was I to see the little boy running to meet me uninjured after the team had been caught. L. M. W.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

You Look Years Younger—Assist Nature if she needs your help. Obtain an ounce of Mercolized Wax from your druggist or department store, use as directed—and you will bless the day that you made the acquaintance of this wonder working product.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by SARA MOORE

CALLED!

He was a gay philanderer;
Primrose the paths he tarried;
Wooing all beauty ardently;
Sighing—"If I weren't married."

Now is the rascal well reformed—
Simple the fact that forced him—
Dares he no pleasant dalliance,
Now that his wife's divorced him.

ROUTINE.

Do not let my quick retreat
Chill you or dismay you;
I admit that in the end
I shall not gainsay you.
Never fear that I intend
You shall be rejected;
I'm compelled to be as shy
As you, sir, expected.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

HE'S JESTING.

[I hope the more rounded figure becomes the standard of fashion . . . and that women hasten that time by dressing to enhance, not to hide, their curves.—Paul Poiret, dressmaker, to Liberty.]

While not disputing there are points
To favor forms with subtle curve,
Girls cannot follow Paul's advice;
To do so takes—much more than nerve.
For, as scant fashions run today,
With neck, spine, legs, and arms revealed,
A man can see with half an eye
They've no curves left to keep concealed.

INFORMALLY—No. 1: Yesterday's Assignments

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

Reminiscences—They Make a Reporter's Life Worth Living

Would you believe it, the girl has fooled them all!

THEY'VE asked me to write a bit about the experiences of of a newspaper woman. Which is an ungallant assignment for any man to give a woman. For it is reasonable to assume that when a woman gets to that point where she begins to chart the reminiscences of the "way-back-when", days she has likewise reached that plateau of complaisancy where tea rests her. I hate tea.

But I like reminiscences.

They are a generous portion of the law of compensation operative in the life of a reporter, man or woman. They are the rhetorical recompenses for many an hour in the rain, for many a door banged in the face, for many an icy word from many an important sub-secretary. And the further into the past the reminiscences retreat, the brighter they polish themselves, until they are likely to make of the teller of the tale, a story book hero, or a cinema heroine, with a routine daily dozen of scoops.

THE STORY BOOK HEROINE

But my autobiographical recollections can't be like that.

I never won the war with any desk sergeant in any police station.

I never got a confession from any beauteous woman who had just murdered her husband.

And never, so long as I live, shall I be able, by glimpsing the right side of a man's nose, to tell whether he poisoned the girl, or just happened to cross the lawn the moment she swallowed it.

Nor was my first assignment that brilliant success they tell about in classes of journalism.

In the story books, I believe, the girl reporter, seeking a job, importunes the managing editor. She is usually an enigmatic combination of a wistful wisp of a girl and a valiant soul who says, with quiet determination, "Mr. Editor, I can do anything a man can do." But the story book managing editor is unmoved. He leaves her sitting out in the corridor, on such a hard wooden bench.

Next day she returns and the next day and the next.

THE GAL FOOLS 'EM

Along about the fourth day (this is in the story book, or the motion picture) the young heroine is again sitting on the hard wooden bench. The managing editor, thinking forever to cure the girl of a longing for newspaper work, gives her an assignment. It's a tough one. So tough that all the veteran men on the staff have tried and failed. The stern managing editor hands it out, with malicious quietness, to the combination Pollyanna and female Mussolini who sharpens her pencil and starts away.

An hour passes, two, three. Presently, along about time for the deadline for the first edition, our little heroine walks into the office. All the boys are laughing, for they know the plot. But the girl fools them. She sits down before a desk, pounds gently along on the caligraph. Then, nonchalantly, she takes her pieces of copy paper over to the managing editor's desk, and places them there.

The managing editor—and this is usually a splendid scene in the films—jumps up, and jumps around, and expresses all manner of surprised delight. Would you believe it, the gal has fooled them all! She has beaten the veteran reporters, who remember the horse car days. She has scooped the opposition. She has got the diary, or the letters, or the confession, or the interview with the governor, or whatever it was they had given her, as a joke on her. Her story makes page one; it carries the eight column line. Her name, in letters that look as large as the ones that spell out "Soda" in the electric sign across the street from the newspaper office, strides its prideful way across the page.

And that is the girl reporter, in the story book; on the screen.

A MINOR POET

It's a little bit different in Chicago.

For instance, take the case of the newspaper woman whom I know best. Her first assignment didn't hit the front page. It hit a commodious waste basket. This task was to interview a very, very minor British poet who was tarrying the day in the city. He was so minor that he was intrusted to this reporter.

On her way to the interview at the Stratford hotel [if that dates the story at all] this reporter's chief concern was not journalistic, but social. Her motivating thought was not, "Shall I ask him what he thinks of the Spencerian stanza, and short skirts for women?" It was, rather, a perpetual refrain of "I wonder if he'll come down to the lobby or if I'll have to go up to his suite."

He came down.

The reporter had nothing specific to ask the minor poet.

The minor poet has nothing to say to the reporter.

And they both worked at it for hours.

PLENTY OF NOTES

It takes no school of journalism to teach any person, artist, artisan, reporter or carpenter, that he minimizes his opportunity for a free flow of speech if he takes incessant notes, and obviously, on everything his interviewee says. But this reporter didn't even know that simple, universal rule of psychology.

Every time the minor British poet cleared his throat or said the city was "wonderful," she scribbled it down. Two pencil points were worn down, and all the note paper covered with notes. Then she left. She walked loftily down Michigan boulevard, trying not to feel too important.

She heard some one coming along from behind. She felt some one touch her sleeve., There stood the very, very minor British poet. His hands were filled with pieces of yellow copy paper, all written over with pencil. She had left her notes in the lobby of the Stratford hotel, and another piece of great literature was nearly lost, but for the enterprise and fast walking of the poet.

The reporter stuck the notes in her purse and hurried back to the office. She began to write, and write. At last this unabridged encyclopedia of the poet's life and thoughts was finished and turned in. The girl reporter—not, you understand, of the movies or of the story book—went home, confident that journalism had a new lease on life. Next morning she got the paper early. Her story wasn't on the front page, but there was a lot of foreign news about wars and things there. Nor on the second page, but perhaps the important trial had shoved it away from that space.

It wasn't on the third page, nor the fourth, nor the fourteenth. Back she went, to the steamship sailings and the obituary notices. But there wasn't a sentence nor a syllable about the minor, the very minor British poet written by the minor, very minor girl reporter.

AN IRISH IMMIGRANT

Sometimes, even a long time after your first assignment, it's something more direct than a mute waste basket which puts the chill into the fiction of "experiences of a newspaper woman."

There was that brisk appraisal which I received from a "lady" friend of mine in the steerage of a trans-Atlantic steamer, and which I hope I shall never forget.

I was in the steerage, America bound with a hundred or so Irish girls and several hundred continental immigrants, in order that I might see just what happened to the immigrants on their trip across, and at Ellis island. There was only one way to do it. That was to be an immigrant.

I should have liked to have gone as a Swedish immigrant, but I'm not a blonde. Or a French girl, but my French is my own, and nobody else could understand it. And so, for one reason or another, I had to be an immigrant from an English speaking country. I chose Ireland. I elected the role of hired girl. Not of governess or nursemaid; of cook or housemaid or domestic, but, quite simply, of a hired girl.

I well knew that in an assignment like that a little conversation was likely to be a dangerous thing, and greater loquacity a very bad thing. So I didn't grow too confidential during those twelve days.

JULIA'S AMBITIONS

The five girls who shared with me our tiny cabin were so full of their plans and ambitions for America that I listened with but slight obligation to speak. Particularly voluble was Julia. Lovable, aggressive, courageous Julia. She was 17; had worked for many years on a farm in Ireland; was bound for domestic service in the states. Julia had three mighty ambitions she hoped to realize in the land that was shad owed by the statue of liberty.

First of all, Julia wanted a hair net. Again, to date the story, it was in the days when bobbed hair, down in the steerage, meant only one thing. And that one thing was a mandate from the ship's doctor and nurse after they had examined the scalp. So Julia had her curly hair, and she wanted an almond can hair net to plaster over her own.

Second, Julia longed for a fur coat. Back home her earnings had been about $4 a month, she told me and that didn't leave much of a margin for a fur coat.

Third—and this was Julia's almost prayerful wish—she wanted a gold tooth.

Knowing Julia as well as I got to in those twelve days, I am pretty sure that in these five years she has bought dozens of hair nets. Only she probably has a shingle bob now. I believe, too, that her imitation fur coat is something better, with, perhaps, a summer fur thrown in. And, if she wants it, I know she has a gold tooth.

WASN'T A LADY

But it was not Julia, nor any of my cabin mates who put me, as I started out to say, definitely, bluntly in my niche. Fearful of too much conversation, I was especially on my guard when I came near Mrs. Casey. She was the ship's volunteer news service. She wanted to know everything about everybody and had a nearly 100 per cent record. It was she, not I, who should have been the reporter.

For several days I had evaded her happy interrogatories. At last she cornered me. I knew I was homesick and thought I was going to be sicker, so there wasn't much fight in me, and she found me an easy victim.

"And what do you do for a living, my dear?" she queried.

Without a moment's hesitation, I remembering my credentials, said:

"Me? O, I'm a hired girl."

Mrs. Casey's face lighted. Her mouth curved into an ecstatic smile. Her eyes danced. She was pleased through and through.

"A hired girl. A hired girl" she mouthed the words lovingly as she went on. "I knew it, I knew it. My daughter thought you were a lady, but I just knew you weren't."

THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Bakrak

Fore! Our Hero Takes Up the Grand and Ancient Game

My stance was terrible.

HEAR Ye! Hear Ye! You are now about to read sumthin which you should try an remember, cause in about a 150 years from now, when I'm tha World's Champeen, you can brag to your grand-children as how you remember when the Duke took his first lesson.

At tha supper table lass Tuesday, I noticed as how tha B. and C. has got sumthin to say besides the regular "Soup should be seen, not heard," "Why didn' you wash yer hands," and "Ya got yer feet against that new table again."

Well, here's tha dirt. Seems as how Mrs. Mudge was paying a call in the afternoon and she has taken up golf. She just loves the pastime and couldn' tha B. and C. induce me to take up the game so as the 4 of us could go out from time to time and play.

A DELICATE MATTER

Right off the bat I told the mama that there's not a chance, and I cood give her a dozen reasons, but that one reason was enough. This excuse don't call for the other eleven, and should be listed in the financial embarrassment column. I tried to explain that you got to join a club, buy equiptment in tha way of clubs, and clothes, and stock a nineteenth hole. Then I get told that Mrs. Mudge has already spoken of the matter to John and we could be their guests until such time as we decided we liked tha sport.

If I do happen to get a kick out of the thing I certainly wood be damn foolish to admit it if John's gonna foot tha bills. Ennyway tha B. and C. has made up my mind and it's all set that I meet John at half past one Saturday and give the other members a lot to laugh about and also a excuse for trying out any new cuss words which they are trying to master.

HARD ON RETAILERS

Some birds don't believe in ever giving a retailer a chance. This is not my idea of fairness. When I called up my friend Buchanan, who incidentally has got a drag where he even gets his razor blades wholesale, and asked him if he could give me a card to some guy fer a wholesale golf outfit, he says, "Sure, any particular firm you want to go to?" I told him I wood naturally prefer one where he's got a charge account.

The bird what waited on me was very pleasant. This made me a little suspicious as to whether both he and Buckie wasn't hookin on a few bucks fer themselves. Ennyway before I left I was tha possessor of a set of instruments by the names of #mashie, driver, brass E, knibkick, midiron, and one what he called a" putter. If I don't like the sport I figger at least I can putter around the garden with this crow bar, also I was hung for a ½ dozen balls, a pair of boy's pants, long stockings, and a pair of shoes what aint gonna be worth a damn at tha office so I guess I just better like tha amusement or be out tha price of tha feet decorations.

When I got home I put on tha outfit, and if that pay check grabber of mine ever pulls a series of laughs like she did I will have her put under observation, fer a cupple of weeks. While I figgerred I looked pretty nifty, she's scaring me to death with what I diagnosed as histericks.

KELLY POOL IS NO AID

Yesterday I bring all tha equiptment with me to tha office, and after John an' me had a little lunch (on him) we get in his Four-in-line an' start for tha club. On the way out he tries to give me a idea of the game, and on account I used ta be a pretty good hand at Croquet I figgerred as how in a cupple minutes of practice I wood show up a lotta guys what's been braggin' about shootin' eighty-sixes an' eighty-fours. One thing what I learned was that having a good eye playing Kelly Pool don't mean a damn thing when it comes to trying to sock one of those pock-marked overgrown moth balls.

After getting introduced to maybe forty or fifty guys in tha locker room I'm told that the first thing I wood tackle was some driving. Just then one of tha guys what I met comes over with a bottle of Scotch. Well, I passed mine up cause I ain't gonna take no chance on gettin' pinched for driving while intoxicated. If I'd known this bozo for any length of time I wood of asked fer a rain check. Next time I go out I will take a empty bottle along cause I think the gentleman felt a little bit insulted when I turned him down.

The first thing what we did was to approach what John called tha 1st hole; not seeing anything what looked like a hole I figgered, me being new at the racket, they was kidding me an' I shut up like a clam an' didn' give 'em a chance to give me the Ha! Ha! The next funny crack was, "Did I bring any tea with me?" If this outfit is so ladylike that you gotta have tea before you start I will damn soon check 'em out. Besides, coffee is what I always take.

PANTS, CHANCE, STANCE!

From then on all I hear is a lodda instructions what was all Greek to me. When I got told my stance was terrible, I didn' know fer a minute whether John said pants or chance. A stance to me meant anything from a soused mackerel to a pickled herring. Well, I get all set and believe me or not I socked that pill a city block [if I would of hit it.] On the next wallop I shaded my eyes to see how far the damn thing went and either my club is no good or that ball aint made right, cause it went about three feet in front of me, off to the left, and I hit it so it should go to the right.

The red cap what was carrying the clubs should be called catty instead of caddy, as he gives me a look which was as much as to say, "They don't make 'em any dumber." After making tha 1st hole in one [hundred] I was thinking of getting even with tha club carrier by making him carry a adding machine the next time I came out.

About the fifth hole some guy in back of me started to holler "Four," guess he was tryin' to show off a bit cause I was told that that hole aint never been made in less than five. If I remembered right, it was about the 8th hole when John tells me I would come up to a water hole. I took a healthy swat and right here is where I got all full of pep cause believe me or not I went right in the middle of it. When I turned around and said "Some shot, what?" I got told that you was supposed to miss the damn thing altogether and land on the other side.

About this time my real troubles start.

FINDS USE FOR CLUBS

Well, after 9 holes, five disgusted guys' check back into the clubhouse, I was four of them and John was the fifth. We took a shower bath, which incidentally didn' get me sore, 'cause I wouldn' hafta do it when I got home. After meeting some more ginks who don't know anything to say except "How's your game?" we start back home an' I get dropped off in front of the house.

About this time my real troubles start. I was so damn stiff I could hardly climb the stairs. The B. and C. was all excited when I got in and wanted to know all about it. It took me about two minutes to tell her to put a ad in the paper an' see if we couldn' get part of our money back by selling tha equipment.

After we eat supper every bone in me ached and I said I would hafta go to bed. Then a real use for the clubs come to my mind on account of tha following conversation:

"Whatta ya mean, bed?"

"You heard me, I know your dumb but not in the ears."

"Wasn't I sitting home all day while you was havin' a swell time?"

"Swell time hell."

"Well I wanna go out tonight."

"Who's ahead of you?"

"I can't go alone."

"Who said ya couldn'?"

"I promised Mr. and Mrs. Black we would be over."

"O, now it comes out."

DUKE RULES ROOST

There comes time in every guy's life when he's just got to be tha boss in his house and I flatly refused to go.

SAM 'N' HENRY

By Correll & Gosden

"De Diamond say he ain't heah."

The Sad Morning After the Glad Night Before!

[After an evening of cabareting Sam and the Most Precious Diamond (the high officer of the colored fraternity, "Jewels of the Crown") returned to Sam and Henry's room in high spirits. Henry finally persuaded the boys to go to bed, and now we find them the morning after the night before. It is 6:30 a. m. and the three boys are sleeping peacefully. . . . The alarm clock rings.]

HENRY—Cut dat thing off—CUT DAT THING OFF! SAM! Cut dat thing off! (Henry jumps out of bed.) I'll do it; I'll do it. (He stops the alarm clock.) Sam! Sam! Git up! SAM! (Sam sleeps peacefully on.) It's six-thirty. Git on down an' hitch dat hoss up. (Sam doesn't move.) A'right—lay dere now an' I'm gonna pour some wateh on yo'. Sam! GIT UP FROM DERE! (Shakes Sam.) Git—git—GIT UP from dere! SAM!

Sam—Henry, I'm sick

Henry—Yo' ought to be sick. Git up from dere.

Sam—O, Henry—my head.

Henry—Don' start no argument now. Git up. It's six-thirty an' we gotta git to work heah.

Sam—Henry, who's dis in bed heah wid me?

Diamond—Where is my wife?

Henry—She ain't heah. She's home, I guess.

Diamond—Jus' so she ain't heah—let her worry.

O-O-OH, HENRY!

Sam—O-o-o-h, Henry, I'm sick, Henry. Do sompin' fo' me, will yo'?

Henry—I'll bus' yo' in de head, dat's what I'll do.

Sam—Henry, my head, Henry. My head is killin' me.

Henry—Now, yo' betteh git up like I tell yo' to do. Yo' gotta hitch up de hoss an' git out an' go to work.

(The telephone rings.)

Henry—When his wife finish wid de three o' us all of us is gonna be sick.

Diamond—Listen, Sam. Don't let her know dat I'm heah. Tell her dat I done been kidnaped.

Sam (to Diamond's wife)—He say he done been kidnaped, I don't know WHO kidnaped him—I think Miss Ella did it.

Henry (seeing trouble brewing)—Oh oh.

Sam (in phone)—Awa—— (To Henry)—Henry! O-o-oh, I'se sick.

Henry—Hang up; hang up.

Sam (repeating in phone)—Hang up; hang up. (To Henry) She won't do it. (To Diamond's wife) Hol' de phone a minute. Wait till I talk to de Mos' Precious Diamon' again.

Now, wait a minute, honey. Now, wait a minute, honey. Lemme 'splain somp'in' to yo'. I know it, honey. I know it. Now, lemme 'splain sompin' to yo'.

Diamond (to his wife)—Hello, honey Now, wait a minute, honey. Lemme 'splain sompin' to yo'. Now, listen, honey. We done had a bizness meetin' las' night an' it lasted all night long. It's 'bout de Jewels o' de Crown. We is tryin' to fix up things so de wives of all de members kin enjoy demselves on a picnic dis summer. Dat's de truth, honey. No, it ain't. Henry (as the Diamond goes back to bed)—Whut is yo' goin' do now, go back to bed?

Diamond—I wouldn't go home fo' a hund'ed dollahs. Dat woman would kill me if I walked in dere now. I goin' lay back down. Move oveh, Sam.

Henry (to Sam)—Sam! Git up from dere! I'se goin'.

Henry—Well, I'se goin' an' I goin' leave yo' heah.

Henry—I'm goin' down an' git sompin' to eat.

Diamond—When yo' go out lock dat door so my wife can't git in heah, will yo'? An' gimme a drink o' wateh if yo' got any.

Henry—Ain't no wateh 'round heah. Is yo' goin' git up or not, Sam?

Sam—Henry, I can't, I'm sick. Do sompin' for me, Henry; do sompin' fo me.

Henry—Yo' stay heah, den. I'm goin' out an' when de Diamon's wife git oveh heah both of yo' git up an' sing "Sweet Adaline."

Sam (calling after Henry)—Henry! Diamond—Lock dat door, Henry Lock dat door.

Henry (as he opens door to leave)—I hope yo' wife comes oveh heah an' beat yo' both.

Sam (as Henry slams the door and leaves)—Henry, don' leave me heah. O-o-o-o-oh, Henry, I'se sick.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

A Hermit's a Guy Wot Looks at a Dame an' Picks a Dog

A COUPLE uv days ago me an' Mickey Flynn went squirrel hunting. We headed for a large tract uv timber wich is several miles frum town, an' wich is called The Haunted Woods, probably due to the fact that no squirrels ever haunted it. We figured that out ourselves after searching all morning for the galloping nut-crackers Jist as we wuz ready to beat it for home a big rainstorm came up

"There's a hermit wot lives in theez woods sumplace," sez Mr. Flynn; "let's find his joint before we git drowned."

DIZZIEST LOOKIN' GUY

We searched around until we found a tiny clearing, in the middle uv wich wuz a cabin. By that time the sky wuz spilling grief-water in over-doses, so we galloped up to the door uv the cabin an' knocked plenty.

"If that's a woman, go away!" howls a voice.

"Well, aint yew the conceited cuss!" squawks Mickey; "I'll bet chorus girls jist hammer on yer door all day long."

"Aha, a man's voice!" sez Mr. Hermit; "nobody can say that Big-hearted Ben turned men frum his door in a storm. Kum in!"

That hermit wuz the dizziest looking hunk uv humanity wot ever rolled a cigarette. He had so much whiskers that he looked like an advertisement for cough drops. Also, he wuz fat, dirty an' gloomy. His clothes wuz so old he must have inherited them frum either the last uv the Aztecs or the first uv the Pharaohs. He wuz standing by the stove, watching sum object wich wuz boiling in a kettle. Strange odors issued forth frum that kettle. They wuz worse than strange—they wuz punk!

"HE WAS A LION TAMER" AL BROMLEY

A BIRD ON THE STOVE

"D'yuh mind if we stay here long enough to git dry?" sez I; "we'll beat it as soon as it stops raining, because I've always heard that hermits don't exactly yearn for company."

"Sit down," sez he, so we parked our carcasses on a bench by the stove.

"Wot in gawd's name are yew cooking?" asks Mickey, holding his nose.

"A bird," sez Big-hearted Ben, stirring the object with a stick.

"I didn't know that polecats had wings," sez Mr. Flynn.

"Wot kind uv a bird?" sez I to the hermit.

"Dam if I know," sez he; "I thought at first it wuz an eagle; then I decided it wuz a hawk; now I think it's a buzzard."

"Did yew shoot him?" I asks.

"Certainly I shot him," sez the hermit; "did yew think I climbed a tree an' bit him to death?"

"On the contrary," sez I, "I thought maybe yew wuz digging a hole an' found him. At least he smells that way to me."

Big-hearted Ben poked the bird several times with the stick an' then removed the kettle frum the stove.

"I think he's done," sez he; "I hope so—I'm gitting tired uv cooking him. I've bin boiling the sun-uv-a-gun for 4 days."

"I think anybody wot eats him is also done," sez Mickey; "that dodu bird wuz in its second childhood wen King Tut wuz rolling a hoop."

"How did yew happen to bekum a hermit, Ben?" asks I, offering him a plug uv tobacco, wich he grabbed. Then he sat down an' wiped a tear frum his eye.

IT'S A SAD STORY

"It's a sad story," sez he. "I wuz once a lion tamer in a circus, an' had all kinds uv money. I wuz absolutely fearless, I wuz, an' my favorite stunt wuz to stick my head in a lion's mouth an' then kick him in the ribs. It brot thunderous applause."

"Big Boy, yew must have bin good," sez I; "rave on, Ananias!"

"Well, boys," sez Ben, "everything wuz going swell until a female calamity, who traveled with the circus, decided that I'd make a good husband. I didn't wanta git married, I wuz perfectly happy the way I wuz, but she made life miserable for me by telling everybody that we wuz gonna git married. She had a trapeze act, an' I used to watch her an' wish she wood fall an' break her contract."

"Maybe it wuz yer money she wanted," sez Mickey.

"I don't think so—I wuz pritty good looking," sez he; "never-the-less, this damsel bothered me so much that at last I moved my baggage into the lions' cage an' had my meals an' mail brot to me. I even slept in the cage. It got to a point where the lions began to sympathize with me, an' wenever they saw this dame kumming towards the cage they wood knock me down an' push me under the bed."

"Wonderful co-operation!" sez I.

"Yup," sez he, "but one morning the circus broke up an' I lost my job, so I had to kum out uv the cage. She got me!" He wiped sum more tears frum his lamps.

SHE GETS HIM

"Aw, ain't that a shame!" sez us.

"Well, boys," sez Ben, "we rented a little furnished house an' got married. Two minutes after we got hooked the trouble started. After we came out uv the church we climbed into a taxi an' started for home. On the way home I gits one uv them blue melancholy feelings so I knocks her off the seat. She picks herself up an' sez I didn't have no reason for hitting her. It got me sore to have her question my judgment, so I socks her an' knocks her off the seat again. Wen we gits in the house she handed me a dirty look, so I socks her again. After that we didn't speak to each other for 3 days."

"Did yew hit her during that time?" sez I.

"Jist once," sez he, "to let her know I wuz still mad at her. However, being one uv them guys wot can't carry a grudge forever, I decided to let by-gones be by-gones, so at last I walks up to her an' sez 'Well, kidoo, I am now ready to forgive yew.' Wot do yuh think she did, boys? Wot do yuh think that limbo did?'

"She kissed yew!" howls us.

"!%$&!%&$$!&!!!" roars the hermit; "she busted a broom on my bean, that's wot she did! Can yew finagine it? Me, Big-hearted Ben, goes up an' offers to forgive her an' she socks me over the hat-rack with a broomstick!"

"Can it be possible that any woman kood be so narrow minded!" we squawks.

A WOLF IN LINGERIE

"I tell yuh, I wuz dazed by such conduct," sez he, "so I rebuked her——"

"How?" sez I.

"With 3 chairs," sez he, "although the first one missed her by a mile. Then she pulled a stunt wot almost broke my tender heart to think that any woman kood have such a terrible burst uv temper. She beat me up!"

"Migawd! A wolf in sheep's lingerie!" wails Mickey.

"Yup," agrees Ben. "Then she went to work in a restaurant. A couple uv weeks later she insisted that I also try an' find work. This hurt my feelings, so after another battle wich I lost via the knock-out route, I goes out an' gits me a job selling lots for a sub-division outfit. Three months later, during wich time my original cash had dwindled away, she got after me for not making any sales yet. How kood I help it? My prospect had changed his mind, dogone him, after me working 90 days on him. If I had landed that guy I wood have dragged down over 23 bucks commission. So I told my wife that I wood rest for a few weeks an' then attempt to locate another prospect. Two minutes later I got hit in the teeth with my suitcase, an' was told to float away because she was tired uv trying to support both uv us. That's the last I ever saw uv her. Woman's inhumanity to man is unbelievable! I never want to see another dame as long as I live. Never git married, boys. Take Big-hearted Ben's advice. Theez squaws are too narrow minded!"

He put 3 plates on the table an' drags the bird over. It woodn't have bin polite to refuse to eat, so we decided to tackle the dodo.

"Lissen," sez I a minute later, "I still claim this boiled ostrich tastes punk. I'm willing to believe yew shot him, but wen did yew shoot him?"

"In March," sez Ben; "he kept pritty good, didn't he?"

WANT YOUR WAREHOUSE ROBBED?

More Sidelights on Prohibition

By Edward Burns.

THERE'S no questioning the fact that many persons actually took the Volstead act seriously for several months after the law was placed on the statute books. Like all innovations meant to be revolutionary, the dry law offered many stern mysteries to those whom its measures affected. Brave men who had large quantities of liquors on hand suddenly became panicky when they first had the opportunity to read the well chosen legal words which Mr. Volsted thought up out of his own head.

Three days after the prohibition law had been imposed upon our liberty loving nation, it became apparent that the country was suffering from a new thirst, never suspected in the wet days of the preceding week. The old philosophy of the forbidden fruit had taken hold with a vengeance. But the men who had the stuff to drink for a few hours didn't know how to proceed.

THE ANCIENT ALIBI

Then some reminiscent whisky man recalled the ancient alibi that deceitful men for years have been presenting to their wives after losing the weekly stipend in a poker game. If poker players could fool suspicious helpmeets by saying they had been held up, why couldn't a whisky man fool the government by reporting that some vile thief had robbed his warehouse?

From Jan. 16, 1920, to May 30, 1920—four months and a half—there were in Chicago 170 major booze robberies. Some of these were bona fide thefts, but a tremendous majority were the flimsiest sort of subterfuges. This rate of self-looting enterprise has not been maintained, but warehouse robberies in which those robbed did not show great grief at the loss of treasure has continued periodically all through the Volstead era.

The last notable booze robbery in Chicago was, unlike most of the preceding ones, thwarted before all the desired contraband had been removed. A few weeks ago four distinguished bootleggers were caught in the act of pumping pre-war Bourbon from a warehouse through a line of hose to a building some yards away. There were 500 barrels, worth about $5,000 each, in the warehouse when the boys started pumping. They were interrupted before they had evolved a scheme of getting 10,000 cases, valued at $140 a case, out of the place, but they had succeeded in pumping more than 100 barrels of the bulk goods.

SCHEME AN OLD ONE

In printing accounts of the thief technique—the use of hose and a pressure pump—newspapers commented on the ingenuity of these latest robbers. The scheme, however, was one of the first used as a means of cheating Volstead. In fact, it was used downstate in 1919—one month before the prohibition era began—in a $70,000 job.

In Peoria in November, 1922, the system was employed as a part of a $500,000 robbery. A former Chicago police court and divorce lawyer, who is reputed to have made from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000 out of whisky since the beginning of prohibition, relied upon his hose as a part of a plot to empty the warehouses which he bought from less eager and industrious men. The retired lawyer was not content to use manual pumps of the type generally used in warehouse robberies. He had constructed a large portable power pump which could suck out the stuff with great speed at a minimum of effort. The contrivance was so successful that he shipped it all over the middle west before it finally was seized in St. Louis.

Hidden, but permanent, pipe lines also have played a prominent part in bootleg maneuvering. This system has been particularly effective in illicit alcohol removals from legalized distilleries and real beer removals from legalized near plants.

Equipment of one brewery was found to include a fake heating plant which embodied elaborate radiators in a garage across the street from the brewery. Real beer was forced through the layout into a racking machine in the garage, where it was placed in barrels and shipped out, at times when prohibition agents were guarding the gates of the brewery yard.

Several big robberies were executed by tunneling, but as a general rule this proposition offered too many engineering problems and consumed too much time to engage the interest of the highly aggressive bootleggers.

LIQUID DIVIDENDS

During the first year of prohibition warehouse robberies enjoyed their most exclusive vogue. Later the series of robberies became interspersed with other methods, principally those having to do with fraudulent withdrawal papers or documents obtained through official irregularities or extreme generosity and leniency.

One of the first striking cases in this category was a now famous declaration of booze dividends by an old time liquor firm which desired to clean up its stores and get out of the business. The ingenious plan, as many will recall, was to sell stock in the firm. After the stock had been sold it was announced that the principal assets of the company were liquid. The firm then announced its program of dissolution and stated the assets—cases of liquors which included whiskies, cordials, rum, and cordials—would be distributed among the stockholders of the company.

The stockholders had no difficulty in getting permits to remove their potable dividends. The plan was laid out so well that prohibition agents rode the trucks. Motorcycle policemen, who were voted dividends of from five to ten cases, acted as convoys to help guard the stocks from hijackers.

A trial followed, in which the prohibition director in office at the time of the distribution, a former judge, a banker, and several others were the defendants. The jury could see that there had been any intent to circumvent the Volstead act and returned a verdict of not guilty.

Among the stockholders was a former Chicago alderman, who received

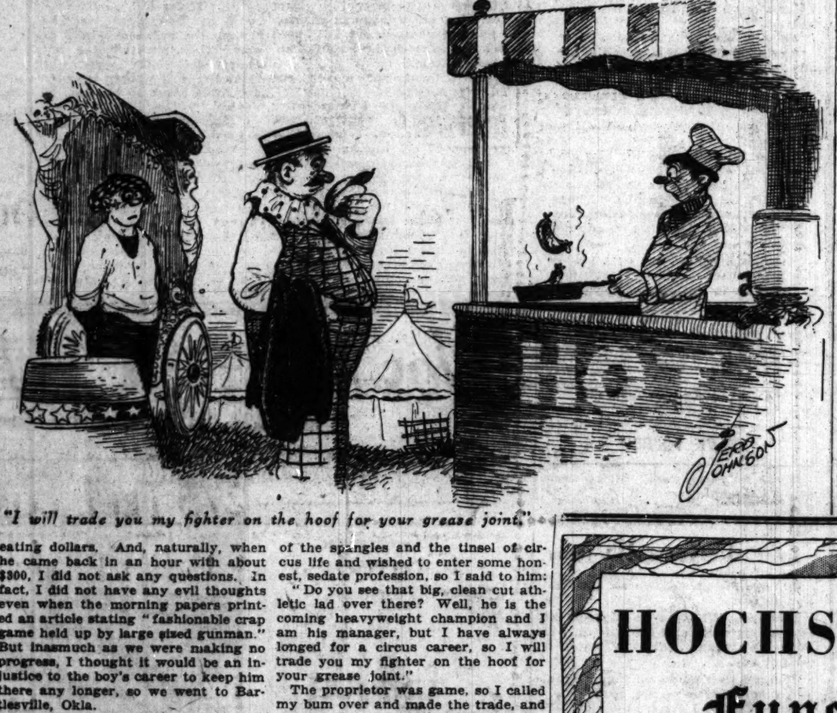
THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL

by Westbrook Pegler

Success Makes an Ingrate of a Fightin' Bum



"I will trade you my fighter on the hoof for your grease joint."

SOMETIMES I get very disgusted with the way things are going in this country, and one of the most disgusting things to me is the way people are always running around talking about success, as I have known of cases where success would change a man's character in a very disgusting way.

I have been thinking about a heavyweight bum of mine who became successful and the ungrateful way he treated me in later years has turned me against success forever.

We had a change of administration in our town some years ago, and for chief of police they put in a very ignorant man who promptly housed up a number of prominent citizens. The outrage made me so indignant that I immediately left town for a tour of the country, and a couple of weeks later I found myself in a place called Des Moines, Ia.

A $1.35 FIGHTER

One evening after I had eaten my dinner in the drug store, which was the center of the fashionable night life in this city, I discovered that I did not have any funds left, and when I stated the facts to the cashier he asserted that if I did not pay him $1.35 he would come out of his cage and cuff me around.

"Well," I replied, tactfully, "I am not a fighter myself, but I can lick any $1.35 fighter in the world with a bowl of hot soup in one hand. But if you are a real fighter, I will just put the halter on you and take you around the country and we will both make some funds."

This chump was a big skinny bum, but his hand would cover the top of a keg and he weighed about 185 pounds, so I thought he might be good enough to keep me going until the right minded citizens at home could turn the new chief of police around and see what was on his price tag. So I haltered the party.

"You're on the pay roll," I said to him. "Have you got any money?"

He had about $150, which he had saved to pay for a correspondence course in prize fighting, but I changed these plans and we went to Kansas City.

NO BUSINESS

Owing to conditions, we did not get any work in this town and after a time we did not have any funds left. I am not given to boasting about my courage, but I will state that I was so desperate that I would willingly have let my bum fight the champion of the world for $50.

"Get me the toughest bum you can find," I said to the promoter. "I am not afraid to let my chump fight anybody."

Still we could not get any business, and naturally I was feeling very discouraged when I returned to the hotel that night. As I am in the habit of carrying large sums of dough, I always pack a shooting pistol, and when I came into the room I unstrapped the shooter and laid it on the bureau. Then I lay down in the bed with my face toward the wall, as I was very tired, and I said to my bum:

"Well, there isn't any sugar in the bowl tonight so it's up to you to go out and get us some eating dollars by some honest means or another."

When I looked up my bum was gone and my shooter was missing, but I am strictly honest by nature, and I only thought he had taken the shooter along to protect his funds from lawless characters after he procured the eating dollars. And, naturally, when he came back in an hour with about $300, I did not ask any questions. In fact, I did not have any evil thoughts even when the morning papers printed an article stating "fashionable crap game held up by large sized gunman." But inasmuch as we were making no progress, I thought it would be an injustice to the boy's career to keep him there any longer, so we went to Bartlesville, Okla.

STILL NO SUSPICIONS

There was a circus playing in this town, and on our way out to the grounds a policeman asked me if we had come from Kansas City. Thinking they might be looking for some criminal and not wishing to become the victim of a mistake in identity, I said we had just come from Fort Smith, so the policeman apologized and said he was looking for the large sized gunman who robbed the crap game in Kansas City.

Still I did not have any suspicions, but I was beginning to wonder if I was standing in the way of my bum's advancement, and I was asking myself this question when I stopped at a grease joint to eat a frankfurter. These joints are called grease joints because they sell strictly hygienic frankfurters stuffed with sanitary sawdust and sage instead of pork, which is likely to be unhygienic, and as there is no fat in the sawdust, it is necessary for the proprietor to grease the stove with a rag all the time. There are so many joints allowed on the circus lot and you have to own a sort of franchise or the circus management will take steps.

TRADES HIS FIGHTER

As I was eating my frankfurter the proprietor remarked that he was tired of the spangles and the tinsel of circus life and wished to enter some honest, sedate profession, so I said to him:

"Do you see that big, clean cut athletic lad over there? Well, he is the coming heavyweight champion and I am his manager, but I have always longed for a circus career, so I will trade you my fighter on the hoof for your grease joint."

The proprietor was game, so I called my bum over and made the trade, and you may imagine my surprise and sorrow a few days later when I read an article stating that the police had sent my bum back to Kansas City for robbing that crap game.

I followed the grease business for several seasons, and one spring a new heavyweight champion bobbed up. I had not been following the bums very closely, so I was astonished to see by his picture that he was my old bum, under the management of the man who sold me the grease joint.

Naturally, after winning the championship, this bum did not wish to fight any more, and just before the season began he joined our circus.

DISGUSTED WITH SUCCESS

And now I will tell you how success makes ingrates of people and you will understand why I have been turned against success forever. Because the first thing that ungrateful bum did was to have the manager of the circus run my grease paint off the lot and put an old pal out of business.

Success had completely changed the character of a fine, generous boy, and that is why I say it disgusts me to hear people running around talking about what a fine thing success is.

boom dividends valued at $90,000. He was more careless than a certain high Cook county official and other stockholders and did not conceal the storage place where he had placed his booze dividends. After more than three years of legal skirmishing the former alderman's property finally was destroyed by the government.

THE LANCASTER CASE

Another notable case where government documents were manipulated, involved the withdrawal of $300,000 worth of whisky from a government concentration depot in Chicago. Most of the whisky, which was in bottles, bore the brand "Lancaster," a standard Bourbon for many years. After the plot had been discovered the best known government investigators were sent on the trail of Lancaster. One clue led to a big south side furniture storage warehouse. A large sized, boarded off, section had been designated as the hiding place of a considerable quantity of Lancaster. Search warrants were obtained for an inspection of the premises. Among the investigators was a man who has been in the revenue department for many years. When the raiders entered the designated section of the warehouse he sniffed a highly trained sniff.

"I've been a revenooer for more than 30 years and this old nose knows. I smell Lancaster just as sure as I'm a foot high."

Thus encouraged, the raiders ripped through partitions and found nothing but vinegar. The next day, however, an operative of comparatively meager experience in government work went to the warehouse and found, in a far distant corner on another floor of the big structure, a sizeable quantity of the greatly sought Lancaster.

There was a stirring trial of a number of prominent defendants and some well known hoodlums. The prominent ones were acquitted and the hoodlums sent to jail for short terms.

ROB ARMY DEPOT

One of the most startling robberies was that of the army warehouse at Pershing road and Wood street in Chicago. The building was erected as a quartermaster's depot for this corps area, but one entire floor was rented to the treasury department as a storage place for seized liquors during the intervals that extend from the time of confiscation until cases are disposed of in court.

At the time of the robbery more than $3,000,000 worth of all kinds of rare and good liquors were stored in the warehouse. The place was supposed to be patrolled constantly by guards in the employ of the quartermaster's department. One night in November, 1924, thieves entered the place, first getting into a room partitioned off from the liquor area by heavy fireproof tile and plaster. With sledges and fire axes the thieves tore holes in the walls sufficiently large to permit the passage of hand trucks.

The amount of the loot never has been made known, but has been estimated as high as $800,000.

Of course there was a feverish investigation of the robbery, but no one ever was arrested and the matter soon was officially forgotten. The warehouse still is used as a storage place, but in the last year nothing worth stealing has been stored there with the exception of grain alcohol.

NO HONOR AMONG THIEVES

During all the robberies and illicit withdrawals the robbers and cheaters have had the added responsibility of making sure that they themselves weren't robbed after they had succeeded in getting the stuff out of confinement. Hijackers have an uncanny way of learning about booze robberies and illicit withdrawals even before they are executed. And long ago they forgot there is supposed to be honor among thieves.

One instance of the accurate information obtained by hijackers was revealed in the interception by three well known bootleggers of a $30,000 load of whisky moving under permit. At 11 o'clock in the morning at the intersection of Indiana and 20th street, a busy corner, the booze truck and the hijackers arrived simultaneously. It so happened that a detective bureau squad also arrived at the spot, also on the stroke of 11. The hijackers, after a mistrial, pleaded guilty and spent short terms in jail.

Remarkable as it may seem, there still are many thousand gallons of good whisky in warehouses. If you happen to own some of it, and haven't found a way to get it out, there still are quite a few young men to whom you can go and say: "Here are the keys to my storerooms. Don't you dare rob my warehouse at Rock and Rye streets." These young fellows are dependable business men, and you can rest assured you will get your end of the proceeds, either in merchandise or cash. And if you have enough of the stuff on hand, you can even arrange an advance payment from the men you ask to steal it.

COLOGNE.—The cathedral of Cologne, a favorite spot with sightseers, and one of the oldest and most impressive of Europe's magnificent churches, has succumbed to the march of progress and now has an innovation lacking in some of the most modern houses of worship.

Twenty-two loud speakers have been installed throughout the cathedral, so that worshipers in the most remote corners of the building hear distinctly every word that is spoken from the pulpit and every hymn that is sung.

In line with this a London pastor announces the advent of "canned choirs." With the recent improvements in gramophones and the wide range of sacred music on records, he has decided to put the cassocks and surplices back in the cedar chest and pink his choirs from the best organizations in the world via the record.

Loren Miller & Company
RELIABLE MERCHANDISE
4722-4728 Broadway
Uptown Chicago

May 10, 1927.

Chicago Tribune,
435 N. Michigan Av.,
Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen:-

We want you to know that the new Metropolitan Section of your Sunday Paper which we have been using for our advertisements since its inception, has helped us materially to show the greatest gains in the history of this business for the period from February 1st to May 1st.

Nothing can stop the growth of the outlying business sections, but that growth will be materially greater in those sections where the merchants use the columns of the Sunday Tribune to reach practically every home in the district from which they draw business.

The present make up of this section is very good, and we hope that you will continue and add to the interesting features that are now making it more popular each issue.

Very truly yours,
LOREN MILLER & COMPANY.
Loren Miller

LM*HD

Loren Miller & Company make "the greatest gains in the history of this business...."

LOREN MILLER and Company, uptown Chicago's big department store, are well experienced in the use of newspaper advertising. They have been using The Chicago Tribune for years, and making it profitable while buying the full city and suburban circulation.

Now they can buy north side city and suburban circulation only, and they have used The Tribune on this basis since the inauguration of the Metropolitan Section. Has it been profitable? Read Mr. Miller's letter:

"The new Metropolitan Section," writes Mr. Miller, "has helped us materially to show the greatest gains in the history of this business for the period from February 1st to May 1st. Nothing can stop the growth of the outlying business sections, but that growth will be materially greater in these sections where the merchants use the columns of the Sunday Tribune to reach practically every home in the district from which they draw business."

Merchants can now buy the most complete coverage available in Chicago, paying only for Sunday Tribune circulation convenient to their stores. They reach approximately a quarter of a million families—a circulation equivalent to blanketing a city of a million persons. Employ this new force—the greatest for the money outlying stores have ever had—in building your sales and profits. A Tribune man will be glad to give you all the facts.

Convincing!

A look at the circulation figures of The Sunday Tribune for the north side and suburbs should convince any merchant of the value of the Metropolitan Section to him. Just a few of the circulation figures for north side sections and suburbs:

District	Families	Sunday Tribune
Rogers Park	21,072	18,165
Edgewater	26,022	24,418
Ravenswood	34,148	29,205
Lake View	36,014	35,502
North Halsted	16,788	14,460

Suburbs	Families	Sunday Tribune
Evanston	11,044	13,765
Wilmette	2,894	2,283
Winnetka	2,187	1,903
Glencoe	1,161	1,228
Highland Park	1,992	1,718
Lake Forest	1,173	1,215

Similar ratios of coverage apply in nearly every section of Chicago and suburbs. Exact figures will be supplied on request for any of the 48 districts in Chicago, or any of the suburbs.

Little Tales of Big Heads

What's your pet little tale of a Big Head? Send it to Big Heads, Sunday Tribune, and we'll pay you it if we print it.

One of the Few!

Dorothy was entertaining a group of young girls at her home. Suddenly she announced, "I'm going to put on my new dress that I bought at a sale yesterday and see what you think of it."

Presently she appeared clad in an attractive and becoming frock, which the girls frankly admired.

"It cost only eight dollars!" she gleefully declared. Several of her friends declared their intention of trying to get one, also.

"I am never lucky enough to get a readymade dress becoming and chea- like that," modestly admitted a pretty young girl.

"Of course not, few girls can," promptly conceded Dorothy. "It's impossible unless you happen to have an unusually gooo figure like mine. I never have the least trouble in getting lovely readymade garments ridiculously reasonable!" F. J.

And She Meant It.

One day my girl friend and I were talking about the prom dance. The boy she liked had invited another girl to it, which made her quite jealous.

After a while she remarked to me that she thought he had only invited the other girl because he was under obligation to her. When I asked her why she thought this, she said, "O, well you know I am so popular all the boys would ask me, only they had to invite somebody else."

And she meant it, too! E. S.

Perfectly Satisfied.

A friend of mine is constantly congratulating herself on how she graces the present styles with her shapely limbs. We who are not so amply endowed are never allowed to forget how overwhelmingly she excels from knee to toe.

Recently, when shopping with her, I noticed a run, rapidly developing into a good sized hole, in her stocking. With a shrug she explained the cause by remarking, "O, I get them often. People LOOK holes in my hose."

F. A. S

Her Custom.

Recently I was a bride and, as usual, my girl friends gave me a bridal shower.

I thanked the girls for their kind remembrances, but one girl wasn't there, so I called her on the phone and expressed my gratitude for her gift.

She added, "Why, I always give the best presents at showers and I never give anything cheap." T. H.

Fairly Pleased with Himself.

I am working in a department store and one of our salesmen, a tall, good looking man, is always telling us about his wonderful personality.

He said to me one day: "When customers come in, do you notice when I am here they all approach me and it's my personality that makes the sale?"

Last Monday he and I were in a conversation when a customer came in, and asked me to wait on her. When she was gone I asked him where his wonderful personality came in that time.

"O," he said, "she was so impressed with my personality, and thought I was the manager of the store and did not approach me for that reason."

M. C.

They Felt Superior.

They were only remarks I overheard by chance, and the speakers were strangers. But, big headed, and how!

I sat behind two women at a public gathering. They were discussing the audience, to whom they evidently felt greatly superior, as far as brains were concerned. The conversation was of an unmistakably self-appreciative trend, but the remark that registered supreme big headedness was: "When I look at the faces here about us I just feel like intelligence personified."

It'll Be a Miracle
If Gest Beats
This Bogey

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON. — Morris Gest, in his long theatrical experience, no doubt has given out thousands of those gratuities popularly known to the theatrical world as "paper," but he is now faced with a problem that bids fair to cramp his style in his presentation of "The Miracle" in London. Thirteen hundred perpetual free seat holders of the distinguished Albert hall can see no reason why their seat rights, granted for 1,000 years, should be upset by Mr. Gest or any other ambitious producer. Mr. Gest is partial to this house for staging the speciacle, but fears with that much "paper" in the house, leaving only a balance of 2,100 seats, "The Miracle" will have to be just that to succeed. Mr. Gest has said many times before, and again repeats that he expects to make practically no money from the production and is only doing it in the interests of art. Since he has a few months to ponder the question, his agile brain no doubt will evolve a way to make some of the 1,300 possessors of "Annie Oakleys" sacrifice their free seats on the altar of that same art.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

The Summer Ensemble Is Still Smartest When It Is Made Up of One Color, but Two Distinctly Different Shades May Be Used If One Has the Artistic Sense of the Parisienne.

By Bettina Bedwell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS—(Special Correspondence.)—While fashion allows a great deal of liberty in assembling the ensemble this season, the surest short cut to chic is still to be found via the ensemble in one color and not more than two fabrics. Coat and dress in two tones of one color, or in two distinctly different shades, often make striking and extremely smart ensembles, but these variations always require more expertness and artistry than the single theme, and are, therefore, more dangerous.

You cannot outrage either fashion or taste if you wear an ensemble that is all one shade and one fabric, with hat and shoes to match, even if you pick bright red. Of course, this obvious color is going to become wearisome more quickly, and will be the cause of sore eyes after a bit, but the principle is good, just the same. When in doubt, select one color for your ensemble and stick to it. Don't weaken and put on a hat or trimming of something else, even if it looks charming at the moment. You'll be pleased and complimented more for your fidelity in the long run. And Paris backs you up, too.

Two fabrics, if they match exactly, are perfect, and equally ideal if they harmonize without a single sour note. And these simple themes are never difficult, even for the eternal amateur in fashion. The hardest thing to learn in the art of dress is the assembling of the ensemble in all of its details, so that there isn't even one tiny little bit of discord anywhere. I saw a woman come into the Ritz all dressed in gray—just jersey, and the simplest of lines and cut, without any fur or expensive details—who had done her assembling without a flaw. The hat she wore was a plain gray felt, and her shoes and stockings were identical in tone with her clothes. She carried a black bag mounted with gray and wore a black chiffon flower. Nothing marvelous, you might say, in the way of color or material, but she was a delight to the eyes, and all of the blasé and dollar worn orbs there followed her, as if she was some sort of ocular medicine. She was. And she had worked, because getting together a number of articles all in one nuance of gray is a hard labor, to say nothing of choosing good lines and the right kind of materials to set off each other. It's often a rocky road to chic.

I have selected for our sketches today four ensembles that are practically mistake proof, where all of the work is done by Paris experts, as the best examples of the assembled ensemble that is worn with success by smart Parisiennes. Any of these could be worn by very different types of women with success, and they are the creation of two Paris couturiers who have unbroken records of successful ensembles for women of the world over a period of years.

A fashionable and simple color combination of navy blue and white crepe satin is used for the afternoon ensemble. Shown at the extreme left. The tunic is embroidered in silver and the coat in white.

The supremely smart street and travel ensemble is of gray-beige friska with subtle complication of cut, and trimmings of tucks and band. Shown next.

It is the clever cut of this ensemble (sketched third from the left), its graceful flaring panels, and its combination of willow green crepe satin with green silk rep that make it one of the smartest Paris summer costumes.

Last, bright navy blue jersey is a favorite fabric for the sports ensemble. The sweater of blue and gray striped jersey has a monogram in blue.

The fourth figure at the right of our sketches shows a Jean Patou ensemble that is similar to the one the gray lady wore at the Ritz. This one is also made of jersey—beautiful, unpretentious material—and the color is a bright navy. More lively than real navy, and never obtrusive. The straight coat, with its flat revers and its bias ends on the sleeves, is a flawless bit of tailoring, and harmonizes well with the box plaited skirt. The sweater, silk and wool jersey, is striped in blue to match the coat and skirt, and in gray. The flower is gray, and the hat is a toque of gray felt trimmed with a diagonal band of blue, felt also. Gray slippers and stockings. It is individual and it's also Any Woman's ensemble who has the good taste to select it.

At the other end is another ensemble for summer which is equally charming, and fully as beautiful. This is the type of costume that is elegant and also simple. Lucien Lelong created it, and it has been tested by his famous kinoptic method. The coat is of navy blue satin, with full length revers and lining of white satin and graceful sleeves which flare a bit toward the wrists. An outline design in white silk is embroidered above the hemline of the coat.

The frock that accompanies the coat is composed of a straight slip of navy blue satin over which is worn a three-quarters length tunic of white satin. The adjustable crossed bands at the square neck of this dress are in themselves an artistic creation. White satin buttons mark the closing, and a white belt with silver buckle marks the waistline. The skirt of the tunic is embroidered in silver, in a sort of drawn work pattern.

This ensemble is a two color harmony that is easy to achieve, and never unbecoming. Such an ensemble can be increased by the addition of another tunic in dark blue trimmed in white, for less formal occasions. The hat of white bakou straw is trimmed with a navy blue flower, and black patent pumps are the proper footgear.

Our second model on the left is another Lucien Lelong ensemble, for all around wear. You couldn't look anything but smart in this type of ensemble while traveling or on the street in summer. It is of gray-beige friska, the Meyer fabric that is semi-transparent, of wool and cotton and that never wrinkles or looks dowdy. Lelong has made a straight coat cleverly trimmed with curved and straight tucks that cover inset pockets at the hips.

The dress is the epitomé of chic simplicity. It is one piece and straight, with movement introduced into the skirt by a single deep box plait at the side front. The waist closes under a row of frisca covered buttons at the left side front, and the triple belts close on the right side front. A hat of beige felt, or felt straw, with a contrasting ribbon, and beige leather single strap slippers complete this outfit. This is the real Parisian chic for practical wear, with nothing of the glaring about it, and everything that is desirable to the discriminating eye.

The model next to it, for real summer wear, has every one of these same charms in the same superlative degree. There is a moving supple grace about this Jean Patou ensemble that reminds you of wistaria waving in the breeze. Patou is a master of the slender line with a certain amount of flare, and this ensemble is an example of how he handles them this season.

The coat, while slender, has slight flares at the sides, and its only trimming is stitched bands. The material is silk rep, or serge, and the color is willow green. The frock is made of the same tone in crêpe satin, and the two materials together show how delightful fabric combinations can be.

The dress suggests the higher-than-normal waistline in an upward point in the front, from which two lines of piping merge into supremely graceful flaring panels at the center front of the skirt. Panels and hemline are also piped in self-material. With such a summery ensemble, a rather large hat of crin or other very light straw is worn, trimmed simply with applique of satin. Shoes of green, beige or black may be worn, and hose of beige or gray.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

TWO piece dresses are much liked and every woman will want to have one or more in her wardrobe this summer. Pattern No. 766 is a smart but simple design and is suitable for one or two materials. The stores show beautiful printed crêpes for blouses, and in a dress of this kind the skirt would be of a solid color, matching the ground of the printed crêpe.

The skirt is cut in two piece and is quite plain. For size 36 it measures at the bottom about 1 1-3 yards. There are many women who like the very narrow skirts, and some who prefer having a little more width at the bottom. If you are one of the latter it may be a good idea to leave the seams open at the bottom the depth of the hem. To do this properly, find out the exact length the finished skirt will be and then clip the seam edges a little above where the hem will come. Turn one of the loose edges to the wrong side, fold exactly where the hem is to be and run a seam by hand as far as the seam is clipped. Then turn it right side out. Do this to the four loose seam ends.

Fasten the seams well where they end, turn in the hem all around and put in by hand. This sort of an opening isn't at all noticeable—the skirt hanging together at the bottom unless in motion, and it makes walking easy.

The blouse is cut with the popular square neck, and finished with a flat trimming. A jabot at one side of the front of the blouse makes it a little different from those usually seen; and full length sleeves gathered into narrow wristbands, and a narrow belt complete the dress.

Two shades of a single color would be smart for this dress, and one of the gaily colored trimming bands could be used as a finish.

Pattern No. 767 is for a pretty little dress for a small girl. No branch of sewing is more fascinating than making pretty things for children. Any of the usual wash materials that are used for small dresses will be suitable; and it may be entirely made of one, or two may be used. There is a panel front that would be pretty made of a plain chambray, for instance—and the dress could be cut from one of the pin checked materials. The scalloped edges may be hemstitched, or a narrow, bias binding set on. The dress is cut with short kimono sleeves, finished with turned back cuffs. A collar with scalloped edge finishes the neck.

Still another way of finishing the scalloped edges would be to face the front edges, stitching on the scalloped outline, clipping the edge of each scallop and turning right side out. Then just inside the scalloped edge do the single feather stitch. It is extremely pretty on these small clothes and may be worked in a color or white.

Pattern No. 768 is for a summer dress, and is suitable for any of the crêpes, taffeta, satin, or the silk and cotton materials. It is cut in two pieces—front and back—and the drop shoulders form short kimono sleeves. The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front and the edges are bound. The slashed opening makes it possible to slip the dress on and off easily.

Hemstitching is suggested as a trimming, and a contrasting colored thread could be used for the work. Or, if you are inclined to spend more time on it, the dress would be charming with the neck and sleeves embroidered. The cross stitch is effective and goes rapidly. Then there are ribbons and fancy braids, any of which will look well.

766—Woman's or miss' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4⅝ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

768—Woman's or miss' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 3½ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

767—Child's dress. Sizes 2, 4, and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1¼ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

Close Fitting Little Hats Boast Earrings —a Pirate Touch That Enhances Their Smartness.

CLOSE fitting models of felt, crochet visca, faille, and pedaline and Milan are in much demand. The skullcap type is seen at all the smart teas and bridge parties.

The hat shown in the cut is called the Black Bottom. It is made of Belgian mare black felt. There is a plait one and one-half inches deep across the back. This plait is two inches up from the bottom of the hat. The brim is cutup in the back just above the hair line. It is left long on the sides and is curved up across the face. The points on the sides come just to the bottom of the ear.

Earrings of antique or bright gold are sewed on those points to give the effect of wearing them on the ears. Do not use the part that screws in or onto the ear. Take this off and use the lower part of the earring.

All colors of hackle feathers made into pads are also extremely smart on their close fitting hats. All kinds of pins are used this season, not so much as a side trim, but put directly in front of the hat. We have the dancing girl and the clown made of solid rhinestones with colored stones for eyes and buttons on the dress and suit; the more sober Buddha is exhibited for hat ornaments in jade green and carnelian red.

Orange blossoms, made in small wheels two and one-half inches in diameter, used on both sides of the hat, are also good. Gardenias of yellow, peach, white and flesh are shown on hats. A single gardenia is sewed on the right side of the hat and another one of the same color is pinned on the left shoulder.

In the new shades for spring, monkey skin—a soft tan with a hint of pink in it—holds good for the light tones. Navy blue and black are also good in the deeper shadings. C. G.

Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the monster that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes business quarrels, and generally plays havoc with us mortals. We'd like to know your most notable experiences with a jealous person or persons. If you have encountered a situation where jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealous Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Threw Away Note.

I had written a note of thanks to a young man for the flowers which he had sent me while I was in the hospital and gave it to a friend of mine to mail. She had been a former friend of his.

Some time later I saw him, and he inquired as to whether I had received the flowers. "Why, didn't you receive my note of thanks I sent you?" I asked. He said that he hadn't, so of course my first thought was to ask Alice, whom I had intrusted with the note if she had mailed it.

Upon answering she replied, "O, I couldn't be bothered." MRS. H. M. O.

A Jealous Fisherman.

Last summer when we went fishing to a near by lake our neighbor, Mr. R., was fishing on the other side. My dad had a big catch with several large fish, while Mr. R. caught only two small fish. The next week we also caught many fish, while our neighbor caught none. The third week Mr. R. brought a group of boys out to the lake, and as the water was shallow they waded across and had a good time on our side. Mr. R. did not try to stop the boys and we did not catch any fish that day. L. McC.

A Prize Snooper.

My sister's husband has a jealous disposition. His line of work does not keep him busy continually and as he lives a half a block from his work he comes home at almost any hour to see if his wife is alone.

My husband and I motored 300 miles to pay them a surprise visit. After showing us to our room, she said, "If you hear Henry coming, hide!"

Before we had time to reply we heard Henry's, "I knew I'd catch you if I tried hard enough."

When he saw who it was he felt embarrassed; but sis says he isn't cured. MRS. E. F.

Unhappy.

I had a beautiful new hat and received many compliments because of it, until one day my friend's fiancé admired it. She borrowed it and kept it for some time. When she returned it I almost cried in front of her, for I could never wear it again. The poor girl has never found happiness, and it is due to her jealous disposition. D. W. MACD.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Simple Wedding Feast.

I noticed one day, in the restaurant where I dine, one of the white porcelain top tables was spread with a white linen cloth with a bouquet of roses in the center. In fact, it looked fit for a bridal party, so I inquired of friend waitress the reason. She told me a wedding party had stopped on their way to the photographers, saying they would return in half an hour for their wedding dinner and wished to reserve a table for six.

She had been assigned the table and had rushed out and purchased a chicken and flowers extra, and was patting herself on the back for having done so well on so short a notice. The bridal party came in before I had finished my lunch, and to my surprise ordered six cups of coffee and six hot dogs, the entire order amounting to sixty cents.

I slowed up to sympathize with friend waitress. "Anyway," she said, "I never spend a tip until I get it." H. B. W.

Forgot Something.

It was a church wedding and in the church were as many people as the place could hold. The chancel looked beautiful with all the pretty flowers. The organist played the wedding march while the bridal party marched into the church.

When the bride and groom, the four bridesmaids and the best men and even the dear little flower girls had taken their places, the pastor whispered some question to the groom who turned scarlet, shook his head turned and fled from the church.

O, the excitment of it! The bride fainted and looked just like a corpse in her lovely white dress and the long tulle veil. The maids and little flower girls were all weeping and from all sides such remarks were heard as "What a shame!" and "What a disgrace!" and "I never thought that of him!"

A young doctor from the audience took care of the bride and she soon revived. She was leaning on her mother's shoulder when in came—all out of breadth and wiping his perspiring face—the groom.

He handed the marriage license to the pastor, which he had forgotten to bring along as he had promised to do.

A great sigh of relief went through the church and the ceremony was performed without any further disturbance. G. M. W.

Unique Procedure.

One of the strangest weddings I ever saw was at our parish church. The bells in the tower rang for ten minutes and when the bride and groom entered they separated and went down the side aisles and the bridesmaids and ushers went down the middle one.

After the ceremony the bride and groom went down the middle aisle while the bridesmaids and ushers went down the side ones.

The maid of honor dropped roses on the carpet.

During the party afterward the bride's slippers were filled with greenbacks. L. K.

Covered with Money.

The pastor just finished, "I now pronounce you man and wife," when there was a great rush in the audience. The men seemed to be pushing forward. Each had in his hand a roll of money in bills.

Then each one tried to see who could pin the most bills on the bride's dress. She was literally covered with five, ten, and twenty dollar bills.

Quite agreeable to the bride, don't you think? MRS. H. O. L.

Aha!

The strangest wedding I have in mind took place in England several years ago and, of course, was a church wedding. The bride was a "live wire" and always the life of a crowd. Just before the ceremony she was joking and laughing, when the groom, who appeared to be nervous, said rather abruptly, "Don't be so foolish." Everything went off beautifully and the minister had asked the question, "Do you take this man to be your wedded husband?" Whereupon, quick as a flash, the bride-to-be answered, "Not so foolish," and walked out of the church. MRS. E. F.

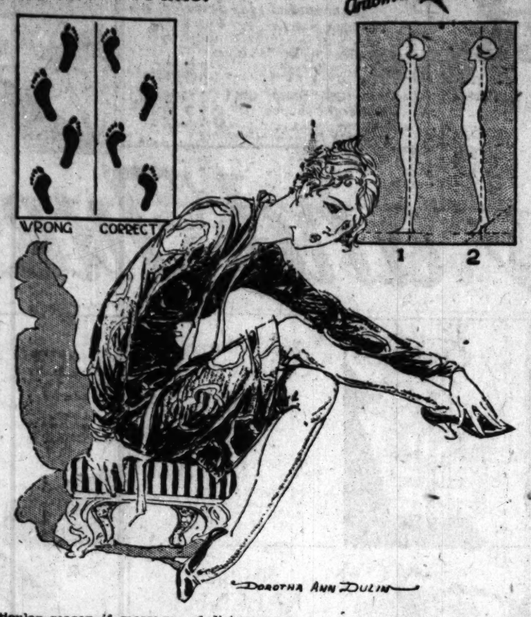
HOW TO AVOID FOOT TROUBLES

Much Discomfort May Be Avoided and Money Saved by Taking Foot Ailments in Time.

by Antoinette Donnelly



NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—One of the outstanding things about the age in which we live is the concerted effort of the various associations of hygiene to give the public the benefit of their knowledge at little or no cost. The philanthropy thus distributed is of incalculable measurement. There is hardly a branch of hygienic study where information cannot be had for the asking, so many and varied in aim are the sources of supply. But living in a hectic though glorious age, we are often willing to accept these educational advantages as light reading matter and go the way of weak flesh which would rather do what is most agreeable at the moment.

There has just been brought to my attention a valuable leaflet put out by the Illinois Association of Chiropodists meant for distribution among a public whose joy in living would be appreciably increased were feet treated with the consideration these loyal old supports deserve.

A healthy campaign has been in operation for some time past urging women to adopt shoes to fit the needs of the individual foot. The fact that shoe sizes in popular demand have increased from threes and fours to five and half and sixes proves that the educational work is not without success. But being the sex that we are immediately we get the feet educated to accept their length philosophically and to dress them in the same spirit, that weakness heretofore ascribed to human flesh demands that the appearance of shortness be subscribed to with heels of the most appalling height.

Real Philanthropy.

I claim these educational associations are philanthropic because they could, by keeping to themselves their ethical knowledge of this thing and that, reap a considerable financial harvest from the treatment of the very ills they caution against. Chiropodists assuredly are in a position to line their coffers handsomely by withholding information on the whys and wherefores of corns and calluses and ingrowing nails and more serious foot troubles. But, of course, there is that fruitful human equation, vanity, to be depended upon to keep them out of the poorhouse.

Whether all women ever will be able to adjust their vanity to common sense methods of shodding their feet I have large and reasonable doubts. Being one of them, myself, I feel fully qualified to doubt for the uncommon sense heel is not without its lure to me, too. A spirit of deep humility possesses me when I feel the urge to lay down the law on this subject. However, I cannot let that interfere with my job, which is to carry on my own branch of the educational work in this as well as other items of health and well being.

We all of us know, who have piloted around on heels that throw the body out of balance, cramp the toes and send shooting pains up and down the legs, that we simply are not capable of showing off at our best. Our "pleasant" expression is not nearly so engaging as it might be. And during this particular season if messages of distress are signaled from those pedal extremities of ours we are attacked with the melancholic idea that life isn't what it ought to be one single bit. A heart ache can leave you no more destitute about the futility of living, really, than feet that are groaning with aches and pains.

The Commonest Ailment.

The commonest foot ailments are corns, generally brought about by misfitting shoes and short stockings. And where one of these is jeopardizing the peace of your household, to say nothing of the calm, unwrinkled face, the best thing to do is to hie yourself off to one legally qualified to practice chiropody. The fee is nominal and the relief great. The implements used in a reputable establishment are thoroughly sterilized, which precaution is not always taken in the home treatment.

Soft corns between the toes result from moisture and macerated skin. This thickened skin should be removed and the space between the toes kept dry. Painting the soles and between the toes with a mixture of one-half ounce salicylic acid and four ounces of alcohol is helpful.

Calluses are a thickening of the skin due to friction and a pressure from the footgear. If there is a bone displacement, the abnormal position of the part induces this pressure. The cause has to be investigated and eliminated.

Bunions are a deformitory that often may be corrected in their early stages under competent direction and proper treatment. But once they become a large chronic deformity they require surgical intervention.

The Result of Tight Shoes.

The most thoroughly painful and a frequent foot complaint arises from the healthy nail being forced into the nail fold by pressure from tightly fitted shoes. Ingrowing nail is its familiar cognomen. A nail, if treated civilly, is as harmless as a goldfish, but maltreated it can wreak a horrible vengeance. If a crowded shoe shoves the flesh into the nail, the flap of flesh becomes bright red and painful to touch. Allowed to go unheeded, the nail gradually imbeds itself in the lateral tissues. An irritation sets up which produces excessive granulation or what used to be called proud flesh.

A nail is a protection and should extend a little beyond the flesh and be allowed freedom in that extension. In cutting toenails, remember that. The nail which has a tendency to grow in should have a packing of cotton wedged into the nail groove to keep it separated from the flap of flesh. The person who suffers from this form of foot ailment will never recover peace of mind without taking the precaution to safeguard the foot by a careful selection of shoes. They must be broad in the toe and a thumb's width between the tip of the nail and the tip of the shoe should be permitted. The high heel is particularly disastrous in such cases, since it throws the foot forward upon the shoe tip.

Excessive Perspiration.

Associated with other foot troubles is the common one of excessive perspiration. This may be due to general debility and nervousness. Where an unpleasant odor exists, a one per cent solution of potassium permanganate applied as a lotion after a foot bath and the changing of hosiery twice daily is recommended as a remedy that invariably corrects. Patent leather shoes have a tendency to increase the perspiration trouble, particularly in warm weather.

Pains in the feet and legs arising from the various arch conditions should be accepted as nature's warnings of trouble. Most common factors in creating arch troubles are overweight, occupation, general physical weakness, high heels and improper shoes. Also the method in which the feet are used in walking. In the accompanying illustration you see the correct way to walk is to point the toes almost directly forward; the wrong walk, to turn the feet out.

To get an idea of the right or wrong balance you are subjecting yourself to with heels, compare your standing position and the correct position of the organs, spine and weight distribution with the illustrations above.

Answers to Beauty Queries

By Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MARY G.: FOR THIN EYEBROWS, rub yellow vaseline into them before brushing. Then with an eyebrow brush or a small fine tooth brush brush them night and morning to promote their gloss and train them into shape. Do not allow the vaseline to get into the eyes, as it is irritating to them.

M. I. G.: BUNIONS ARE THE result of great pressure and friction on the joint. They are brought about by wearing too short shoes and stockings. Have yourself fitted to shoes at a reliable shoe store. The joint must be relieved of all pressure if you would find comfort. You may paint the bunion with a lotion of two drams each of carbolic acid, tincture of iodine, and glycerin.

T. H. G.: A GOOD DEPILATORY for the arms or other parts of the body where you wish to remove superfluous hair is: Sulphide of barium, 2 drams; oxide of zinc, 3 drams; starch, 3 drams. Mix well and keep tightly corked. When you wish to use it, add sufficient water to make a paste, and spread over the part, allowing it to remain on several minutes, or until there is a slight burning sensation.

F. B. V.: CLEANLINESS IS THE most important factor in the care of perspiring feet. The feet must be bathed daily and stockings should be changed every day. A twenty-five per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water is an excellent remedy. Apply for three nights, then once a week. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for other helpful suggestions in "The Care of the Feet."

T. McC.: I WOULD NOT RECOMmend the use of peroxide, even in small quantities, for keeping the hair light. It is the natural thing for your hair to grow darker as you grow older. Peroxide dries the hair and gives it a strawy look. Wash the hair with a good castile soap, and if you wish, add lemon juice to the last rinse water, as it gives a golden tint. Instructions for shampooing may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr. or Mrs.? Send it to us, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Constant Practice.

Wife: Just think, Mrs. Johnson learned to play the banjo in two lessons.

Husband: That's nothing—it should be easy for her—she's been picking on her husband for ten years.

MR. E. F. D.

Quieting Hubby.

Hubby (disgusted over wife's cooking)—Believe me, I certainly would give anything to know why God made you women so beautiful and yet so confoundedly dumb?

Wife—Well, I'll tell you, my dear! God made us beautiful so you men would love us and he made us dumb so we could love you men. G. E.

A Case of Necessity.

He—Wifey, do all women prefer the conceited men to the other kind?

She—What other kind? D. D.

The Only Caller.

The husband [after a typical family quarrel]: Wasn't that the doorbell? I wonder who it can be.

Wife: Don't worry, dear, it isn't any one. The only caller at our door is the proverbial wolf. A. J. R.

Her Calling.

Hubby and wife, returning from a lecture where the great callings of various individuals were discussed. The exceedingly lazy husband remarked:

"Well, I guess I miss my calling. The wife retorted, "Well, I didn't! My life work seems to be a-calling you to eat and a-calling you to get up for work—and plenty of calling I have to do for that!" MRS. S. B.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Parsimonious.

The cheekiest person I know is a young farmer of this community, who replied to the request of a neighbor for help with a job of corn shelling the next day, something like this: "Well, no, I guess I can't. You're going to move out of the neighborhood the first of March, ain't you? And I wouldn't be likely get my help paid back—but say, I would like to get a load of cobs."

The other young fellow replied, "You win. Come and get a free load of cobs," and the tightwad did actually drive up to the job the next day, load up, and drive off home, evidently considering the cobs worth the "razzing" he got from the boys working on the job. MRS. J. E. M.

Brings the Tea Along.

The cheekiest person I know is a woman who eats her lunch downtown every day and as a part of her noonday meal has to have her cup of tea. Tea is 10 cents a pot. Does she pay her 10 cents like we do? She does not——. Every day she orders a pot of hot water and brings her own tea leaves. Can you imagine that for nerve! C. M.

False Pretenses.

During a visit with a wealthy cousin she remarked to me, "I've just bought a new dress and I don't look well in that color. Wouldn't you like to try it on?"

I was delighted and said I would be glad to. I went home proudly bearing my supposed gift on my arm.

A few days later she called me over the telephone and informed me I could settle for the dress at the shop where she had had it charged! A. W. G.

Making the Caddy Pay.

I used to be a caddy at the —— Golf club links. There I met many cheeky persons. The cheekiest of them all was a woman. She hired me for her caddy one day.

Off the side of the first fairway there was a big hill about thirty feet high. It was all covered with tangled grass. She teed off, but instead of the ball going down the fairway it went about half way down the hill. I tried to find it, but it was even hard to walk in the tangled grass. I hunted around about fifteen minutes, when she finally put a new ball on the course.

She was all right until it was time to pay me. The caddy rates were 40c for the nine holes. She gave me 20c and said the other 20c was for the golf ball I lost. A. C. S.

The World's Worst.

A neighbor whom I had known but a short time had a breakdown in his car. He borrowed mine, driving it over a 50 mile R. F. D. route every day for three months. After he finally brought it home (or rather after I had gone and brought it home, for he would not), he came one day while I was away from home and took two of the casings off the car, claiming the ones on it at the time he borrowed the car had worn out, and he had taken two off his own car.

In the meantime, all my best tools had disappeared. When I asked him about settling for the use of the car, he would not pay one cent for the three months' use of it, and to cap the climax, he had me charged with a bill of $8 for repairs.

Did I pay it? M. C.

Making It Worse.

Occasionally the automatic stop on our phonograph would stick, but was so easily adjusted that it did not seem necessary to have it attended to. One day when I came home I found a friend working with it and he announced: "I have taken this stop off. It is no good." When I asked him to put it back as he found it he worked with it a few minutes and left.

Several days later I requested him again to put the stop back, and this time he worked at it until he had it so we could not use the phonograph at all. Then he left with the remark, "I never did know the first thing about phonographs."

Now I am waiting until I have the money and chance to send to the city for repairs. MRS. B. M. G.

An Unpleasant Neighbor.

The cheekiest person I ever saw was the man who moved his family in the apartment across the hall from me. The first evening he was there he took our paper and read it before we had a chance to. In two weeks after they had moved in they had borrowed my electric iron, sweeper, heater, books, and even asked me to keep the baby for them.

Then, to show his appreciation, he went into a restaurant where we were well known and made all manner of fun of my husband and me. He was a stranger in town, while we were old residents. We surely liked his nerve! F. M. B.

OH YES! I can wear smaller, daintier shoes since I use Tiz. It is because my feet are never swollen or tender any more.

The minute you put your feet in a Tiz bath, you feel pain and tenderness drawn out. Oh! What relief. No more, tired, aching, burning, shoe-chafed feet.

Tiz draws out the poisons and acids that puff up your feet. Get a box of Tiz for a few cents at any drug or department store.

An insect with a $200,000,000 appetite

You know how women dread the moth. No woolens, silks, furs or down comforters are safe from the insect and her pernicious offspring. Their natural abiding place is in all such household effects folded away in darkness.

Here the moth lays her eggs. The eggs hatch into larvae, or worms. The worms, born naked, need clothes, which they make out of YOURS in the form of a cocoon. In this they grow, meanwhile feeding on the materials and increasing the size of cocoon as needed. Finally they go to sleep, wake up as moths and flit away, leaving ruin behind.

In one year a moth produces four generations of destroyers. The total loss ascribed by authorities to moth damage is close to two hundred millions of dollars annually. The answer is —

Get protection...in one of these regular $50.00 Lane Cedar Chests...

Here are Lanes—the chests famous for their full ¾-inch panels of fragrant red cedar heartwood—panels not skimped but thick enough to be lastingly fragrant and moth-killing.

THE SUCCESSFUL WOMAN—AND HAPPINESS

Is the Financially Independent Ever Really Contented? Has She Everything Her Heart Desires? Here Are Answers.

by Doris Blake

NOT long ago one of the most successful business women in America took over a building, the transaction of which involved several million dollars. Reporters immediately camped on her trail for stories of the life that led to an unusually great measure of success. To one who suggested that it must be a glorious feeling to review an achievement such as hers, she replied:

"It is terrible. Last night I ran across an old friend of mine with whom I had been out of touch for years on account of my work. There we sat as strangers with nothing in common. The old human touch had evaporated. It is terrible, I say."

One cannot help detecting a note of pessimism in much of the literature dealing with women who thought feminism the direct road to woman's happiness. Some writers have no hesitation in describing the modern independence as blatantly destructive of her happiness. It will remain a debatable question, no doubt, so long as economic conditions force women into the wage earning field. There will be successful women of the world, surrounded with the physical comforts life would have denied them but for the advantages of the modern day, who will scout the theory that independence and personal happiness are impossible of attainment. There are other women who will look back from some pinnacle of achievement and ask, as one woman asked: "What does it profit a woman to gain the whole world of independence and suffer the loss of the things every woman wants, whether she is successful or not?"

Each Woman Has Her Own Ideals.

"It depends upon so many circumstances, upon so many individual heart traits whether the game proves worth the candle or not. Men and the sentiments, the attentions and the support or the ministering to they represent may, to one woman, mean nothing. To another, perhaps just as able to sign a check for thousands of dollars, the old Eve with her dependent weaknesses can no more be ruled out of her heart than can be the cardiac organ, itself. And so optimism or pessimism can no more embrace the whole body of so-called successful independence than can the younger generation be embodied in one sweeping statement, pro or con.

But I do hold this, a disturbing observation, if not one containing the seeds of pessimism, women's capacity to hero worship the male has diminished, perhaps not in ratio to her progress beside him as co-worker, but sufficiently in hundreds of instances to make man feel a destructive sense of inferiority. In certain exaggerated cases woman's own sense of power and accomplishment breeds in her a contempt for man. Not a woman, understand, abnormal in any other respect than ensues from her proven results that she is as capable as he, and sometimes more capable. All of which may contribute to her greater success in business—but also to her invariable failure as a domestic partner.

You can argue till the cows come home and until they start out again about the reasonableness of the modern matrimonial partnership arrangements, about women being accepted at full brain power by an appreciative and loving male, but until man has undergone some miraculous change in his construction, no signs of which are upon the horizon at the moment, marriage is never a success where the man is made to feel consciously or unconsciously that he is not just a little bit the superior.

The suggestion is advanced by a visiting English woman journalist that the gold diggers' fascination lies not so much in the fact that men are easily fooled as in the sop to their hunger for that feeling of being fully able to provide and supply for women, dominant in the able bodied male. An American woman author, herself the victim of "successful woman" circumstances, said to me: "No woman is clever whose husband is not made to appear clever by her."

"Slow Torture."

Rita Weiman, well known writer, in a recent story in Liberty magazine, has cleverly portrayed one type of successful business woman who makes marriage Hades for the man who draws her. She called it "Slow Torture," a mild caption for the situation involved.

Mildred is a girl described by the author as the "sort who dominates the room the instant she enters it," a girl marked for success by the sheer force of her personality. David, her adorer, is a plodding student, earnest to the point of struggling long hours over his home work in his young days. Both elected to make architecture a career. They married when the salary of each was fifty dollars a week. Theirs was judged the perfect union, an ideal love match.

They worked in the same office, Mildred continuing with her job. They had been married a year when she got a raise, while David did not. Faint jarring notes had already been struck with Mildred's supervision of problems assigned to David and suggestions from her that held her young spouse up to ridicule before other draftsmen in the office. David made protests on a number of occasions that he would like to puzzle his problems out by himself. She argued that she was only trying to help him.

Finally David took a position with another concern "not for the reason that his wife's salary was more than his own, but because she kept him in mind of the fact. His status became unbearable."

When the Climax Came.

Then we are carried through scenes amid social surroundings made possible by David's financial progress away from the dominating influence of his wife. "On all occasions, in little petty happenings that tear a man's soul and break down his self-respect, devastate his peace of mind—at dinner and bridge parties, in their home, even as they waited for a taxi outside the theater—she told him how to do things. And David's suffering was a cross on which daily he was crucified."

The way David swung his golf club was the occasion for a public reprimand. The scene that followed might have warned Mildred of the latent potentialities in her man.

But the climax came with the interference of Mildred on plans for a Long island show place upon which David had worked for months, the stamp of approval on which, already seen in the owner's enthusiasm meant an ultimate partnership. Mildred insisted upon accompanying him, in spite of David's protest, on a tour of the place, now almost complete.

Overruling his months of work, his pride, she made suggestions to the owner, "the feminine touch" she called the things that David had not included in his plans. She succeeded in making David look and feel his inferiority "as effectively as if she had put a dunce cap on his head." That night he strangled Mildred, not with the finality she deserved, for she recovered. Later she got a divorce on the grounds of extreme cruelty. David went to another city to live and the world judged him harshly.

The Mildreds are not always business women conscious of their superior power. There are wives quite capable of breaking down a man's self-respect. But the earning wife with her additional implement of torture, a pay envelope, has it within her power to be a deadlier enemy in the job of tearing a man's heart and soul up by the roots.

Women the World Over

The honor of being the first woman justice of the peace in the United States rests upon the shoulders of Mrs. Catherine W. McCullough of Chicago. She has been practicing law in Chicago for the last 40 years.

Though she never had boys or girls of her own, Mrs. Josephine L. Petit of Fitchburg, Mass., has had more than 300 children to call her mother. She and her husband take care of the New England French-American Home.

The Woman's Bar association of Washington, D. C., is making a determined effort to put through legislation amending the inheritance laws of the District of Columbia, so that female relatives shall be on an equal footing with the male.

Dr. Elizabeth A. Sullivan, wife of a Boston physician, has been chosen by the welfare societies of that city to do mental diagnosis of difficult cases dealing with estranged parents and unruly children.

At the age of 15 years Barbara Hutton, granddaughter of the late Frank W. Woolworth, with $30,000,000 in her own right, is considered the richest young girl in the country.

For the first time in the history of congress a woman now holds a position as bill clerk in that body. She is Miss Mary Simpson of Vermont, and her salary is $2,800.

Answers to Love Queries

—By Doris Blake—

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Opened a Letter.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl almost 18 and I go with a fellow 21 who is an organist. We have been going together five months and we are engaged.

"He has some girl from another city write to him and has the letters sent to my house.

"The other day a letter came and I opened it because I was jealous.

"Please tell me what to do. He knows I opened it. HORSES."

You made a ghastly mistake in opening mail addressed to another, Horses. He has good reason to resent your action, and it may take him some time to overlook the offense. You should have given him his mail, explaining your disapproval of such a correspondence, dear.

There Are Others.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl in my teens. I am in love with a young man who showers his attentions on my friend. But I am head over heels in love with him, and I know his head is just turned by her baby ways. I would greatly appreciate your advice in my case.

"HEARTBROKEN."

You can't expect success in winning a man who is so deeply interested in another, Heartbroken. Do the sensible thing and put all thoughts of him out of your head—hard though it may be. There are others, dear.

She Forgot Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going out with a girl for nearly six months. Three weeks ago she told me she was going on her vacation. Since then I never have heard from her. She told me she was going to write to me every three days, but I didn't hear from her. CURLY HAIRED CHARLIE."

She must have been fickle to forget you so quickly, Charlie. Don't feel too badly over the slight, as there are others to take her place.

A Word Would Help.

"Dear Miss Blake: I went with a young man for a year and thought there was nobody like him. I had an argument with him, because I believed things people told me.

"I do not go around with any boy friends at all. I still care for the former one. When he sees me he speaks and is on friendly terms. Do you think we will ever go together again and do you think he still cares for me? SO LONESOME."

Such a lack of confidence is mighty disconcerting, Lonesome. Don't you think a word from you, showing you still believed in him, would do much to reinstate your friendship, dear? Try it.

Overcome Competition.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a girl over a year and love her. Lately she's been telling me she doesn't know if she'll see me or not. She often receives telephone calls from other boys and doesn't care for me any more. Please advise.

"DOWNHEARTED."

Aren't you jealous because others appreciate her good qualities, too, Downhearted? Show your metal by proving you're the best man. Don't lose heart because of competition. Meet and overcome it.

Do as She Does.

"Dear Miss Blake: My girl tells me she goes out with other men, but if she ever found out I went out with other women she would be through with me. SHEIK."

What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Don't let her tell you differently or keep you from seeing other girls.

Sick Stomach Teaches Her a Good Lesson

Miss Jeanne Ginsberg, Bronx, N. Y., writes: "I had become accustomed to arising each day with a heavy head, dizzy, and a bad taste in my mouth. My bowels were frequently clogged and constipated. One day I became so sick to my stomach I had to leave an important job and go home. I tried CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. I feel greatly relieved since using them and whenever my stomach and head goes bad I certainly know what to do."

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are sugar coated, small, easy to swallow, purely vegetable, and relieve the bowels free from pain. They tonic the system as they are purely vegetable and do not contain Mercury, or poisonous drugs.

HORSEMANSHIP

How to Ride
A Series for Men and Women

By CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS
11th U. S. Cavalry

Horseback riding is being revived with increasing interest throughout the land, so expert advice on riding style and horsemanship generally will be of interest to those who, either as novices or experts, seek such recreation for its healthfulness and for the real joy it affords. The following is the first of a series of articles by Capt. Fenton Stratton Jacobs, United States cavalry, who has had considerable experience in horse training, and who is a graduate of the famous cavalry school at Fort Riley, Kas. Capt. Jacobs' articles will deal with the subject from various angles. He will stress the proper way to ride in order to obtain the greatest enjoyment with the least tiresome effect on horse and rider, as now taught at the cavalry school.

NO sport in recent years has made greater strides in popularity than horseback riding. Why? Because there is no other sport in which men, women and children, alike, can combine pleasure and physical stimulant. The American College of Surgeons, through its late president, Dr. A. J. Ochsner, M. D., LL. D., once said: "There is no other form of exercise that so fully affects every nerve and every organ of the human body in a healthful way as does horseback riding." Dr. Andrew A. Gour writes: "The visible results of the sport are the distinctive bearing and graceful carriage of the person who rides regularly—bright, clear eyes and healthful complexion."

The word horsemanship is as often abused as are the horses in the hands of the unskilled. Horsemanship includes the care and management of horses, as well as being skilled in the training and riding of horses. Frequently, practice alone may produce individual success, and a man on a certain horse may produce astounding results even in violation of well established principles; while on another horse and using other equipment he would be helpless. No intelligent horseman ever claims for his own method the A and Z of equitation, for it is the belief of all who are not hide bound by prejudice that the method of riding, the bit and saddle and breed of a horse are all dependent upon local conditions and the work required.

Should Women Ride Astride?

Before launching into the specific details of our "seat," which will more nearly than any other I have seen produce the ideal, a relaxed rider on a relaxed horse, I wish to discuss at this time certain generalities which so often have been made the subject of debate.

Should women and girls ride astride? Read farther. For three years I was in charge of equitation and tactics at the University of Arizona, Tucson. During that time I had approximately 600 co-eds from nearly every state in the Union, in addition to the 2,000 or more cadets, in my riding classes. They rode the "McClellan" army saddle and the English, French and American flat saddle astride. I gave them as nearly as I could the so-called "Fort Riley" seat. The advanced class included high school work, jumping four feet, and cross country galloping over the roughest terrain in that vicinity. And the girls gave a better exhibition than did the cadets taking the parallel course.

So there is no question in my mind as to whether a woman shall ride astride a horse. It may be interesting to note that a sixth century vase found at Daphnae, lower Egypt, shows a woman riding astride. It has been proved by other sources that women rode astride until the twelfth century. A pillion or pad was then introduced on which a lady rode sidewise behind her husband and steadied herself by holding on to his belt.

History of the Side Saddle.

In "Readings in Social Problems," by Albert Benedict Wolfe, we find that in Europe, several hundred years ago, riding sidewise by women with feet enveloped in a voluminous skirt, was popularized solely because a French princess set the fashion to conceal her deformed spine. In England the side saddle as well as many other other styles and customs was introduced by Anne, daughter of the king of Bohemia, first queen of Richard II., in 1388.

The side saddle when first fully developed had two heads or pommels between which the right leg was supported, the support of the left being the stirrup. The third pommel or leaping head, against which the left leg rests, was, it is said, invented as the result of a match between two gentlemen riders to ride a steeplechase on side saddles. The winner had provided himself with the additional support for his left leg. At first the leaping head was used only in the hunting field and the double "cow horn" was retained; however, as its uselessness became apparent the second pommel disappeared.

Again, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, the side saddle was popularized because a member of her royal household had a withered right limb, which was not noticeable when she rode sidewise wearing a full skirt. Thus we find the side saddle owes its origin to fashion and to the camouflage of infirmities, rather than to a scientific development to benefit women.

CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS.

Riding Has Many Benefits.

In America the women who lived in the west, where the country was rough, and sports such as shooting, contest riding, and racing were done on horseback, were the first to take up the cross seat; because it is the natural, safer, and more efficient way to ride.

For accurate riding, the leg around the horse—thigh, knee, calf contact seat (which in a later installment will be discussed in detail) is obviously more sure of the desired result than the tapping of a riding crop on the right or "off side," necessary when riding the side-saddle, to turn the horse on the forehand to the right, on two tracks to the left, or any other movement requiring displacement of the hindquarters to the left. And most important, it enables both rider and horse to be symmetrically developed.

Summing up the question, it has been my observation that horseback riding astride, for girls, aside from being an attractive, clean and exhilarating sport, has been highly beneficial for those who master the art. It stimulates self-confidence, daring, consideration for others, aggressiveness, quick thinking, coördination of mind and body, relaxation, a better posture, and, as President Wilson once said, "The outside of a horse is good for the inside of a man"—or woman. However, regardless of method, style or whatnot, let us ride—ride as often as possible, for the good of this and the generation to follow.

ISN'T IT ODD

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the aphids, those tiny insects that live on the tips of tender plants and the under sides of leaves, should go along for generations without wings and then, of a sudden, finding is necessary to move, should overnight equip themselves with the means of flight!

The aphids are the sapsuckers of the garden, the tiny fellows who settle down, drive their beaks into the bark until they reach the sap, and sit there contentedly for a lifetime drinking their fill. So sure are they that they will not want to move that, in shedding their skins as is the way of insects as they grow, some of them cast off both legs and cling there blind and helpless for the rest of their lives.

Clinging thus, the helpless mothers give birth to their young. These have legs and eyes and run quite actively about until they get located and get their connections made with the sap streams.

The processes are repeated until, perhaps, the plant harboring these tiny creatures gets to have so many of them that they drink all its sap. There is none left to nourish its leaves and fruit and it languishes and dies. Thus the aphids prove very harmful to plant life.

But the aphids themselves, having killed the plant that furnished their food, find themselves facing an emergency. They have got to go away from there and find a new source of food. Possibly it is a cherry tree in which they have been living. Possibly the season has so advanced that a hop field near by is full of young and tender plants. If the aphids could but get from the cherry tree to the hop field they would again be in clover.

It is when faced with this emergency that the insects perform the miracle. All the generations of the summer have been quite wingless. One watching them would long ago have written them down as insects without wings. But here, of a sudden, they need the means of flight that they may preserve themselves. Of a sudden a generation of aphids appears that is possessed of wings. These they unfurl and fly away to the hop field. After the journey they bore into the streams of hop sap, make their connections, shed their traveling skin, wings and all, and again settle down to a quiet life.

But when, later on, the hop plants mature and begin to dry out, a new generation of winged aphids appears and they fly away to some other plant where the sap still flows.

The barometer on the side porch hung rather high and Rowen saw his father take it down one morning to get a more accurate reading.

So Rowen proceeded to do the same thing later, and it fell from his little hands and broke. He ran to his mother with a fragment in his hands. "M-mother, I b-busted the weather," he sobbed. C. M.

I am a country school teacher. Recently we gave a little playlet. I had memorized most of it hearing the children rehearse, and expected to be able to prompt any who needed it without reference to the book.

A little girl named Susie took the part of the "queen." When the play came off and we had come to the part where the queen enters the scene, she was slow in coming, and thinking there was a hitch somewhere I said, sotto voce: "Enter, Susie."

But Susie piped up, much affronted and excited, and said: "You shouldn't say 'Susie,' I'm the queen!"

"It brought down the house." We are "booked" for another night, and Susie's reputation as an actress is speeding towards stardom. H. K.

The workmen had been grading for a new street past the house and Lloyd, aged 3, had been told to play in the yard and not go out near the place where the men were at work, but during the day he managed to get out there, and was having a grand time when his mother discovered him.

"Lloyd, I thought I told you to stay in the yard."

"I is in the yard. They took it all out in the street, so I had to go out there to play in it, didn't I?" C. E. O.

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

By KEMBLE

His Ma called him Robin; his Dad called him Son;
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun.
So he called himself Robinson Grewso.

THE sun had been up for several hours when Robin and Chin-Chin finally wakened. Robin rubbed his eyes and looked around.

"Where are we?" he asked, in a small, frightened voice.

"I have an idea we're right here." Chin-Chin tried to laugh as he said it, but the laugh wasn't in him. He was too scared.

"Here, have a soldier."

They ate their breakfast without saying a word to each other. Then Robin said, very seriously: "Chin-Chin, we must start right out and discover what lives on this island. I'll take the gun and the jelly beans, and you fly ahead and if you see anything, just drop to the ground and flap your wings three times and I'll creep up and shoot."

The parrot did as he was told, and as he neared the top of a little hill he dropped to the ground. Flap, flap, flap went his wings. Robin crept up and looked.

"A cannibal. That's what he is," gasped Robin.

Down in the hollow sat a fat little colored boy, eating chocolate soldiers. Robin rushed at him, waving his gun and yelling like an Indian.

"Shoot a jelly bean at him to scare him," screamed Chin-Chin.

The fat little colored boy rose and stood perfectly still.

"What you-all acting so foolish about?" he grinned. "I ain't going to hurt you," and he danced up and down as he stretched out his chubby hand.

"Here, have a soldier. I play with them first; then I eat them. They don't mind at all. I used to lose them all the time, so now I eat them. Then I know just where they are."

Robin could not help laughing at this.

"You're not such a bad cannibal, after all. What's your name?" he said.

"Ain't got no name. Never had none," grinned the little darky.

"Well, I'll give you one," said Robin. "The same name that is in my book at home. I'll call you Friday."

"No, no," screamed Chin-Chin. "It's perfectly foolish to call him Friday. Call him Chocolate Sundae."

"My, my, but that's a sweet name. I never ate one, but I've heard about them. Now you-all come up to my camp and I'll show you how I live."

Sundae led the way, and soon Robin and Chin-Chin found themselves seated on a big mat made of long grass, eating popcorn balls.

"Where do you get these nice popcorn balls?" asked Chin-Chin.

"I'll show you," and Sundae jumped up and took them to his "plant ground." "First I want you to see my digger bug at work."

The biggest beetle Robin had ever seen was busy making holes in the earth. He would poke his nose down and push the dirt back with his claws, then he'd drop a seed in each hole and cover it up and stamp on it.

"He's planting for my next crop. He keeps busy, he does."

Over in another field were cornstalks nearly ten feet high. On the stalks the ears of corn were popping and scattering the big white kernels all about them.

"The sun does that," said Sundae, and he was very proud. "You see, the sun is my best friend. He wakes me up in the morning and tells me when to go to bed at night, and he keeps me warm and makes a fire for me so I can cook my food, and he does lots of kind things just like this."

Sundae gathered up the popcorn and dipped it into a bucket filled with maple sirup, and made some more nice fresh popcorn balls.

"You know, I have a friendly woodpecker that taps the trees for me so I can get this maple sirup. All the birds and beasts on this island are friendly. They won't hurt you if you are kind to them. And funny! Smoky mackerel! But some of them just make you die a-laughing. Funniest things you ever saw. You just stick around and you'll have a good time."

"O, we'll stick," said Robin, "won't we, Chin-Chin?"

"You bet," said Chin-Chin. "We're the sticky kind, especially when we're eating popcorn balls."

Eating popcorn balls.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

HERE'S A CHALLENGE EASY TO MEET.

THERE are many, I know, able to help the young girl who wrote this letter:

"Dear Miss Brown: Owing to a great deal of illness and misfortune for the last six months, we are almost penniless. I am 21 and the oldest in a family of six girls. My mother is a widow. Can any of your readers help us with clothing? We can remodel them, and anything given us will be greatly appreciated. V. P."

Isn't this a challenge to all of us—and one of the easiest chances to help that we could imagine? It is the same story that causes so much misery in the world—illness—too much expense at once, and a breakdown of courage and spirit under the burden.

The case is only one of scores we have on record right now, where illness is falling with crushing force on families whose savings have been exhausted by illness or misfortunes, and whose earnings leave no margin above current living expenses. And when we think of all the clothing outgrown and discarded every day in Chicago, is there any reason why we should allow this hardship to continue bearing upon these families?

There's the happiness of giving and a suggestion to you, my friends. The appeals do not ask for real sacrifice; outgrown clothing still good but which has outlived its usefulness to you means so much and fulfills long felt wants in many cases. Ask yourself whether you can afford to miss the happiness that will come to the recipient and to you from meeting the need. If you do, I'm certain you'll be among those who help.

Song Books to Pass On.

"Our church has four sets of song books, with 24 to 30 in each set. We will gladly pass them on to some organization who can pay the postage on them. MRS. G. B."

Some Sunday school or mission could make splendid use of these song books. If you would like to have them, let me know at once.

Boys Want a Wagon.

"I am a widow and the mother of two boys. They want a wagon to play with and I can't afford to buy it for them, as I am just starting to keep house. I would appreciate anything in the line of furniture or rugs, also. "MRS. H. A."

Children outgrow their playthings so quickly, I am sure there will be a wagon for these small boys. If you have any furniture for the mother let us know about that, too.

Deserted Mother.

"A young mother with two babies has been deserted by her husband. She has been sick with heart trouble, but hopes to be able to go to work soon. They need clothing badly. She takes size 38 and the children are a girl, 3, and a boy, 2. MRS. E. O."

This young mother's chances for finding a position probably would be improved greatly if she had some of the clothing you are about to discard. Perhaps you'll have some for the babies, too.

Hard Working Youngster.

"I am just a poor working boy, therefore I come to you for help. I have been promised a job working evenings in a grocery store, but I must have a bicycle to deliver groceries, and I wonder if some one of your readers has one he no longer wants. R. C."

An ambitious lad is this, who could make splendid use of the bicycle you've outgrown. May he have it?

For Youthful Actors.

"The high school in which I teach is putting on 'The Willow Plate,' and some of the pupils cannot afford the Chinese costumes needed. Perhaps some readers have costumes and queues they will be willing to pass on to our school. S. P."

Have you a mandarin coat or a queue to give these high school students? They'll be quite necessary if the performance is to be a success.

Widow Needs Coat and Dress.

"Do you think you could get me a black coat and dress, size 40? My husband is dead and I have a broken ankle, so I can't work. MRS. D. S."

Somewhere, I know, there must be a black coat and a black dress in this poor widow's size, which she might be wearing. Have you either of these garments to give her?

Dog to Give Away.

"I have a white fox terrier, female, clean and intelligent which I will give to some one who can give it a good home. D. K."

Here's a lovely little pet for some one who'd like to have a dog. Would you?

Two Gifts.

"I have a gas iron I would be glad to give any one who could make use of it. I also have a large green glass dome suitable for a dining room electric light fixture. MRS. H. F."

This iron would lighten your work considerably when laundry day comes 'round and the dome would be a great improvement to your dining room.

How I Dress My Hair

By Edna Wallace Hopper

The thousands who see me daily on the stage wonder at my beautiful hair. It is wavy, glossy and abundant. Nearly everyone thinks that some wonderful hair dresser gives it daily care.

Not so—I'm too busy for that. I never go to a hair dresser for a Marcel wave. I simply apply twice weekly a hair dress which great experts made for me. It is not sticky, not greasy. Before they made it I never dreamed a liquid could do so much. Now all toilet counters supply it as Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75c.

Nothing else I know gives a girl or woman so much added loveliness at once. No one can resist it when she knows. My guarantee is enclosed with every bottle, so it costs you nothing if it doesn't please. Go try it at my expense.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

On the Food Piece Called a Sandwich Is Modeled an Array of Edibles Ranging from Humble Snacks to Superdelicacies

By Jane Eddington.

NO ADEQUATE classification of sandwiches can be made, yet we are tempted to make the following:

1. Plain cold sandwiches, or two slices of bread, preferably well buttered, with slices of meat—beef, ham, chicken, etc.—or American or Swiss cheese, or some mince for a filling. And, best of all, often plain bread and butter sandwiches — sometimes substantial, sometimes of the thinnest slices of bread that can be cut.

2. Plain hot sandwiches. A favorite humble form of this type is the sandwich filled with slices of roast beef with a hot gravy over it, but many other sorts have been devised. The summer salad is freshened up often with a slice of hot bacon or of thin broiled ham or cold cooked ham sliced, heated up, or made like broiled meat.

3. Open sandwiches. Here we have possibilities and suggestions. The ship's steward on the great ocean liners serves these. In color and design they furnish interest as an afternoon tea refreshment. The relish called a canape is on this model. In both these cases the size is small, but quite large open sandwiches may be made for luncheon purposes and several served on a plate—one more like a relish, another like a main dish, another much like a salad, and yet another like a dessert.

4. Storied sandwiches. For these more than the original two slices of bread are used, or from three up. These range in variety from the hearty club to the tea delicacy of many thinnest slices of bread with fillings like the thinnest of icings, and these, like cakes, are sometimes finished with pipings of cream cheese, or butter or even of a fondant.

5 Fancy sandwiches. Here we have a medley of true sandwich forms with great variety secured through fillings of the most divers sorts, fish and meat pastes, spicy mixtures and sweet fillings.

6. Dessert sandwiches. In these cake or wafers take the place of bread, and they are only related to the sandwich by their form. Commercially the ice cream sandwich is of this type. Slices of sponge cake toasted, or not, with slices of a brick of ice cream make a pleasant dessert. Some of the elaborate puff paste forms are really on the sandwich model, and so is a cream puff and, for that matter, a layer cake.

Making Plain Sandwiches.

It is a great advantage to cream butter before trying to spread bread with it. Tough crusts must be cut off for politeness' sake, but it is better to leave them on unless the sandwiches are to be closely wrapped, especially if they are to be kept for a half day. This is why rolls and biscuits and even cream puffs replace the slices of bread acceptably. The crusts keep the bread from drying out. Unless the sandwiches are to be put into a press, it is best to use several small slices of meat for filling them, because otherwise all the meat may be pulled out with the first bite.

The meat should not be sliced until the bread has been buttered, and it is best to have each slice of bread buttered because thus the meat is protected, or kept from drying out. It is, in other words, briefly potted.

Sandwich Breads.

Commercially, in this day, there is the special sandwich loaf of white bread, but one of the best ways to keep sandwiches from being monotonously tiresome is to vary the breads with every picnic, or tea party, by using different breads and to depend as much on the dark breads as upon the white.

Home made oatmeal bread that will cut as thin as a wafer makes a delicious foundation for a chopped olive and mayonnaise filling. A good Boston brown bread that will cut in thin slices is wonderfully appetizing with almost all the cream cheese fillings, and in fact is excellent with a thick sour cream filling which old fashioned people might have a prejudice concerning until they tasted the mixture.

Cheese Spiced Sandwich Filling.

One pound of American cheese, two or three beaten eggs, one-half cup of cream, salt and pepper. Cut the cheese fine. Beat the eggs and mix the cream and the cheese with them. Put all in a double boiler or over a gentle fire and stir constantly until the cheese melts. Add the seasonings after taking it from the fire, and it is well to include a few grains of red pepper. Pour into a jar and cool. When it is cool it should be the consistency of soft butter. If it should happen to curdle in cooking, or if we wish to have it extra smooth it should be sieved. It will keep for a week and is an economical way of using cheese, more so than using American cheese sliced.

Stiff Cheese Fillings in General.

The open cheese sandwich for luncheon is excellent, and may be used as the main part, or as a dessert part. In the latter case sprinkle some sugar over the cheese as it melts on the top of a slice of bread which has been toasted on one side, before the small chips of cheese are put on the other and melted under the broiler. Well pressed cheese sandwiches are dipped like French toast and heated up in the same way that it is.

The Cream Cheese Fillings.

Variety in these perhaps began when the cream cheese was mixed with pimento purees, or the red ingredient chopped, and open sandwiches fixed up in all sorts of fancy ways with this combination. Sometimes the cheese was put on the thin and fancy cut of bread, and the pimento cut fine was scattered over it, or crosses made, or lattices. Cream cheese mixed with green sweet pepper chopped fine—the pepper is excellent, also, with butter—makes an attractive filling. Jam and jellies to color the cheese, or dates to make it sweet and tasty or nuts to make it more substantial and some nuts to make it heartier, are other ways of using this exceedingly versatile ingredient in sandwich making. Quite plain it is used for many storied sandwiches well pressed and then sliced to look like a slice of layer cake.

Egg Sandwich Fillings.

Hard but gently cooked eggs, chopped and buttered while hot, salted just a bit, may be used for a thick filling for two slices of well buttered bread. They can be made ideally palatable. Grated cheese mixed with melted butter and mashed egg yolk makes a good variation of this sandwich.

Pressed Eggs.

Hard cook the eggs, drop them into cold water, drain and dry and shell and chop fine with salt, pepper, a bit of prepared mustard, and one teaspoon of melted butter to each egg used. Mix these together and press them into a small square loaf. Slices of these with lettuce dipped in a salad dressing and put together just before eating make a hearty and also a pretty sandwich.

Nut Fillings.

Almost any of the nuts, chopped and salted and mixed to a paste with cream or butter, make a good sandwich filling, without any additions, but figs, or raisins, or dates may be combined with the nuts, or chopped celery. For tea sandwiches almonds blanched and pounded with sugar, then mixed to a paste with rich cream, with a bit of salt added, may be most dainty. A piece of lettuce with the nut fillings always gives character.

Peanut Sandwich Filling or Butter.

Pound or chop home shelled roasted peanuts fine, mix them with cream, or melted butter, or even a fine oil, to the consistency of a good spread.

Peanut Caramels and Sandwich Filling.

Cook to soft ball [238] stage one cup of sugar, six tablespoons of milk, three or six tablespoons of peanut butter. Be sure the sugar is dissolved before the whole boils. Cool when taken from the fire, and then beat to the opera caramel stage, adding a few drops of vanilla, if you wish. With a sweet bread of the type of a coffee cake or bun this makes a delicious filling, or it may be set and cut into caramels. This recipe will make filling enough for from fifteen to twenty large sandwiches, best for a dessert, perhaps. But it is a bit heavy, and should not be indulged in by some people. After a light meal it will be a good dessert for a child, who is likely to love it. Cut the bread thin, thinly butter, and then crush the caramels for it, if that form has been made.

Sweet Fillings in General.

Chocolate drops crushed, soft caramels and bon bons, and all such make pleasant variation of the perhaps childish luncheon of bread and butter with sugar.

The Green Sandwiches.

These sandwiches and those of tomato and cucumber have the disadvantage of needing to be made just as they are used, but lettuce leaves, cress, nasturtium leaves [a sort of cress] and even the blossom dipped in mayonnaise, or a cooked salad dressing, make delightful fillings for tea sandwiches cut in strips, or crescents, or small rounds or squares. Nut bread with any of these fillings, perhaps the quick home made sort, is dainty. The fine stems of lettuce cut in thin disks and mixed with fine celery, finely chopped olives and perhaps a few nut meats can be mixed with mayonnaise for an acceptable and inexpensive filling.

Tomato Sandwiches.

Slices of tomato of a fine spicy quality—some do not have this quality—is without any addition of seasoning an agreeably cool filling for a sandwich But it may be combined daintily with chopped chives or have some crisp bacon powdered over it. Or it may be mixed with just a bit of mayonnaise and a chopped caper or two.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

This Suburban Home Is Beautifully Carried Out and Is Perfect in Every Detail.

INDIVIDUALITY may be as strongly expressed in the decorations and furnishings of a house as in the actual manners and speech of those people who occupy it. In order properly to serve as a home for the owner, the house must be more than a mere dwelling place. It must satisfy, in its plan and design, in its equipment and decorative treatment, the individual requirements and personal needs of those who live in it. The furnishing of a house affords wonderful opportunity for the expression of originality.

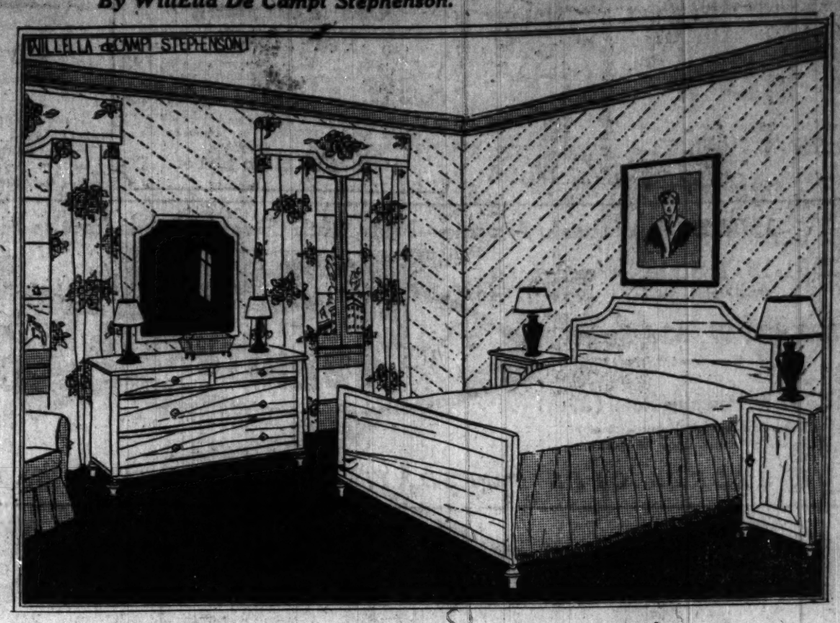
Beautifully carried out and perfect in every detail is a suburban home which has just been completed. The house is divided in the center by a spacious entrance and stair hall. A lovely scenic paper is used in panels on the walls. It is done in tones of ecru and ivory. Woodwork is painted ivory. Taupe carpeting is used on the floor and stairs. At the windows are ivory silk and wool casement cloth glass curtains, beneath draperies of sepia colored velvet. A Queen Anne sofa at one side of the hall is upholstered in soft red damask. Against the opposite wall space is a console table, flanked by a pair of William and Mary chairs. A lovely mirror hangs above the table.

An open doorway leads into the living room. Here there are many windows, and the room is flooded with light. Consequently, a dark wall covering combining amethyst and sepia is used satisfactorily. Several portraits in dull gold frames show to advantage against this background. The woodwork is painted a soft cream color. Natural colored silk and wool casement cloth glass curtains are edged with a narrow block fringe of the same color. Amethyst velvet makes the draperies. Drawn up near an open fireplace is a comfortable sofa upholstered in a deep amethyst block patterned mohair. One large arm chair is done in an exceptionally handsome tapestry, and another is in the drapery material. The remainder of the furniture is mahogany. Tables holding lamps and decorative accessories are conveniently placed. Deep amethyst carpeting is supplemented by interesting Oriental rugs.

Adjoining this living room is a delightful library. Woodwork and the many built-in, open book shelves are finished in dark walnut. A coarse, ecru grass cloth wall covering is used. At the windows are curtains of heavy ecru linen, decorated with crewel embroidery in deep, rich tones. They are finished at the edges with a thick, short, worsted fringe in many colors. Pulley cords are arranged so the curtains may be drawn together at will. A large wing chair is upholstered in the same embroidered linen. Matching the deep red of the crewel work is the velvet upholstery of a comfortable sofa. Deep blue wool damask covers a luxurious arm chair. Lamp shades and shields are made of parchment, decorated with bands of color, matching those in the draperies. A full, rich tone is given to the room by means of a large Bokhara rug.

The dining room and a charming little breakfast room are across the hall. In the dining room, woodwork and dado are painted cream color. The wall space above is covered with an interesting Japanese tea box paper in gold. It is finished with a coat of shellac, which gives it a mellow tone and a most substantial feeling. Cream colored silk and wool casement cloth, like that in the living room and hall, is used for glass curtains. Having the glass curtains alike in these three rooms which face the front of the house, produces a pleasing result from the exterior. Ample variety is given in the draperies. In this room they are made of a sumptuous black and gold damask. Chinese Chippendale furniture is used. A Chinese rug, in soft colors, almost completely covers the floor.

For informal use is the lovely little breakfast room. Here the walls are done in a dull gold grass cloth. Woodwork is painted sage green. Gold colored gauze makes glass curtains. Sage green and gold sunfast, in a damask pattern, is used for long draperies. The furniture is painted sage green, high lighted with gold, and decorated with floral motifs. Plate glass protects the table top. Chair seats are upholstered in mohair, in a jacquard pattern, in sage green and gold color. The floor is made of deep green square tiles, set in old ivory mortar. It is unrugged.



Simplicity is the keynote of the young man's bedroom shown today.

All of the bedrooms are charming. In the largest of them is used a wall paper showing clusters of flowers on an ivory ground. Woodwork is painted ivory. Glass curtains are of ivory point d'esprit. Changeable dull rose and gold taffeta make the draperies and covers for the twin beds. A Dresden lamp, on the night stand, has a soft rose silk shade, decorated with French silk flowers. Shields on the side lights and a shade for the drop light over the dressing table are made to match. The furniture, of French design, is made of walnut. A large, plain, mulberry rug covers the floor, leaving a border of about eighteen inches around the edge.

Expressly furnished for the young man of the house is the bedroom shown in today's illustration. The wall paper is in two tones of gray. Draperies at the windows are of a semi-glazed chintz, flowered, on a blue-green ground, and topped by shaped lambrequins, which are finished with an edging of plain raspberry red chintz. Glass curtains are dispensed with. The furniture is mahogany. A cover on the bed is made of raspberry red poplin, piped with blue-green, and finished with a narrow, multi-colored upholsterers' fringe. A large, comfortable arm chair, upholstered in the flowered chintz, is accompanied by a low table, which holds books and a lamp. Deep red pottery lamps, on commodes at each side of the bed, have parchment shades. Plain blue-green chenille, in a deep, dark tone, covers the floor.

American colonial furniture, in a modern adaptation, furnishes the young daughter's room. The wall paper shows tiny sprigs of flowers on a pale gray ground. Woodwork is ivory. At the windows are ivory silk gauze glass curtains. Producing an unusual effect are overdraperies of silk gauze, showing fairylike rainbow colors in an ombré treatment. They are finished at the edges with a French ribbon trim. Wooden cornices topping these draperies are painted leaf green, outlined with a fine band of straw color and decorated with floral medallions.

The bed and one chair are painted in the same way. Plain leaf green sateen, piped with straw color, and finished with straw colored ruchings, makes the bed cover. Except for the bed and chair, the remainder of the furniture is made of maple. Leaf green wool chenille rugs are used.

Gray Hair Tinted FOR 50¢

Why pay $10 to the hair dresser?

In JUST 5 Minutes

Don't throw your money away by needlessly paying from ten to fifteen dollars to a hairdresser to restore your gray, faded, or dingy hair to its youthful shade and lustre. Every woman can now immediately bring back the original color to her hair right in the privacy of her own home—for a few cents.

BROWNATONE, the one guaranteed harmless hair tint, in just five minutes, will transform gray or streaky hair to any beautiful shade that you favor. And there isn't the slightest danger of poisoning, which sometimes results from the harmful dyes used by many professionals. Just sit before your dressing table and brush BROWNATONE through the gray strands. Immediately the color will start to develop. Even your closest friends will be unable to detect that your hair is tinted.

BROWNATONE is so perfect—so precise in shade—so easy to apply—permeates gray hair in such a natural way—that without any previous experience, you are sure to obtain professional results.

They Say:

"I can recommend BROWNATONE in the highest terms. It is easily the best thing for the purpose that I ever used." — Mrs. C. E. Goodlet, Strother, S. C.

"I never found its equal for tinting hair and stopping hair from falling out. I have used BROWNATONE about ten years and can give it a 100 percent endorsement." — H. Butterbaugh, Commodore, Pa.

BROWNATONE is guaranteed harmless to hair, scalp or skin. It is so scientific in formula that self hair tinting treatments cannot be discovered in strongest lights—even in sunlight. It is the one bottle preparation that does not require the use of harmful peroxide, which must first be applied with many hair coloring preparations.

Test it for yourself. You will be amazed and delighted at the marvelous results you will so easily obtain. Any shade desired from two colors. (Blonde to Medium Brown), (Dark Brown to Black). Sold Back Guarantee. At toilet counters. Two and $1.50—the larger size containing five times as much.

Obtainable on Money Back Guarantee at drug and toilet counters. Two sizes: 50c, and $1.50—the larger size containing five times as much.

Easy to Apply, Wonderful in Results

BROWNATONE penetrates all of the hair. It does not wash off—will not fade or rub because the hair absorbs it. Only one application is necessary. It permits waving, marcelling, curling, shampooing and is even unaffected by perspiration. Further applications needed only as new hair grows.

MY GREATEST THRILL—A Boy's Lucky Break

My Greatest Thrill

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter, we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

A Practical Joker.

I was visiting my girl friend whose brother is a great cut-up and keeps the family in round eyed terror of his next prank. We were sitting up late telling ghost stories and weird tales and finally Gracie and I went upstairs to bed. We felt our way along the dark hall and into the bedroom where we groped around for the chain that pulls the electric light.

Suddenly my fingers clutched something soft and warm and furry. With a wild scream I fled from the room and down stairs with Gracie tearing along behind me, sobbing at some unknown danger. Terrified, we waited while the family investigated.

Result: Brother had tied a dead mouse to the light cord with a fancy red ribbon! I. S. J.

In a Runaway Car.

By far the "greatest thrill" of my life occurred last summer while visiting some friends in Denver. We had motored to the mountains and spent a wonderful day and were returning by way of Bear Creek canyon in the evening. The driver was having trouble with the car when a motor cop stopped to help us, and suggested pushing the machine over the edge of a descent and that the momentum of the car would start the engine.

Well, it did, but imagine our horror when we found the driver had no control of the car. The brakes wouldn't work, a rear hub was broken and we were a runaway machine with the mountains on one side, the canyon 2,000 feet deep on the other, a sharp curve about 100 yards ahead—every revolution of the wheels taking us nearer to certain death.

I covered my eyes for the end, but Fate was kind, for the driver, seeing a little jut in the side of the mountain, managed to turn the car in and the impact killed the engine. We were saved. K. C.

Working on the Railroad.

Years ago I was working for a short while with a gang of hobos laying steel on a railroad between St. Louis and Cape Girardeau.

On my first morning the boss sent a number of us up the track with a half dozen steel rails on a push car. One of the men was supposed to have charge of the rest of us.

The region was hilly and the road rather crooked, so that you could not see far up the track. Presently we were startled by the whistle of a freight train and at the same time we saw it rounding the curve altogether too close for comfort.

The "straw" boss rushed forward, frantically waving a red flag. There was nothing for the rest of us to do but scatter, which we did like scared chickens.

We left the push car and steel rails on the track. I climbed over the right of way fence and did not feel safe till quite a way beyond it. I never expected anything any more in my life than I did to see those freight cars pile up on top of one another and come rolling down the embankment.

The engineer set the brakes hard and he and the fireman got down on the lower steps of the engine ready to jump. The engine hit the push car, shoving it along ahead. Some of the rails got jammed through the bars of the pilot and got tangled up in the machinery of the engine. One rail was bent like a fish hook. But the engine did not leave the track and it presently came to a stop. It was disabled, though, and another had to be sent for to take the train on.

As one engineer expressed it, "A fellow thinks some pretty d——d funny things when something of this kind is about to happen." C. J. B.

In a Storm.

My greatest thrill happened about four years ago. I went boat riding with a friend of mine who was eight years older than I. We started up the river and had gone about two miles when a storm came up.

I became frightened and hollered. In a few minutes the wind blew the boat over, throwing us in the stream. I could not swim, but my friend could swim a little. He grabbed hold of me, but the wind was so strong he could not make much headway. He managed to get hold of a floating log and by this method we were both saved. R. J. H.

Child in a Runaway.

My friend, who lives on a farm, asked me to take charge of her four year old child at her home while she and her husband went to the city for a day. The little boy asked for permission to ride into the corn field with the hired man as had been his habit of doing.

The man lifted the child on the wagon and stepped back to pick up his gloves which he had dropped. The horses suddenly became frightened and started running wildly down the lane.

My greatest thrill was one of terror to see the child intrusted to my care being carried swiftly down the road and expecting any moment to see him fall and be run over, or to have the wagon strike a stump and turn over on the child. Grateful indeed was I to see the little boy running to meet me uninjured after the team had been caught. L. M. W.

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the

by SARA MOORE

CALLED!

He was a gay philanderer;
Primrose the paths he tarried;
Wooing all beauty ardently;
Sighing—"If I weren't married."

Now is the rascal well reformed—
Simple the fact that forced him—
Dares he no pleasant dalliance,
Now that his wife's divorced him.

ROUTINE.

Do not let my quick retreat
Chill you or dismay you;
I admit that in the end
I shall not gainsay you.
Never fear that I intend
You shall be rejected;
I'm compelled to be as shy
As you, sir, expected.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

HE'S JESTING.

[I hope the more rounded figure becomes the standard of fashion . . . and that women hasten that time by dressing to enhance, not to hide, their curves.—Paul Poiret, dressmaker, to Liberty.]

While not disputing there are points
To favor forms with subtle curve,
Girls cannot follow Paul's advice;
To do so takes—much more than nerve.
For, as scant fashions run today,
With neck, spine, legs, and arms revealed,
A man can see with half an eye
They've no curves left to keep concealed.

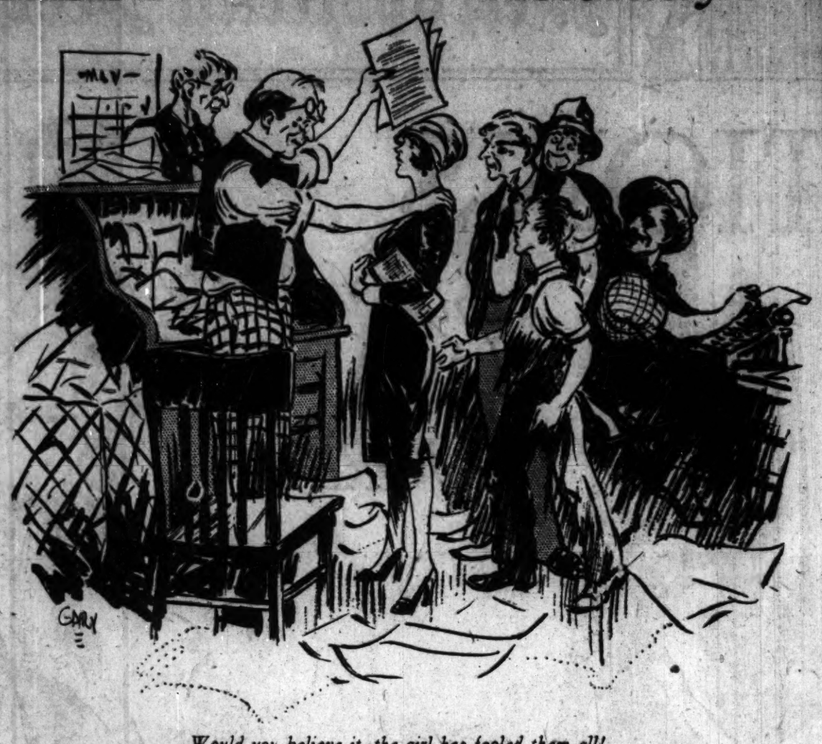
INFORMALLY—No. 1: Yesterday's Assignments - - - - - - - - By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

Reminiscences—They Make a Reporter's Life Worth Living



Would you believe it, the girl has fooled them all!

THEY'VE asked me to write a bit about the experiences of of a newspaper woman. Which is an ungallant assignment for any man to give a woman. For it is reasonable to assume that when a woman gets to that point where she begins to chart the reminiscences of the "way-back-when", days she has likewise reached that plateau of complaisancy where tea rests her. I hate tea.

But I like reminiscences.

They are a generous portion of the law of compensation operative in the life of a reporter, man or woman. They are the rhetorical recompenses for many an hour in the rain, for many a door banged in the face, for many an icy word from many an important sub-secretary. And the further into the past the reminiscences retreat, the brighter they polish themselves, until they are likely to make of the teller of the tale, a story book hero, or a cinema heroine, with a routine daily dozen of scoops.

THE STORY BOOK HEROINE

But my autobiographical recollections can't be like that.

I never won the war with any desk sergeant in any police station.

I never got a confession from any beauteous woman who had just murdered her husband.

And never, so long as I live, shall I be able, by glimpsing the right side of a man's nose, to tell whether he poisoned the girl, or just happened to cross the lawn the moment she swallowed it.

Nor was my first assignment that brilliant success they tell about in classes of journalism.

In the story books, I believe, the girl reporter, seeking a job, importunes the managing editor. She is usually an enigmatic combination of a wistful wisp of a girl and a valiant soul who says, with quiet determination, "Mr. Editor, I can do anything a man can do." But the story book managing editor is unmoved. He leaves her sitting out in the corridor, on such a hard wooden bench.

Next day she returns and the next day and the next.

THE GAL FOOLS 'EM

Along about the fourth day (this is in the story book, or the motion picture) the young heroine is again sitting on the hard wooden bench. The managing editor, thinking forever to cure the girl of a longing for newspaper work, gives her an assignment. It's a tough one. So tough that all the veteran men on the staff have tried and failed. The stern managing editor hands it out, with malicious quietness, to the combination Pollyanna and female Mussolini who sharpens her pencil and starts away.

An hour passes, two, three. Presently, along about time for the deadline for the first edition, our little heroine walks into the office. All the boys are laughing, for they know the plot. But the girl fools them. She sits down before a desk, pounds gently along on the caligraph. Then, nonchalantly, she takes her pieces of copy paper over to the managing editor's desk, and places them there.

The mandging editor—and this is usually a splendid scene in the films—jumps up, and jumps around, and expresses all manner of surprised delight. Would you believe it, the gal has fooled them all! She has beaten the veteran reporters, who remember the horse car days. She has scooped the opposition. She has got the diary, or the letters, or the confession, or the interview with the governor, or whatever it was they had given her, as a joke on her. Her story makes page one; it carries the eight column line. Her name, in letters that look as large as the ones that spell out "Soda" in the electric sign across the street from the newspaper office, strides its prideful way across the page.

And that is the girl reporter, in the story book; on the screen.

A MINOR POET

It's a little bit different in Chicago.

For instance, take the case of the newspaper woman whom I know best. Her first assignment didn't hit the front page. It hit a commodious waste basket. This task was to interview a very, very minor British poet who was tarrying the day in the city. He was so minor that he was intrusted to this reporter.

On her way to the interview at the Stratford hotel [if that dates the story at all] this reporter's chief concern was not journalistic, but social. Her motivating thought was not, "Shall I ask him what he thinks of the Spencerian stanza, and short skirts for women?" It was, rather, a perpetual refrain of "I wonder if he'll come down to the lobby or if I'll have to go up to his suite."

He came down.

The reporter had nothing specific to ask the minor poet.

The minor poet has nothing to say to the reporter.

And they both worked at it for hours.

PLENTY OF NOTES

It takes no school of journalism to teach any person, artist, artisan, reporter or carpenter, that he minimizes his opportunity for a free flow of speech if he takes incessant notes, and obviously, on everything his interviewee says. But this reporter didn't even know that simple, universal rule of psychology.

Every time the minor British poet cleared his throat or said the city was "wonderful," she scribbled it down. Two pencil points were worn down, and all the note paper covered with notes. Then she left. She walked lotlily down Michigan boulevard, trying not to feel too important.

She heard some one coming along from behind. She felt some one touch her sleeve. There stood the very, very minor British poet. His hands were filled with pieces of yellow copy paper, all written over with pencil. She had left her notes in the lobby of the Stratford hotel, and another piece of great literature was nearly lost, but for the enterprise and fast walking of the poet.

The reporter stuck the notes in her purse and hurried back to the office. She began to write, and write. At last this unabridged encyclopedia of the poet's life and thoughts was finished and turned in. The girl reporter—not, you understand, of the movies or of the story book—went home, confident that journalism had a new lease on life. Next morning she got the paper early. Her story wasn't on the front page, but there was a lot of foreign news about wars and things there. Nor on the second page, but perhaps the important trial had shoved it away from that space.

It wasn't on the third page, nor the fourth, nor the fourteenth. Back she went, to the steamship sailings and the obituary notices. But there wasn't a sentence nor a syllable about the minor, the very minor British poet written by the minor, very minor girl reporter.

She began to write, and write.

AN IRISH IMMIGRANT

Sometimes, even a long time after your first assignment, it's something more direct than a mute waste basket which puts the chill into the fiction of "experiences of a newspaper woman."

There was that brisk appraisal which I received from a "lady" friend of mine in the steerage of a trans-Atlantic steamer, and which I hope I shall never forget.

I was in the steerage, America bound with a hundred or so Irish girls and several hundred continental immigrants, in order that I might see just what happened to the immigrants on their trip across, and at Ellis Island. There was only one way to do it. That was to be an immigrant.

I should have liked to have gone as a Swedish immigrant, but I'm not a blonde. Or a French girl, but my French is my own, and nobody else could understand it. And so, for one reason or another, I had to be an immigrant from an English speaking country. I chose Ireland. I elected the rôle of hired girl. Not of governess or nursemaid; of cook or housemaid or domestic, but, quite simply, of a hired girl.

I well knew that in an assignment like that a little conversation was likely to be a dangerous thing, and greater loquacity a very bad thing. So I didn't grow too confidential during those twelve days.

JULIA'S AMBITIONS

The five girls who shared with me our tiny cabin were so full of their plans and ambitions for America that I listened with but slight obligation to speak. Particularly voluble was Julia. Lovable, aggressive, courageous Julia. She was 17; had worked for many years on a farm in Ireland; was bound for domestic service in the states. Julia had three mighty ambitions she hoped to realize in the land that was shadowed by the statue of liberty.

First of all, Julia wanted a hair net. Again, to date the story, it was in the days when bobbed hair, down in the steerage, meant only one thing. And that one thing was a mandate from the ship's doctor and nurse after they had examined the scalp. So Julia had long, curly hair, and she wanted an American hair net to plaster over her curls.

Second, Julia longed for a fur coat. Back home her earnings had been about $4 a month, she told me and that didn't leave much of a margin for a fur coat.

Third—and this was Julia's almost prayerful wish—she wanted a gold tooth.

Knowing Julia as well as I got to in those twelve days, I am greatly sure that in these five years she has bought dozens of hair nets. Only she probably has a shingle bob now. I believe, too, that her imitative [illegible] something better, with, perhaps, a summer fur thrown in. And, if she wants it, I know she has a gold tooth.

WASN'T A LADY

But it was not Julia, nor any of my cabin mates who put me, as I stand out to say, definitely, bluntly in my niche. Fearful of too much conversation, I was especially on my guard when I came near Mrs. Casey, for she was the ship's volunteer news service. She wanted to know everything about everybody and had a nearly 100 per cent record. It was she, not I, who should have been the reporter.

For several days I had evaded her happy interrogatories. At last she cornered me. I knew I was homesick and thought I was going to be seasick, so there wasn't much fight in me, and she found me an easy victim.

"And what do you do for a living, my dear?" she queried.

Without a moment's hesitation, I remembering my credentials, said:

"Me? O, I'm a hired girl."

Mrs. Casey's face lighted. Her mouth curved into an ecstatic smile. Her eyes danced. She was pleased through and through.

"A hired girl. A hired girl," she mouthed the words lovingly as she went on. "I knew it, I knew it. My daughter thought you were a lady, but I just knew you weren't."

LITTLE TALES of BIG HEADS

What's your pet little tale of a Big Head? Send it to Big Heads, Sunday Tribune, and we'll pay you $1 if we print it.

One of the Few!

Dorothy was entertaining a group of young girls at her home. Suddenly she announced, "I'm going to put on my new dress that I bought at a sale yesterday and see what you think of it."

Presently she appeared clad in an attractive and becoming frock, which the girls frankly admired.

"It cost only eight dollars!" she gleefully declared. Several of her friends declared their intention of trying to get one, also.

"I am never lucky enough to get a readymade dress becoming and cheap like that," modestly admitted a pretty young girl.

"Of course not, few girls can," promptly conceded Dorothy. "It's impossible unless you happen to have an unusually good figure like mine. I never have the least trouble in getting lovely readymade garments ridiculously reasonable!" F. J.

And She Meant It.

One day my girl friend and I were talking about the prom dance. The boy she liked had invited another girl to it, which made her quite jealous.

After a while she remarked to me that she thought he had only invited the other girl because he was under obligation to her. When I asked her why she thought this, she said "well you know I am so popular all the boys would ask me, only they had to invite somebody else."

And she meant it, too! E. S.

Perfectly Satisfied.

A friend of mine is constantly congratulating herself on how she grew the present styles with her shapely limbs. We who are not so amply endowed are never allowed to forget it. overwhelmingly she excels from toe to toe.

Recently, when shopping with her I noticed a run, rapidly developing into a good sized hole, in her stocking. With a shrug she explained the cause by remarking, "O, I get them often. People LOOK holes in my hose."

F. A. S.

Her Custom.

Recently I was a bride and, as is usual, my girl friends gave me a bridal shower.

I thanked the girls for their kind remembrances, but one girl wasn't there, so I called her on the phone and expressed my gratitude for her gift.

She added, "Why, I always give the best presents at showers and I never give anything cheap." T. H.

The Long, Narrow Foot

Feet of this type are supple and stretchy.

Ordinary types of shoes are seldom comfortable for they usually prove too full through the waist and instep, allowing the foot to work forward, cramping the toes, slipping at the heel.

SAM 'N' HENRY

By Correll & Gosden

The Sad Morning After the Glad Night Before!

[After an evening of cabareting Sam and the Most Precious Diamond (the high officer of the colored frozerusa, "Jewels of the Crown") returned to Sam and Henry's room in high spirits. Henry finally persuaded the boys to go to bed, and now we find them the morning after the night before. It is 7:30 a. m. and the three boys are sleeping peacefully. . . . The alarm clock rings.]

HENRY—Cut dat thing off—CUT DAT THING OFF! SAM! Cut dat thing off! (Henry jumps out of bed.) I'll do it; I'll do it. (He stops the alarm clock.) Sam! Sam! Git up! SAM! (Sam sleeps peacefully on.) It's six-thirty. Git on down an' hitch dat hoss up. (Sam doesn't move.) A'right—lay dere now an' I'm gonna pour some watch on yo'. Sam! GIT UP FROM DERE! (Shakes Sam.) Git—git—GIT UP from dere! SAM!

Sam—Henry, I'm sick.

Henry—Yo' ought to be sick. Git up from dere.

Sam—O, Henry—my head.

Henry—Don' start no argument now. Git up. It's six-thirty an' we gotta 'git to work heah.

Sam—Henry, who's dis in bed heah wid me?

Henry—Dat's de Mos' Precious Diamon'.

Sam—Git up, Diamon'; git up.

Henry—Oh-oh.

Sam—Dis ain't yo' wife, Diamon'. Dis heah's me—I'se sick.

Diamond—Who is ME?

Henry—Listen, Diamon'; yo' betteh git up. Yo' wife is worried 'bout yo'—maybe.

Diamond—Where is my wife?

Henry—She ain't heah. She's home, I guess.

Diamond—Jus' so she ain't heah—let her worry.

O-O-OH, HENRY!

Sam—O-o-o-h, Henry, I'm sick, Henry. Do sompin' fo' me, will yo'?

Henry—I'll bus' yo' in de head, dat's what I'll do.

Sam—Henry, my head, Henry. My head is killin' me.

Henry—Now, yo' betteh git up like I tell yo' to do. Yo' gotta hitch up de hoss an' git out an' go to work.

Sam—Diamon', is yo' sick, too?

Diamond—Is any wateh 'round heah anywhere?

Henry—Ain't no wateh 'round heah. A'goin' dress.

Sam—Henry, do me a favor, will yo'?

Henry—Whut yo' want me to do? I'se gotta git out an' go to work.

Sam—Henry, go down an' hitch up dem hoss an' go ovah to de depot an' git dem trunks fo' me, will yo'?

Henry—I'm gonna dress an' go down to de corner an' git sompin' to eat. Git up an' dress an' hitch up de hoss yo'self.

(The telephone rings.)

Henry—Who in de world is callin' up heah at dis hour?

Sam—If dat's de 'larm clock ringin', Henry, cut it off.

Henry—Dat's de telephone ringin'.

Sam—Answer de telephone, yill yo'?

Henry—Answer it yo'self. Git up out o' de bed an' answer de telephone.

Sam—I'll git up, den, Henry. O-o-o, my head. Henry, it's 'bout to kill me.

Henry—Oh-oh.

Sam (speechless)—Awa—awa——

Diamond—Don' let her know I'se heah.

Sam (excited and repeating)—Don' let her know he's heah. Wait a minute dere; wait a minute. (To Henry) Henry, I'se sick. Talk to de lady.

Henry—I'se dressin'. I ain't goin' talk to her. Talk to her yo'self.

Diamond—Now, wait a minute, boys. If my ol' lady knows I'm oveh heah she'll come oveh heah an' beat all three of us. Tell her dat yo' ain't seen me.

Sam (as Henry slams the door and leaves)—Henry, don' leave me heah. O-o-o-o-oh, Henry, I'se sick.

Cathedral of Cologne Installs Loud Speakers

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COLOGNE.—The cathedral of Cologne, a favorite spot with sightseers, and one of the oldest and most impressive of Europe's magnificent churches, has succumbed to the march of progress and now has an innovation lacking in some of the most modern houses of worship.

Twenty-two loud speakers have been installed throughout the cathedral, so that worshipers in the most remote corners of the building hear distinctly every word that is spoken from the pulpit and every hymn that is sung.

In line with this a London pastor announces the advent of "canned choirs." With the recent improvements in gramophones and the wide range of sacred music on records, he has decided to put the cassocks and surplices back in the cedar chest and pick his choirs from the best organizations in the world via the record.

Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen:-

We want you to know that the new Metropolitan Section of your Sunday Paper which we have been using for our advertisements since its inception, has helped us materially to show the greatest gains in the history of this business for the period from February 1st to May 1st.

Nothing can stop the growth of the outlying business sections, but that growth will be materially greater in those sections where the merchants use the columns of the Sunday Tribune to reach practically every home in the district from which they draw business.

The present make up of this section is very good, and we hope that you will continue and add to the interesting features that are now making it more popular each issue.

Very truly yours,

LOREN MILLER & COMPANY.

Loren Miller

I.M*HD

LOREN MILLER and Company, uptown Chicago's big department store, are well experienced in the use of newspaper advertising. They have been using The Chicago Tribune for years, and making it profitable while buying the full city and suburban circulation.

Now they can buy north side city and suburban circulation only, and they have used The Tribune on this basis since the inauguration of the Metropolitan Section. Has it been profitable? Read Mr. Miller's letter:

"The new Metropolitan Section," writes Mr. Miller, "has helped us materially to show the greatest gains in the history of this business for the period from February 1st to May 1st. Nothing can stop the growth of the outlying business sections, but that growth will be materially greater in these sections where the merchants use the columns of the Sunday Tribune to reach practically every home in the district from which they draw business."

Merchants can now buy the most complete coverage available in Chicago, paying only for Sunday Tribune circulation convenient to their stores. They reach approximately a quarter of a million families—a circulation equivalent to blanketing a city of a million persons. Employ this new force—the greatest for the money outlying stores have ever had—in building your sales and profits. A Tribune man will be glad to give you all the facts.

Convincing!

A look at the circulation figures of The Sunday Tribune for the north side and suburbs should convince any merchant of the value of the Metropolitan Section to him. Just a few of the circulation figures for north side sections and suburbs:

District	Families	Sunday Tribune
Rogers Park	21,072	18,165
Edgewater	26,022	24,418
Ravenswood	34,148	29,205
Lake View	36,014	35,502
North Halsted	16,788	14,460

Suburbs	Families	Sunday Tribune
Evanston	11,044	13,765
Wilmette	2,894	2,283
Winnetka	2,187	1,903
Glencoe	1,161	1,228
Highland Park	1,992	1,718
Lake Forest	1,173	1,215

Similar ratios of coverage apply in nearly every section of Chicago and suburbs. Exact figures will be supplied on request for any of the 48 districts in Chicago, or any of the suburbs.

THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Bakrak

Fore! Our Hero Takes Up the Grand and Ancient Game

My stance was terrible.

HEAR Ye! Hear Ye! You are now about to read sumthin which you should try an remember, cause in about a 150 years from now, when I'm tha World's Champeen, you can brag to your grand-children as how you remember when the Duke took his first lesson.

At tha supper table lass Tuesday, I noticed as how tha B. and C. has got sumthin to say besides the regular "Soup should be seen, not heard," "Why didn' you wash yer hands," and "Ya got yer feet against that new table again."

Well, here's tha dirt. Seems as how Mrs. Mudge was paying a call in the afternoon and she has taken up golf. She just loves the pastime and couldn' tha B. and C. induce me to take up the game so as the 4 of us could go out from time to time and play.

A DELICATE MATTER

Right off the bat I told the mama that there's not a chance, and I cood give her a dozen reasons, but that one reason was enough. This excuse don't call for the other eleven, and should be listed in the financial embarrassment column. I tried to explain that you got to join a club, buy equiptment in tha way of clubs, and clothes, and stock a nineteenth hole. Then I get told that Mrs. Mudge has already spoken of the matter to John and we could be their guests until such time as we decided we liked tha sport.

If I do happen to get a kick out of the thing I certainly wood be damn foolish to admit it if John's gonna foot tha bills. Ennyway tha B. and C. has made up my mind and it's all set that I meet John at half past one Saturday and give the other members a lot to laugh about and also a excuse for trying out any new cuss words which they are trying to master.

HARD ON RETAILERS

Some birds don't believe in ever giving a retailer a chance. This is not my idea of fairness. When I called up my friend Buchanan, who incidentally has got a drag where he even gets his razor blades wholesale, and asked him if he could give me a card to some guy fer a wholesale golf outfit, he says, "Sure, any particular firm you want to go to?" I told him I wood naturally prefer one where he's got a charge account.

The bird what waited on me was very pleasant. This made me a little suspisicious as to whether both he and Buckie wasn't hookin on a few bucks fer themselves. Ennyway before I left I was tha possessor of a set of instruments by the names of smashie, driver, brass E, kniblick, midiron, and one what he called a putter. If I don't like the sport I figger at least I can putter around the garden with this crow bar, also I was hung for a ½ dozen balls, a pair of boy's pants, long stockings, and a pair of shoes what aint gonna be worth a damn at tha office so I guess I just better like tha amusement or be out tha price of tha feet decorations.

When I got home I put on tha outfit, and if that pay check grabber of mine ever pulls a series of laughs like she did I will have her put under observation fer a cupple of weeks. While I figgerred I looked pretty nifty, she's scaring me to death with what I diagnosed as histericks.

KELLY POOL IS NO AID

Yesterday I bring all tha equiptment with me to tha office, and after John an' me had a little lunch (on him) we get in his Four-in-line an' start for tha club. On the way out he tries to give me a idea of the game, and on account I used ta be a pretty good hand at Croquet I figgerred as how in a cupple minutes of practice I wood show up a lotta guys what's been braggin' about shootin' eighty-sixes an' eighty-fours. One thing what I learned was that having a good eye playing Kelly Pool don't mean a damn thing when it comes to trying to sock one of those pock-marked overgrown moth balls.

After getting introduced to maybe forty or fifty guys in tha locker room I'm told that the first thing I wood tackle was some driving. Just then one of tha guys what I met comes over with a bottle of Scotch. Well, I passed mine up cause I ain't gonna take no chance on gettin' pinched for driving while intoxicated. If I'd known this bozo for any length of time I wood of asked fer a rain check. Next time I go out I will take a empty bottle along cause I think the gentleman felt a little bit insulted when I turned him down.

The first thing what we did was to approach what John called tha 1st hole; not seeing anything what looked like a hole I figgered, me being new at the racket, they was kidding me an' I shut up like a clam an' didn' give 'em a chance to give me the Ha! Ha! The next funny crack was, "Did I bring any tea with me?" If this outfit is so ladylike that you gotta have tea before you start I will damn soon check 'em out. Besides, coffee is what I always take.

PANTS, CHANCE, STANCE!

From then on all I hear is a lodda instructions what was all Greek to me. When I got told my stance was terrible, I didn' know fer a minute whether John said pants or chance. A stance to me meant anything from a soused mackerel to a pickled herring. Well, I get all set and believe me or not I socked that pill a city block [if I would of hit it.] On the next wallop I shaded my eyes to see how far the damn thing went and either my club is no good or that ball aint made right, cause it went about three feet in front of me, off to the left, and I hit it so it should go to the right.

About this time my real troubles start.

The red cap what was carrying the clubs should be called catty instead of caddy, as he gives me a look which was as much as to say, "They don't make 'em any dumber." After making tha 1st hole in one [hundred] I was thinking of getting even with tha club carrier by making him carry a adding machine the next time I came out.

About the fifth hole some guy in back of me started to holler "Four," guess he was tryin' to show off a bit cause I was told that that hole aint never been made in less than five. If I remembered right, it was about the 8th hole when John tells me I would come up to a water hole. I took a healthy swat and right here is where I got all full of pep cause believe me or not I went right in the middle of it. When I turned around and said "Some shot, what?" I got told that you was supposed to miss the damn thing altogether and land on the other side.

FINDS USE FOR CLUBS

Well, after 9 holes, five disgusted guys check back into the clubhouse, I was four of them and John was the fifth. We took a shower bath, which incidentally didn' get me sore, 'cause I wouldn' hafta do it when I got home. After meeting some more ginks who don't know anything to say except "How's your game?" we start back home an' I get dropped off in front of the house.

About this time my real troubles start. I was so damn stiff I could hardly climb the stairs. The B. and C. was all excited when I got in and wanted to know all about it. It took me about two minutes to tell her to put a ad in the paper an' see if we couldn' get part of our money back by selling tha equipment.

After we eat supper every bone in me ached and I said I would hafta go to bed. Then a real use for the clubs come to my mind on account of tha following conversation:

"Whatta ya mean, bed?"

"You heard me, I know your dumb but not in the ears."

"Wasn't I sitting home all day while you was havin' a swell time?"

"Swell time hell."

"Well I wanna go out tonight."

"Who's ahead of you?"

"I can't go alone."

"Who said ya couldn'?"

"I promised Mr. and Mrs. Black we would be over."

"O, now it comes out."

DUKE RULES ROOST

There comes time in every guy's life when he's just got to be tha boss in his house and I flatly refused to go.

* *

P. S. Charlie Black is a damn good Indian. If anybody knows how to make gin bucks better as him you gotta show me. We left their house about half past two.

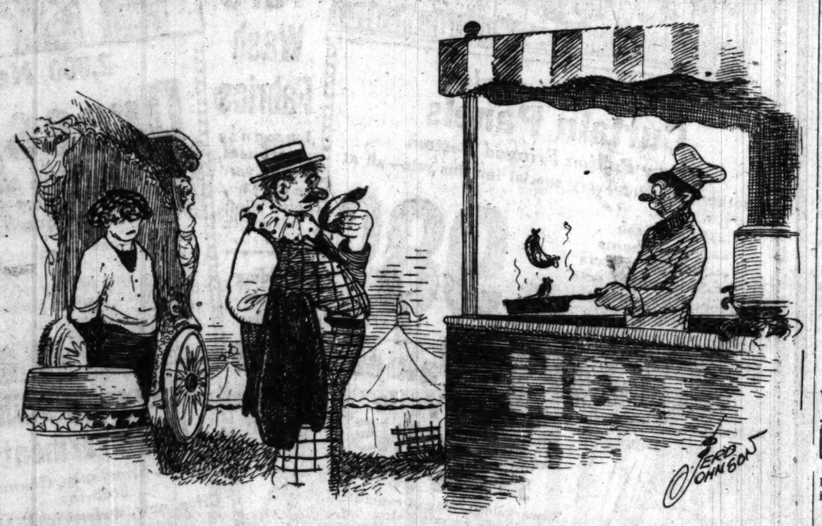
THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL

by Westbrook Pegler

Success Makes an Ingrate of a Fightin' Bum



"I will trade you my fighter on the hoof for your grease joint."

SOMETIMES I get very disgusted with the way things are going in this country, and one of the most disgusting things to me is the way people are always running around talking about success, as I have known of cases where success would change a man's character in a very disgusting way.

I have been thinking about a heavyweight bum of mine who became successful and the ungrateful way he treated me in later years has turned me against success forever.

We had a change of administration in our town some years ago, and for chief of police they put in a very ignorant man who promptly housed up a number of prominent citizens. The outrage made me so indignant that I immediately left town for a tour of the country, and a couple of weeks later I found myself in a place called Des Moines, Ia.

A $1.35 FIGHTER

One evening after I had eaten my dinner in the drug store, which was the center of the fashionable night life in this city, I discovered that I did not have any funds left, and when I stated the facts to the cashier he asserted that if I did not pay him $1.35 he would come out of his cage and cuff me around.

"Well," I replied, tactfully, "I am not a fighter myself, but I can lick any $1.35 fighter in the world with a bowl of hot soup in one hand. But if you are a real fighter, I will just put the halter on you and take you around the country and we will both make some funds."

This chump was a big skinny bum, but his hand would cover the top of a keg and he weighed about 185 pounds, so I thought he might be good enough to keep me going until the right minded citizens at home could turn the new chief of police around and see what was on his price tag. So I halted the party.

"You're on the pay roll," I said to him. "Have you got any money?"

He had about $150, which he had saved to pay for a correspondence course in prize fighting, but I changed these plans and we went to Kansas City.

NO BUSINESS

Owing to conditions, we did not get any work in this town and after a time we did not have any funds left. I am not given to boasting about my courage, but I will state that I was so desperate that I would willingly have let my bum fight the champion of the world for $50.

"Get me the toughest bum you can find," I said to the promoter. "I am not afraid to let my chump fight anybody."

Still we could not get any business, and naturally I was feeling very discouraged when I returned to the hotel last night. As I am in the habit of carrying large sums of dough, I always pack a shooting pistol, and when I came into the room I unstrapped the shooter and laid it on the bureau. Then I lay down in the bed with my face toward the wall, as I was very tired, and I said to my bum:

"Well, there isn't any sugar in the bowl tonight so it's up to you to go out and get us some eating dollars by some honest means or another."

When I looked up my bum was gone and my shooter was missing, but I am strictly honest by nature, and I only thought he had taken the shooter along to protect his funds from lawless characters after he procured the eating dollars. And, naturally, when he came back in an hour with about $300, I did not ask any questions. In fact, I did not have any evil thoughts even when the morning papers printed an article stating "fashionable crap game held up by large sized gunman." But inasmuch as we were making no progress, I thought it would be an injustice to the boy's career to keep him there any longer, so we went to Bartlesville, Okla.

STILL NO SUSPICIONS

There was a circus playing in this town, and on our way out to the grounds a policeman asked me if we had come from Kansas City. Thinking they might be looking for some criminal and not wishing to become the victim of a mistake in identity, I said we had just come from Fort Smith, so the policeman apologized and said he was looking for the large sized gunman who robbed the crap game in Kansas City.

Still I did not have any suspicions, but I was beginning to wonder if I was standing in the way of my bum's advancement, and I was asking myself this question when I stopped at a grease joint to eat a frankfurter. These joints are called grease joints because they sell strictly hygienic frankfurters stuffed with sanitary sawdust and sage instead of pork, which is likely to be unhygienic, and as there is no fat in the sawdust, it is necessary for the proprietor to grease the stove with a rag all the time. There are so many joints allowed on the circus lot and you have to own a sort of franchise or the circus management will take steps.

TRADES HIS FIGHTER

As I was eating my frankfurter the proprietor remarked that he was tired of the spangles and the tinsel of circus life and wished to enter some honest, sedate profession, so I said to him:

"Do you see that big, clean cut athletic lad over there? Well, he is the coming heavyweight champion and I am his manager, but I have always longed for a circus career, so I will trade you my fighter on the hoof for your grease joint."

The proprietor was game, so I called my bum over and made the trade, and you may imagine my surprise and sorrow a few days later when I read an article stating that the police had sent my bum back to Kansas City for robbing that crap game.

I followed the grease business for several seasons, and one spring a new heavyweight champion bobbed up. I had not been following the bums very closely, so I was astonished to see by his picture that he was my old bum, under the management of the man who sold me the grease joint.

Naturally, after winning the championship, this bum did not wish to fight any more, and just before the season began he joined our circus.

DISGUSTED WITH SUCCESS

And now I will tell you how success makes ingrates of people and you will understand why I have been turned against success forever. Because the first thing that ungrateful bum did was to have the manager of the circus run my grease paint off the lot and put an old pal out of business.

Success had completely changed the character of a fine, generous boy, and that is why I say it disgusts me to hear people running around talking about what a fine thing success is.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

A Hermit's a Guy Wot Looks at a Dame an' Picks a Dog

By Snowshoe Al,

A COUPLE uv days ago me an' Mickey Flynn went squirrel hunting. We headed for a large tract uv timber wich is several miles frum town an' wich is called The Haunted Woods, probably due to the fact that no squirrels ever haunted it. We figured that out ourselves after searching all morning for the galloping nut-crackers. Jist as we wuz ready to beat it for home a big rainstorm came up.

"There's a hermit wot lives in theez woods sumplace," sez Mr. Flynn; "let's find his joint before we git drowned."

DIZZIEST LOOKIN' GUY

We searched around until we found a tiny clearing, in the middle uv wich wuz a cabin. By that time the sky wuz spilling grief-water in over-doses, so we galloped up to the door uv the cabin an' knocked plenty.

"If that's a woman, go away!" howls a voice.

"Well, aint yew the conceited cuss!" squawks Mickey; "I'll bet chorus girls jist hammer on yer door all day long."

"Aha, a man's voice!" sez Mr. Hermit; "nobody can say that Big-hearted Ben turned men frum his door in a storm. Kum in!"

That hermit wuz the dizziest looking hunk uv humanity wot ever rolled a cigarette. He had so much whiskers that he looked like an advertisement for cough drops. Also, he wuz fat, dirty an' gloomy. His clothes wuz so old he must have inherited them frum either the last uv the Aztecs or the first uv the Pharaohs. He wuz standing by the stove, watching sum object wich wuz boiling in a kettle. Strange odors issuou forth frum that kettle. They wuz worse than strange—they wuz punk.

A BIRD ON THE STOVE

"D'yuh mind if we stay here long enough to git dry?" sez I; "we'll beat it as soon as it stops raining, because I've always heard that hermits don't exactly yearn for company."

"Sit down," sez he, so we parked our carcasses on a bench by the stove.

"Wot in gawd's name are yew cooking?" asks Mickey, holding his nose.

"A bird," sez Big-hearted Ben, stirring the object with a stick.

"I didn't know that polecats had wings," sez Mr. Flynn.

"Wot kind uv a bird?" sez I to the hermit.

"Dam if I know," sez he; "I thought at first it wuz an eagle; then I decided it wuz a hawk; now I think it's a buzzard."

"Did yew shoot him?" I asks.

"Certainly I shot him," sez the hermit; "did yew think I climbed a tree an' bit him to death?"

"On the contrary," sez I, "I thought maybe yew wuz digging a hole an' found him. At least he smells that way to me."

Big-hearted Ben poked the bird several times with the stick an' then removed the kettle frum the stove.

"I think he's done," sez he; "I hope so—I'm gitting tired uv cooking him. I've bin boiling the sun-uv-a-gun for 4 days."

"I think anybody wot eats him is also done," sez Mickey; "that dodo bird wuz in its second childhood wen King Tut wuz rolling a hoop."

"How did yew happen to bekum a hermit, Ben?" asks I, offering him a plug uv tobacco, wich he grabbed. Then he sat down an' wiped a tear frum his eye.

IT'S A SAD STORY

"It's a sad story," sez he. "I wuz once a lion tamer in a circus, an' had all kinds uv money. I wuz absolutely fearless, I wuz, an' my favorite stunt wuz to stick my head in a lion's mouth an' then kick him in the ribs. It brot thunderous applause!"

"Big Boy, yew must have bin good," sez I; "rave on, Ananias!"

"Well, boys," sez Ben, "everything wuz going swell until a female calamity, who traveled with the circus, decided that I'd make a good husband. I didn't wanta git married, I wuz perfectly happy the way I wuz, but she made life miserable for me by telling everybody that we wuz gonna git married. She had a trapeze act, an' I used to watch her an' wish she wood fall an' break her contract."

"Maybe it wuz yer money she wanted," sez Mickey.

"I don't think so—I wuz pritty good looking," sez he; "never-the-less, this damsel bothered me so much that at last I moved my baggage into the lions' cage an' had my meals an' mail brot to me. I even slept in the cage. It got to a point where the lions began to sympathize with me, an' wenever they saw this dame kumming towards the cage they wood knock me down an' push me under the bed."

"Wonderful co-operation!" sez I.

"Yup," sez he, "but one morning the circus broke up an' I lost my job, so I had to kum out uv the cage. She got me!" He wiped sum more tears frum his lampa.

SHE GETS HIM

"Aw, ain't that a shame!" sez us.

"Well, boys," sez Ben, "we rented a little furnished house an' got married. Two minutes after we got hooked the trouble started. After we came out uv the church we climbed into a taxi an' started for home. On the way home I gits one uv them blue melancholy feelings so I knocks her off the seat. She picks herself up an' sez I didn't have no reason for hitting her. It got me sore to have her question my judgment, so I socks her an' knocks her off the seat again. Wen we gits in the house she handed me a dirty look so I socks her again. After that we didn't speak to each other for 3 days."

"Did yew hit her during that time?" sez I.

"Jist once," sez he, "to let her know I wuz still mad at her. However, being one uv them guys wot can't carry a grudge forever, I decided to let by-gones be by-gones, so at last I walks up to her an' sez, 'Well, kiddo, I am now ready to forgive yew.' Wot do yuh think she did, boys? Wot do yuh think that bimbo did?"

"She kissed yew!" howls us.

"±%$$±%&$$!!!" roars the hermit; "she busted a broom on my bean, that's wot she did! Can yew imagine it? Me, Big-hearted Ben, goes up an' offers to forgive her an' she socks me over the hat-rack with a broomstick!"

"Can it be possible that any woman kood be so narrow minded!" we squawks.

A WOLF IN LINGERIE

"I tell yuh, I wuz taken by such conduct," sez he. "so I rebuked her——"

"How?" sez I.

"With 3 chairs," sez he, "although the first one missed her by a mile. Then she pulled a stunt wot almost broke my tender heart to think that any woman kood have such a terrible burst uv temper. She beat me up!"

"Migawd! A wolf in sheep's lingerie!" wails Mickey.

"Yup," agrees Ben. "Then she went to work in a restaurant. A couple uv weeks later she insisted that I also try an' find work. This hurt my feelings, so after another battle wich I lost via the knock-out route, I goes out an' gits me a job selling lots for a sub-division outfit. Three months later, during wich time my original cash had dwindled away, she got after me for not making any sales yet. How kood I help it? My prospect had changed his mind, deggone him, after me working 90 days on him. If I had landed that guy I wood have dragged down over 32 bucks commission. So I told my wife that I wood rest for a few weeks an' then attempt to locate another prospect. Two minutes later I got hit in the teeth with my suitcase, an' wus told to float away because she wus tired uv trying to support both uv us. That's the last I ever saw uv her. Woman's inhumanity to man is unbelievable! I never want to see another dame as long as I live. Never git married, boys. Take Big-hearted Ben's advice. Theez squaws are too narrow minded!"

He put 3 plates on the table an' drags the bird over. It wood'nt have bin polite to refuse to eat, so we decided to tackle the dodo.

"Lissen," sez I a minute later, "I still claim this boiled ostrich tastes punk. I'm willing to believe yew shot him, but wen did yew shoot him?"

"In March," sez Ben; "he kept pritty good, didn't he?"

WANT YOUR WAREHOUSE ROBBED?

More Sidelights on Prohibition

By Edward Burns.

THERE'S no questioning the fact that many persons actually took the Volstead act seriously for several months after the law was placed on the statute books. Like all innovations meant to be revolutionary, the dry law offered many stern mysteries to those whom its measures affected. Brave men who had large quantities of liquors on hand suddenly became panicky when they first had the opportunity to read the well chosen legal words which Mr. Volsted thought up out of his own head.

Three days after the prohibition law had been imposed upon our liberty loving nation, it became apparent that the country was suffering from a new thirst, never suspected in the wet days of the preceding week. The old philosophy of the forbidden fruit had taken hold with a vengeance. But the men who had the stuff to drink for a few hours didn't know how to proceed.

THE ANCIENT ALIBI

Then some reminiscent whisky man recalled the ancient alibi that deceitful men for years have been presenting to their wives after losing the weekly stipend in a poker game. If poker players could fool suspicious helpmeets by saying they had been held up, why couldn't a whisky man fool the government by reporting that some vile thief had robbed his warehouse?

From Jan. 16, 1920, to May 30, 1920—four months and a half—there were in Chicago 170 major booze robberies. Some of these were bona fide thefts, but a tremendous majority were the flimsiest sort of subterfuges. This rate of self-looting enterprise has not been maintained, but warehouse robberies in which those robbed did not show great grief at the loss of treasure has continued periodically all through the Volstead era.

The last notable booze robbery in Chicago was, unlike most of the preceding ones, thwarted before all the desired contraband had been removed. A few weeks ago four distinguished bootleggers were caught in the act of pumping pre-war Bourbon from a warehouse through a line of hose to a building some yards away. There were 500 barrels, worth about $2,000 each, in the warehouse when the boys started pumping. They were interrupted before they had evolved a scheme of getting 10,000 cases, valued at $140 a case, out of the place, but they had succeeded in pumping more than 100 barrels of the bulk goods.

SCHEME AN OLD ONE

In printing accounts of the thief technique—the use of hose and a pressure pump—newspapers commented on the ingenuity of these latest robbers. The scheme, however, was one of the first used as a means of cheating Volstead. In fact, it was used downstate in 1919—one month before the prohibition era began—in a $70,000 job.

In Peoria in November, 1922, the system was employed as a part of a $500,000 robbery. A former Chicago police court and divorce lawyer, who is reputed to have made from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000 out of whisky since the beginning of prohibition, relied upon his hose as a part of a plot to empty the warehouses which he bought from less eager and industrious men. The retired lawyer was not content to use manual pumps of the type generally used in warehouse robberies. He had constructed a large portable power pump which could suck out the stuff with great speed at a minimum of effort. The contrivance was so successful that he shipped it all over the middle west before it finally was seized in St. Louis.

Hidden, but permanent, pipe lines also have played a prominent part in bootleg maneuvering. This system has been particularly effective in illicit alcohol removals from legalized distilleries and real beer removals from legalized near plants.

LIQUID DIVIDENDS

During the first year of prohibition warehouse robberies enjoyed their most exclusive vogue. Later the series of robberies became interspersed with other methods, principally those having to do with fraudulent withdrawal papers or documents obtained through official irregularities or extreme generosity and leniency.

One of the first striking cases in this category was a now famous declaration of booze dividends by an old time liquor firm which desired to clean up its stores and get out of the business. The ingenious plan, as many will recall, was to sell stock in the firm. After the stock had been sold it was announced that the principal assets of the company were liquid. The firm then announced its program of dissolution and stated the assets—rare old liquors which included whiskies, vintages, rum, and cordials—would be distributed among the stockholders of the company.

The stockholders had no difficulty in getting permits to remove their potable dividends. The plan was laid out so well that prohibition agents rode the trucks. Motorcycle policemen, who were voted dividends of from five to ten cases, acted as convoys to help guard the stocks from hijackers.

A trial followed, in which the prohibition director in office at the time of the distribution, a former judge, a banker, and several others were the defendants. The jury could not see that there had been any intent to circumvent the Volstead act and so voted a verdict of not guilty.

Among the stockholders was a former Chicago alderman, who received booze dividends valued at $90,000. He was more careless than a certain high Cook county official and other stockholders and did not conceal the storage place where he had placed his booze dividends. After more than three years of legal skirmishing the former alderman's property finally was destroyed by the government.

THE LANCASTER CASE

Another notable case where government documents were manipulated, involved the withdrawal of $900,000 worth of whisky from a government concentration depot in Chicago. Most of the whisky, which was in bottles, bore the brand "Lancaster," a standard Bourbon for many years. After the plot had been discovered the best known government investigators were sent on the trail of Lancaster. One tip led to a big south side furniture storage warehouse. A large sized, boarded off, section had been designated as the hiding place of a considerable quantity of Lancaster. Search warrants were obtained for an inspection of the premises. Among the investigators was a man who has been in the revenue department for many years. When the raiders entered the designated section of the warehouse he sniffed a highly trained sniff.

"I've been a revenooer for more than 30 years and this old nose knows. I smell Lancaster just as sure as I'm a foot high."

Thus encouraged, the raiders ripped through partitions and found nothing but vinegar. The next day, however, an operative of comparatively meager experience in government work went to the warehouse and found, in a far distant corner on another floor of the big structure, a sizeable quantity of the greatly sought Lancaster.

There was a stirring trial of a number of prominent defendants and some well known hoodlums. The prominent ones were acquitted and the hoodlums sent to jail for short terms.

ROB ARMY DEPOT

One of the most startling robberies was that of the army warehouse at Pershing road and Wood street in Chicago. The building was erected as a quartermaster's depot for this corps area, but one entire floor was rented to the treasury department as a storage place for seized liquors during the intervals that extend from the time of confiscation until cases are disposed of in court.

At the time of the robbery more than $3,000,000 worth of all kinds of rare and good liquors were stored in the warehouse. The place was supposed to be patrolled constantly by guards in the employ of the quartermaster's department. One night in November, 1924, thieves entered the place, first getting into a room partitioned off from the liquor area by heavy fireproof tile and plaster. With sledges and fire axes the thieves tore holes in the walls sufficiently large to permit the passage of hand trucks.

The amount of the loot never has been made known, but has been estimated as high as $800,000.

Of course there was a feverish investigation of the robbery, but no one ever was arrested and the matter soon was officially forgotten. The warehouse still is used as a storage place, but in the last year nothing worth stealing has been stored there with the exception of grain alcohol.

Remarkable as it may seem, there still are many thousand gallons of good whisky in warehouses. If you happen to own some of it, and haven't found a way to get it out, there still are quite a few young men to whom you can go and say: "Here are the keys to my storerooms. Don't you dare rob my warehouse at Rock and Rye streets." These young fellows are dependable business men, and you can rest assured you will get your end of the proceeds, either in merchandise or cash. And if you have enough of the stuff on hand, you can even arrange an advance payment from the men you ask to steal it.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

The Summer Ensemble Is Still Smartest When It Is Made Up of One Color, but Two Distinctly Different Shades May Be Used If One Has the Artistic Sense of the Parisienne.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS—(Special Correspondence.)—While fashion allows a great deal of liberty in assembling the ensemble this season, the surest short cut to chic is still to be found via the ensemble in one color and not more than two fabrics. Coat and dress in two tones of one color, or in two distinctly different shades, often make striking and extremely smart ensembles, but these variations always require more expertness and artistry than the single theme, and are, therefore, more dangerous.

You cannot outrage either fashion or taste if you wear an ensemble that is all one shade and one fabric, with hat and shoes to match, even if you pick bright red. Of course, this obvious color is going to become wearisome more quickly, and will be the cause of sore eyes after a bit, but the principle is good, just the same. When in doubt, select one color for your ensemble and stick to it. Don't weaken and put on a hat or trimming of something else, even if it looks charming at the moment. You'll be pleased and complimented anew for your fidelity in the long run. And Paris backs you up, too.

Two fabrics, if they match exactly, are perfect, and equally ideal if they harmonize without a single sour note. And these simple themes are never difficult, even for the eternal amateur in fashion. The hardest thing to learn in the art of dress is the assembling of the ensemble in all of its details, so that there isn't even one tiny little bit of discord anywhere. I saw a woman come into the Ritz all dressed in gray—just jersey, and the simplest of lines and cut, without any fur or expensive details—who had done her assembling without a flaw. The hat she wore was a plain gray felt, and her shoes and stockings were identical in tone with her clothes. She carried a black bag mounted with gray and wore a black chiffon flower. Nothing marvelous, you might say, in the way of color or material, but she was a delight to the eyes, and all of the blasé and dollar worn orbs there followed her, as if she was some sort of ocular medicine. She was. And she had worked, because getting together a number of articles all in one nuance of gray is a hard labor, to say nothing of choosing good lines and the right kind of materials to set off each other. It's often a rocky road to chic.

I have selected for our sketches today four ensembles that are practically mistake proof, where all of the work is done by Paris experts, as the best examples of the assembled ensemble that is worn with success by smart Parisiennes. Any of these could be worn by very different types of women with success, and they are the creation of two Paris couturiers who have unbroken records of successful ensembles for women of the world over a period of years.

A fashionable and simple color combination of navy blue and white crepe satin is used for the afternoon ensemble. Shown at the extreme left. The tunic is embroidered in silver and the coat in white.

The supremely smart street and travel ensemble is of gray-beige friska with subtle complication of cut, and trimmings of tucks and band. Shown next.

It is the clever cut of this ensemble (sketched third from the left), its graceful flaring panels, and its combination of willow green crepe satin with green silk rep that make it one of the smartest Paris summer costumes.

Last, bright navy blue jersey is a favorite fabric for the sports ensemble. The sweater of blue and gray striped jersey has a monogram in blue.

The fourth figure at the right of our sketches shows a Jean Patou ensemble that is similar to the one the gray lady wore at the Ritz. This one is also made of jersey—beautiful, unpretentious material—and the color is a bright navy. More lively than real navy, and never obtrusive. The straight coat, with its flat revers and its bias ends on the sleeves, is a flawless bit of tailoring, and harmonizes well with the box plaited skirt. The sweater, silk and wool jersey, is striped in blue to match the coat and skirt, and in gray. The flower is gray, and the hat is a toque of gray felt trimmed with a diagonal band of blue, felt also. Gray slippers and stockings. It is individual and it's also Any Woman's ensemble who has the good taste to select it.

At the other end is another ensemble for summer which is equally charming, and fully as beautiful. This is the type of costume that is elegant and also simple. Lucien Lelong created it, and it has been tested by his famous kinoptic method. The coat is of navy blue satin, with full length revers and lining of white satin and graceful sleeves which flare a bit toward the wrists. An outline design in white silk is embroidered above the hemline of the coat.

The frock that accompanies the coat is composed of a straight slip of navy blue satin over which is worn a three-quarters length tunic of white satin. The adjustable crossed bands at the square neck of this dress are in themselves an artistic creation. White satin buttons mark the closing, and a white belt with silver buckle marks the waistline. The skirt of the tunic is embroidered in silver, in a sort of drawn work pattern.

This ensemble is a two color harmony that is easy to achieve, and never unbecoming. Such an ensemble can be increased by the addition of another tunic in dark blue trimmed in white, for less formal occasions. The hat of white bakou straw is trimmed with a navy blue flower, and black patent pumps are the proper footgear.

Our second model on the left is another Lucien Lelong ensemble, for all around wear. You couldn't look anything but smart in this type of ensemble while traveling or on the street in summer. It is of gray-beige friska, the Meyer fabric that is semi-transparent, of wool and cotton and that never wrinkles or looks dowdy. Lelong has made a straight coat cleverly trimmed with curved and straight tucks that cover inset pockets at the hips.

The dress is the epitomé of chic simplicity. It is one piece and straight, with movement introduced into the skirt by a single deep box plait at the side front. The waist closes under a row of frisca covered buttons at the left side front, and the triple belts close on the right side front. A hat of beige felt, or felt straw, with a contrasting ribbon, and beige leather single strap slippers complete this outfit. This is the real Parisian chic for practical wear, with nothing of the glaring about it, and everything that is desirable to the discriminating eye.

The model next to it, for real summer wear, has every one of these same charms in the same superlative degree. There is a moving supple grace about this Jean Patou ensemble that reminds you of wistaria waving in the breeze. Patou is a master of the slender line with a certain amount of flare, and this ensemble is an example of how he handles them this season.

The coat, while slender, has slight flares at the sides, and its only trimming is stitched bands. The material is silk rep, or serge, and the color is willow green. The frock is made of the same tone in crêpe satin, and the two materials together show how delightful fabric combinations can be.

The dress suggests the higher-than-normal waistline in an upward point in the front, from which two lines of piping merge into supremely graceful flaring panels at the center front of the skirt. Panels and hemline are also piped in self-material. With such a summery ensemble, a rather large hat of crin or other very light straw is worn, trimmed simply with applique of satin. Shoes of green, beige or black may be worn, and hose of beige or gray.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

TWO piece dresses are much liked and every woman will want to have one or more in her wardrobe this summer. Pattern No. 766 is a smart but simple design and is suitable for one or two materials. The stores show beautiful printed crepes for blouses, and in a dress of this kind the skirt would be of a solid color, matching the ground of the printed crepe.

The skirt is cut in two piece and is quite plain. For size 36 it measures at the bottom about 1 1-3 yards. There are many women who like the very narrow skirts, and some who prefer having a little more width at the bottom. If you are one of the latter it may be a good idea to leave the seams open at the bottom the depth of the hem. To do this properly, find out the exact length the finished skirt will be and then clip the seam edges a little above where the hem will come. Turn one of the loose edges to the wrong side, fold exactly where the hem is to be and run a seam by hand up as far as the seam is clipped. Then turn it right side out. Do this to the four loose seam ends.

Fasten the seams well where they end, turn in the hem all around and put in by hand. This sort of an opening isn't at all noticeable—the skirt hanging together at the bottom unless in motion, and it makes walking easy.

The blouse is cut with the popular square neck, and finished with a flat trimming. A jabot at one side of the front of the blouse makes it a little different from those usually seen; and full length sleeves gathered into narrow wristbands, and a narrow belt complete the dress.

Two shades of a single color would be smart for this dress, and one of the gaily colored trimming bands could be used as a finish.

Pattern No. 767 is for a pretty little dress for a small girl. No branch of sewing is more fascinating than making pretty things for children. Any of the usual wash materials that are used for small dresses will be suitable; and it may be entirely made of one, or two may be used. There is a panel front that would be pretty made of a plain chambray, for instance—and the dress could be cut from one of the pin checked materials. The scalloped edges may be hemstitched, or a narrow, bias binding set on. The dress is cut with short kimono sleeves, finished with turned back cuffs. A collar with scalloped edge finishes the neck.

Still another way of finishing the scalloped edges would be to face the front edges, stitching on the scalloped outline, clipping the edge of each scallop and turning right side out. Then just inside the scalloped edge do the single feather stitch. It is extremely pretty on these small clothes and may be worked in a color or white.

Pattern No. 768 is for a summer dress, and is suitable for any of the crepes, taffeta, satin, or the silk and cotton materials. It is cut in two pieces—front and back—and the drop shoulders form short kimono sleeves. The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front and the edges are bound. The slashed opening makes it possible to slip the dress on and off easily.

Hemstitching is suggested as a trimming, and a contrasting colored thread could be used for the work. Or, if you are inclined to spend more time on it, the dress would be charming with the neck and sleeves embroidered. The cross stitch is effective and goes rapidly. Then there are ribbons and fancy braids, any of which will look well.

Close Fitting Little Hats Boast Earrings —a Pirate Touch That Enhances Their Smartness.

CLOSE fitting models of felt, crochet visca, faille, and pedaline and Milan are in much demand. The skullcap type is seen at all the smart teas and bridge parties.

The hat shown in the cut is called the Black Bottom. It is made of Belgian hare black felt. There is a plait one and one-half inches deep across the back. This plait is two inches up from the bottom of the hat. The brim is cutup in the back just above the hair line. It is left long on the sides and is curved up across the face. The points on the sides come just to the bottom of the ear.

Earrings of antique or bright gold are sewed on those points to give the effect of wearing them on the ears. Do not use the part that screws in or into the ear. Take this off and use the lower part of the earring.

All colors of hackle feathers made into pads are also extremely smart on their close fitting hats. All kinds of pins are used this season, not so much as a side trim, but put directly in front of the hat. We have the dancing girl and the clown made of solid rhinestones with colored stones for eyes and buttons on the dress and suit; the more sober Buddha is exhibited for hat ornaments in jade green and carnelian red.

Orange blossoms, made in small wheels, two and one-half inches in diameter, used on both sides of the hat, are also good. Gardenias of yellow, peach, white and flesh are shown on hats. A single gardenia is sewed on the right side of the hat and another one of the same color is pinned on the left shoulder.

In the new shades for spring, monkey skin—a soft tan with a hint of pink in it—holds good for the light tones. Navy blue and black are also good in the deeper shadings. C. G.

Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the monster that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes business quarrels, and generally plays havoc with us mortals. We'd like to know your most notable experience with a jealous person or persons. If you have encountered a situation where jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealous Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Throw Away Note.

I had written a note of thanks to a young man for the flowers which he had sent me while I was in the hospital and gave it to a friend of mine to mail. She had been a former friend of his.

Some time later I saw him, and he inquired as to whether I had received the flowers. "Why, didn't you receive my note of thanks I sent you?" I asked. He said that he hadn't, so of course my first thought was to ask Alice, whom I had intrusted with the note if she had mailed it.

Upon answering she replied, "O, I couldn't be bothered." Mrs. H. M. O.

A Jealous Fisherman.

Last summer when we went fishing to a near by lake our neighbor, Mr. R., was fishing on the other side. My dad had a big catch with several large fish, while Mr. R. caught only two small fish. The next week we also caught many fish, while our neighbor caught none. The third week Mr. R. brought a group of boys out to the lake, and as the water was shallow they waded across and had a good time on our side. Mr. R. did not try to stop the boys and we did not catch any fish that day.

L. McC.

A Prize Snooper.

My sister's husband has a jealous disposition. His line of work does not keep him busy continually and as he lives a half a block from his work he comes home at almost any hour to see if his wife is alone.

My husband and I motored 300 miles to pay them a surprise visit. After showing us to our room, she said, "If you hear Henry coming, hide!"

Before we had time to reply we heard Henry's, "I knew I'd catch you if I tried hard enough."

When he saw who it was he felt embarrassed, but sis says he isn't cured. Mrs. E. F.

Unhappy.

I had a beautiful new hat and received many compliments because of it, until one day my friend's fiancé admired it. She borrowed it and kept it for some time. When she returned it I almost cried in front of her, for I could never wear it again. The poor girl has never found happiness, and it is due to her jealous disposition.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Simple Wedding Feast.

I noticed one day, in the restaurant where I dine, one of the white porcelain top tables was spread with a white linen cloth with a bouquet of roses in the center. In fact, it looked fit for a bridal party, so I inquired of friend waitress the reason. She told me a wedding party had stopped on their way to the photographers, saying they would return in half an hour for their wedding dinner and wished to reserve a table for six.

She had been assigned the table and had rushed out and purchased a chicken and flowers extra, and was patting herself on the back for having done so well on so short a notice. The bridal party came in before I had finished my lunch, and to my surprise ordered six cups of coffee and six hot dogs, the entire order amounting to sixty cents.

I slowed up to sympathize with friend waitress. "Anyway," she said, "I never spend a tip until I get it."

H. B. W.

Forgot Something.

It was a church wedding and in the church were as many people as the place could hold. The chancel looked beautiful with all the pretty flowers. The organist played the wedding march while the bridal party marched into the church.

When the bride and groom, the four bridesmaids and the best men and even the dear little flower girls had taken their places, the pastor whispered some question to the groom, who turned scarlet, shook his head, turned and fled from the church.

O, the excitment of it! The bride fainted and looked just like a corpse in her lovely white dress and the long tulle veil. The maids and little flower girls were all weeping and from all sides such remarks were heard as, "What a shame!" and "What a disgrace!" and "I never thought that of him!"

A young doctor from the audience took care of the bride and she soon revived. She was leaning on her mother's shoulder when in came—all out of breadth and wiping his perspiring face—the groom.

He handed the marriage license to the pastor, which he had forgotten to bring along as he had promised to do.

A great sigh of relief went through the church and the ceremony was performed without any further disturbance. G. M. W.

Unique Procedure.

One of the strangest weddings I ever saw was at our parish church. The bells in the tower rang for ten minutes and when the bride and groom entered they separated and went down the side aisles and the bridesmaids and ushers went down the middle one.

After the ceremony the bride and groom went down the middle aisle while the bridesmaids and ushers went down the side ones.

The maid of honor dropped roses on the carpet.

During the party afterward the bride's slippers were filled with greenbacks. L. K.

Covered with Money.

The pastor just finished, "I now pronounce you man and wife," when there was a great rush in the audience. The men seemed to be pushing forward. Each had in his hand a roll of money in bills.

Then each one tried to see who could pin the most bills on the bride's dress. She was literally covered with five, ten, and twenty dollar bills.

Quite agreeable to the bride, don't you think? Mrs. H. O. L.

Aha!

The strangest wedding I have in mind took place in England several years ago and, of course, was a church wedding. The bride was a "live wire" and always the life of a crowd. Just later had asked the question, "Do before the ceremony she was joking you take this man to be your wedded and laughing, when the groom, who husband?" Whereupon, quick as a appeared to be nervous, said rather flash, the bride-to-be answered, "Not abruptly. "Don't be so foolish." Every- so foolish," and walked out of the thing went off beautifully and the min- church. Mrs. E. F.

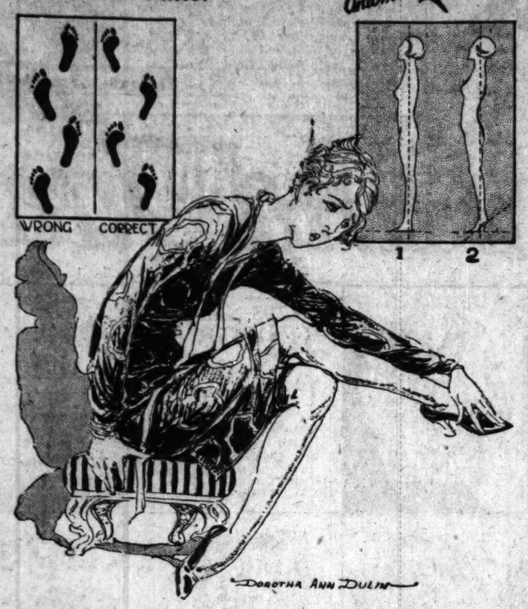
HOW TO AVOID FOOT TROUBLES

Much Discomfort May Be Avoided and Money Saved by Taking Foot Ailments in Time.

by Antoinette Donnelly



NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—One of the outstanding things about the age in which we live is the concerted effort of the various associations of hygiene to give the public the benefit of their knowledge at little or no cost. The philanthropy thus distributed is of incalculable measurement. There is hardly a branch of hygienic study where information cannot be had for the asking, so many and varied in aim are the sources of supply. But living in a hectic though glorious age, we are often willing to accept these educational advantages as light reading matter and go the way of weak flesh which would rather do what is most agreeable at the moment.

There has just been brought to my attention a valuable leaflet put out by the Illinois Association of Chiropodists meant for distribution among a public whose joy in living would be appreciably increased were feet treated with the consideration these loyal old supports deserve.

A healthy campaign has been in operation for some time past urging women to adopt shoes to fit the needs of the individual foot. The fact that shoe sizes in popular demand have increased from threes and fours to five and half and sixes proves that the educational work is not without success. But being the sex that we are immediately we get the feet educated to accept their length philosophically and to dress them in the same spirit, that weakness heretofore ascribed to human flesh demands that the appearance of shortness be subscribed to with heels of the most appalling height.

Real Philanthropy.

I claim these educational associations are philanthropic because they could, by keeping to themselves their ethical knowledge of this thing and that, reap a considerable financial harvest from the treatment of the very ills they caution against. Chiropodists assuredly are in a position to line their coffers handsomely by withholding information on the whys and wherefores of corns and calluses and ingrowing nails and more serious foot troubles. But, of course, there is that fruitful human equation, vanity, to be depended upon to keep them out of the poorhouse.

Whether all women ever will be able to adjust their vanity to common sense methods of shodding their feet I have large and reasonable doubts. Being one of them, myself, I feel fully qualified to doubt for the uncommon sense heel is not without its lure to me, too. A spirit of deep humility possesses me when I feel the urge to lay down the law on this subject. However, I cannot let that interfere with my job, which is to carry on my own branch of the educational work in this as well as other items of health and well being.

We all of us know, who have piloted around on heels that throw the body out of balance, cramp the toes and send shooting pains up and down the legs, that we simply are not capable of showing off at our best. Our "pleasant" expression is not nearly so engaging as it might be. And during this particular season if messages of distress are signaled from those pedal extremities of ours we are attacked with the melancholic idea that life isn't what it ought to be one single bit. A heart ache can leave you no more destitute about the futility of living, really, than feet that are groaning with aches and pains.

The Commonest Ailment.

The commonest foot ailments are corns, generally brought about by misfitting shoes and short stockings. And where one of these is jeopardizing the peace of your household, to say nothing of the calm, unwrinkled face, the best thing to do is to hie yourself off to one legally qualified to practice chiropody. The fee is nominal and the relief great. The implements used in a reputable establishment are thoroughly sterilized, which precaution is not always taken in the home treatment.

Soft corns between the toes result from moisture and macerated skin. This thickened skin should be removed and the space between the toes kept dry. Painting the soles and between the toes with a mixture of one-half ounce salicylic acid and four ounces of alcohol is helpful.

Calluses are a thickening of the skin due to friction and a pressure from the footgear. If there is a bone displacement, the abnormal position of the part induces this pressure. The cause has to be investigated and eliminated.

Bunions are a deformitory that often may be corrected in their early stages under competent direction and proper treatment. But once they become a large chronic deformity they require surgical intervention.

The Result of Tight Shoes.

The most thoroughly painful and a frequent foot complaint arises from the healthy nail being forced into the nail fold by pressure from tightly fitted shoes. Ingrowing nail is its familiar cognomen. A nail, if treated civilly, is as harmless as a goldfish, but maltreated it can wreak a horrible vengeance. If a crowded shoe shoves the flesh into the nail, the flap of flesh becomes bright red and painful to touch. Allowed to go unheeded, the nail gradually imbeds itself in the lateral tissues. An irritation sets up which produces excessive granulation or what used to be called proud flesh.

A nail is a protection, and should extend a little beyond the flesh and be allowed freedom in that extension. In cutting toenails, remember that. The nail which has a tendency to grow in should have a packing of cotton wedged into the nail groove to keep it separated from the flap of flesh. The person who suffers from this form of foot ailment will never recover peace of mind without taking the precaution to safeguard the foot by a careful selection of shoes. They must be broad in the toe and a thumb's width between the tip of the nail and the tip of the shoe should be permitted. The high heel is particularly disastrous in such cases, since it throws the foot forward upon the shoe tip.

Excessive Perspiration.

Associated with other foot troubles is the common one of excessive perspiration. This may be due to general debility and nervousness. Where an unpleasant odor exists, a one per cent solution of potassium permanganate applied as a lotion after a foot bath and the changing of hosiery twice daily is recommended as a remedy that invariably corrects. Patent leather shoes have a tendency to increase the perspiration trouble, particularly in warm weather.

Pains in the feet and legs arising from the various arch conditions should be accepted as nature's warnings of trouble. Most common factors in creating arch troubles are overweight, occupation, general physical weakness, high heels and improper shoes. Also the method in which the feet are used in walking. In the accompanying illustration you see the correct way to walk is to point the toes almost directly forward; the wrong walk, to turn the feet out.

To get an idea of the right or wrong balance you are subjecting yourself to with heels, compare your standing position and the correct position of the organs, spine and weight distribution with the illustrations above.

Answers to Beauty Queries

By Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Sky on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MARY G.: FOR THIN EYEBROWS, rub yellow vaseline into them before brushing. Then with an eyebrow brush or a small fine tooth brush brush them night and morning to promote their gloss and train them into shape. Do not allow the vaseline to get into the eyes, as it is irritating to them.

M. I. G.: BUNIONS ARE THE result of great pressure and friction on the joint. They are brought about by wearing too short shoes and stockings. Have yourself fitted to shoes at a reliable shoe store. The joint must be relieved of all pressure if you would find comfort. You may paint the bunion with a lotion of two drams each of carbolic acid, tincture of iodine, and glycerin.

T. H. G.: A GOOD DEPILATORY for the arms or other parts of the body where you wish to remove superfluous hair is: Sulphide of barium, 2 drams; oxide of zinc, 3 drams; starch, 3 drams. Mix well and keep tightly corked. When you wish to use it, add sufficient water to make a paste, and spread over the part, allowing it to remain on several minutes, or until there is a slight burning sensation.

F. B. V.: CLEANLINESS IS THE most important factor in the care of perspiring feet. The feet must be bathed daily and stockings should be changed every day. A twenty-five per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water is an excellent remedy. Apply for three nights, then once a week. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for other helpful suggestions in "The Care of the Feet."

T. McC.: I WOULD NOT RECOMmend the use of peroxide, even in small quantities, for keeping the hair light. It is the natural thing for your hair to grow darker as you grow older. Peroxide dries the hair and gives it a strawy look. Wash the hair with a good castile soap, and if you wish, add lemon juice to the last rinse water, as it gives a golden tint. Instructions for shampooing may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial outfit. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Constant Practice.

Wife: Just think, Mrs. Johnson learned to play the banjo in two lessons.

Husband: That's nothing—it should be easy for her—she's been picking on her husband for ten years.

MR. E. F. D.

Quieting Hubby.

Hubby (disgusted over wife's cooking)—Believe me, I certainly would give anything to know why God made you women so beautiful and yet so confoundedly dumb?

Wife—Well, I'll tell you, my dear. God made us beautiful so you men would love us and he made us dumb so we could love you men. G. E.

A Case of Necessity.

He—Wifey, do all women prefer the bespectacled men to the other kind?

She—What other kind? D. D.

The Only Caller.

The husband [after a row]: Wasn't that the doorbell? I wonder who it can be.

Wife: Don't worry, dear, it isn't any one. The only caller at our door is the proverbial wolf. A. J. R.

Her Calling.

Hubby and wife, returning from a picture where the great callings of various individuals were discussed, the exceedingly lazy husband remarked:

"Well, I guess I miss my calling. The wife retorted, "Well, I didn't! My work seems to be a-calling you to eat and a-calling you to get up for work—and plenty of calling I have to do for that!" MRS. S. B.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Parsimonious.

The cheekiest person I know is a young farmer of this community, who replied to the request of a neighbor for help with a job of corn shelling the next day, something like this: "Well, no, I guess I can't. You're going to move out of the neighborhood the first of March, ain't you? And I wouldn't be likely get my help paid back—but say, I would like to get a load of cobs."

The other young fellow replied, "You win. Come and get a free load of cobs," and the tightwad did actually drive up to the job the next day, load up, and drive off home, evidently considering the cobs worth the "razzing" he got from the boys working on the job. MRS. J. E. M.

Brings the Tea Along.

The cheekiest person I know is a woman who eats her lunch downtown every day and as a part of her noonday meal has to have her cup of tea. Tea is 10 cents a pot. Does she pay her 10 cents like we do? She does not——. Every day she orders a pot of hot water and brings her own tea leaves. Can you imagine that for nerve! C. M.

False Pretenses.

During a visit with a wealthy cousin she remarked to me, "I've just bought a new dress and I don't look well in that color. Wouldn't you like to try it on?"

I was delighted and said I would be glad to. I went home proudly bearing my support gift on my arm.

A few days later she called me over the telephone and informed me I could settle for the dress at the shop where she had had it charged! A. W. G.

Making the Caddy Pay.

I used to be a caddy at the —— Golf club links. There I met many cheeky persons. The cheekiest of them all was a woman. She hired me for her caddy one day.

On the side of the first fairway there was a big hill about thirty feet high. It was all covered with tangled grass. She teed off, but instead of the ball going down the fairway it went about half way down the hill. I tried to find it, but it was even hard to walk in the tangled grass. I hunted around about fifteen minutes, when she finally put a new ball on the course.

She was all right until it was time to pay me. The caddy rates were 40c for the nine holes. She gave me 20c and said the other 20c was for the golf ball I lost. A. C. S.

The World's Worst.

A neighbor whom I had known but a short time had a breakdown in his car. He borrowed mine, driving it over a 50 mile R. F. D. route every day for three months. After he finally brought it home (or rather after I had gone and brought it home, for he would not), he came one day while I was away from home and took two of the casings off the car, claiming the ones on it at the time he borrowed the car had worn out, and he had taken two off his own car.

In the meantime, all my best tools had disappeared. When I asked him about settling for the use of the car, he would not pay one cent for the three months' use of it, and to cap the climax, he had me charged with a bill of $8 for repairs.

Did I pay it? M. C.

Making It Worse.

Occasionally the automatic stop on our phonograph would stick, but was so easily adjusted that it did not seem necessary to have it attended to. One day when I came home I found a friend working with it and he announced: "I have taken this stop off. It is no good." When I asked him to put it back as he found it he worked with it a few minutes and left.

Several days later I requested him again to put the stop back, and this time he worked at it until he had it so we could not use the phonograph at all. Then he left with the remark, "I never did know the first thing about phonographs."

Now I am waiting until I have the money and chance to send to the city for repairs. MRS. B. M. G.

An Unpleasant Neighbor.

The cheekiest person I ever saw was the man who moved his family in the apartment across the hall from me. The first evening he was there he took our paper and read it before we had a chance to. In two weeks after they had moved in they had borrowed my electric iron, sweeper, heater, books, and even asked me to keep the baby for them.

Then, to show his appreciation, he went into a restaurant where we were well known and made all manner of fun of my husband and me. He was a stranger in town, while we were old residents. We surely liked his nerve! F. M. B.

OH YES! I can wear smaller, daintier shoes since I use Tiz. It is because my feet are never swollen or tender any more.

The minute you put your feet in a Tiz bath, you feel pain and tenderness drawn out. Oh! What relief. No more, tired, aching, burning, shoe-chafed feet.

Tiz draws out the poisons and acids that puff up your feet. Get a box of Tiz for a few cents at any drug or department store.

An insect with a $200,000,000 appetite

You know how women dread the moth. No woolens, silks, furs or down comforters are safe from the insect and her pernicious offspring. Their natural abiding place is in all such household effects folded away in darkness.

Here the moth lays her eggs. The eggs hatch into larvae, or worms. The worms, born naked, need clothes, which they make out of YOURS in the form of a cocoon. In this they grow, meanwhile feeding on the materials and increasing the size of cocoon as needed. Finally they go to sleep, wake up as moths and flit away, leaving ruin behind.

In one year a moth produces four generations of destroyers. The total loss ascribed by authorities to moth damage is close to two hundred millions of dollars annually. The answer is —

THE SUCCESSFUL WOMAN—AND HAPPINESS

Is the Financially Independent Ever Really Contented? Has She Everything Her Heart Desires? Here Are Answers.

By Doris Blake

NOT long ago one of the most successful business women in America took over a building, the transaction of which involved several million dollars. Reporters immediately camped on her trail for stories of the life that led to an unusually great measure of success. To one who suggested that it must be a glorious feeling to review an achievement such as hers, she replied:

"It is terrible. Last night I ran across an old friend of mine with whom I had been out of touch for years on account of my work. There we sat as strangers with nothing in common. The old human touch had evaporated. It is terrible, I say."

One cannot help detecting a note of pessimism in much of the literature dealing with women who thought feminism the direct road to woman's happiness. Some writers have no hesitation in describing the modern independence as blatantly destructive of her happiness. It will remain a debatable question, no doubt, so long as economic conditions force women into the wage earning field. There will be successful women of the world, surrounded with the physical comforts life would have denied them but for the advantages of the modern day, who will scout the theory that independence and personal happiness are impossible of attainment. There are other women who will look back from some pinnacle of achievement and ask, as one woman asked: "What does it profit a woman to gain the whole world of independence and suffer the loss of the things every woman wants, whether she is successful or not?"

Each Woman Has Her Own Ideals.

It depends upon so many circumstances, upon so many individual heart traits whether the game proves worth the candle or not. Men and the sentiments, the attentions and the support or the ministering to they represent may, to one woman, mean nothing. To another, perhaps just as able to sign a check for thousands of dollars, the old Eve with her dependent weaknesses can no more be ruled out of her heart than can be the cardiac organ, itself. And so optimism or pessimism can no more embrace the whole body of so-called successful independence than can the younger generation be embodied in one sweeping statement, pro or con.

But I do hold this, a disturbing observation, if not one containing the seeds of pessimism, women's capacity to hero worship the male has diminished, perhaps not in ratio to her progress beside him as co-worker, but sufficiently in hundreds of instances to make man feel a destructive sense of inferiority. In certain exaggerated cases woman's own sense of power and accomplishment breeds in her a contempt for man. Not a woman, understand, abnormal in any other respect than ensues from her proven results that she is as capable as he, and sometimes more capable. All of which may contribute to her greater success in business—but also to her invariable failure as a domestic partner.

You can argue till the cows come home and until they start out again about the reasonableness of the modern matrimonial partnership arrangements, about women being accepted at full brain power by an appreciative and loving male, but until man has undergone some miraculous change in his construction, no signs of which are upon the horizon at the moment, marriage is never a success where the man is made to feel consciously or unconsciously that he is not just a little bit the superior.

The suggestion is advanced by a visiting English woman journalist that the gold diggers' fascination lies not so much in the fact that men are easily fooled as in the sop to their hunger for that feeling of being fully able to provide and supply for women, dominant in the able bodied male. An American woman author, herself the victim of "successful woman" circumstances, said to me: "No woman is clever whose husband is not made to appear clever by her."

"Slow Torture."

Rita Weiman, well known writer, in a recent story in Liberty magazine, has cleverly portrayed one type of successful business woman who makes marriage Hades for the man who draws her. She called it "Slow Torture," a mild caption for the situation involved.

Mildred is a girl described by the author as the "sort who dominates the room the instant she enters it," a girl marked for success by the sheer force of her personality. David, her adorer, is a plodding student, earnest to the point of struggling long hours over his home work in his young days. Both elected to make architecture a career. They married when the salary of each was fifty dollars a week. Theirs was judged the perfect union, an ideal love match.

They worked in the same office. Mildred continuing with her job. They had been married a year when she got a raise, while David did not. Faint jarring notes had already been struck with Mildred's supervision of problems assigned to David and suggestions from her that held her young spouse up to ridicule before other draftsmen in the office. David made protests on a number of occasions that he would like to puzzle his problems out by himself. She argued that she was only trying to help him.

Finally David took a position with another concern "not for the reason that his wife's salary was more than his own, but because she kept him in mind of the fact. His status became unbearable."

When the Climax Came.

Then we are carried through scenes amid social surroundings made possible by David's financial progress away from the dominating influence of his wife. "On all occasions, in little petty happenings that tear a man's soul and break down his self-respect, devastate his peace of mind—at dinner and bridge parties, in their home, even as they waited for a taxi outside the theater—she told him how to do things. And David's suffering was a cross on which daily he was crucified."

The way David swung his golf club was the occasion for a public reprimand. The scene that followed might have warned Mildred of the latent potentialities in her man.

But the climax came with the interference of Mildred on plans for a Long Island show place upon which David had worked for months, the stamp of approval on which, already seen in the owner's enthusiasm meant an ultimate partnership. Mildred insisted upon accompanying him, in spite of David's protest, on a tour of the place, now almost complete.

Overruling his months of work, his pride, she made suggestions to the owner, "the feminine touch" she called the things that David had not included in his plans. She succeeded in making David look and feel his inferiority "as effectively as if she had put a dunce cap on his head." That night he strangled Mildred, not with the finality she deserved, for she recovered. Later she got a divorce on the grounds of extreme cruelty. David went to another city to live and the world judged him harshly.

The Mildreds are not always business women conscious of their superior power. There are wives quite capable of breaking down a man's self-respect. But the earning wife with her additional implement of torture, a pay envelope, has it within her power to be a deadlier enemy in the job of tearing a man's heart and soul up by the roots.

Women the World Over

The honor of being the first woman justice of the peace in the United States rests upon the shoulders of Mrs. Catherine W. McCullough of Chicago. She has been practicing law in Chicago for the last 40 years.

Though she never had boys or girls of her own, Mrs. Josephine L. Petit of Fitchburg, Mass., has had more than 300 children to call her mother. She and her husband take care of the New England French-American Home.

The Woman's Bar association of Washington, D. C., is making a determined effort to put through legislation amending the inheritance laws of the District of Columbia, so that female relatives shall be on an equal footing with the male.

Dr. Elizabeth A. Sullivan, wife of a Boston physician, has been chosen by the welfare societies of that city to do mental diagnosis of difficult cases dealing with estranged parents and unruly children.

At the age of 15 years Barbara Hutton, granddaughter of the late Frank W. Woolworth, with $30,000,000 in her own right, is considered the richest young girl in the country.

For the first time in the history of congress a woman now holds a position as bill clerk in that body. She is Miss Mary Simpson of Vermont, and her salary is $2,800.

Answers to Love Queries

By Doris Blake

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Opened a Letter.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl almost 18 and I go with a fellow 21 who is an organist. We have been going together five months and we are engaged.

"He has some girl from another city write to him and has the letters sent to my house.

"The other day a letter came and I opened it because I was jealous.

"Please tell me what to do. He knows I opened it. HORSES."

You made a ghastly mistake in opening mail addressed to another, Horses. He has good reason to resent your action, and it may take him some time to overlook the offense. You should have given him his mail, explaining your disapproval of such a correspondence, dear.

There Are Others.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl in my teens. I am in love with a young man who showers his attentions on my friend. But I am head over heels in love with him, and I know his head is just turned by her baby ways. I would greatly appreciate your advice in my case.

"HEARTBROKEN."

You can't expect success in winning a man who is so deeply interested in another, Heartbroken. Do the sensible thing and put all thoughts of him out of your head—hard though it may be. There are others, dear.

She Forgot Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going out with a girl for nearly six months. Three weeks ago she told me she was going on her vacation. Since then I never have heard from her. She told me she was going to write to me every three days, but I didn't hear from her. CURLY HAIRED CHARLIE."

She must have been fickle to forget you so quickly, Charlie. Don't feel too badly over the slight, as there are others to take her place.

A Word Would Help.

"Dear Miss Blake: I went with a young man for a year and thought there was nobody like him. I had an argument with him, because I believed things people told me.

"I do not go around with any boy friends at all. I still care for the former one. When he sees me he speaks and is on friendly terms. Do you think we will ever go together again and do you think he still cares for me? SO LONESOME."

Such a lack of confidence is mighty disconcerting, Lonesome. Don't you think a word from you, showing you still believed in him, would do much to reinstate your friendship, dear? Try it.

Overcome Competition.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a girl over a year and love her. Lately she's been telling me she doesn't know if she'll see me or not. She often receives telephone calls from other boys and doesn't care for me any more. Please advise.

"DOWNHEARTED."

Aren't you jealous because others appreciate her good qualities, too, Downhearted? Show your metal by proving you're the best man. Don't lose heart because of competition. Meet and overcome it.

Do as She Does.

"Dear Miss Blake: My girl tells me she goes out with other men, but if she ever found out I went out with other women she would be through with me. SHEIK."

What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Don't let her tell you differently or keep you from seeing other girls.

Sick Stomach Teaches Her a Good Lesson

Miss Jeanne Ginsberg, Bronx, N. Y., writes: "I had become accustomed to arising each day with a heavy head, dizzy, and a bad taste in my mouth. My bowels were frequently clogged and constipated. One day I became so sick to my stomach I had to leave an important job and go home. I tried CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. I feel greatly relieved since using them and whenever my stomach and head goes bad I certainly know what to do."

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are sugar coated, small, easy to swallow, purely vegetable, and relieve the bowels free from pain. They tonic the system as they are purely vegetable and do not contain Mercury, or poisonous drugs.

HORSEMANSHIP

How to Ride
A Series for Men and Women

By CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS
11th U. S. Cavalry

Horseback riding is being revived with increasing interest throughout the land, so expert advice on riding style and horsemanship generally will be of interest to those who, either as novices or experts, seek such recreation for its healthfulness and for the real joy it affords. The following is the first of a series of articles by Capt. Fenton Stratton Jacobs, United States cavalry, who has had considerable experience in horse training, and who is a graduate of the famous cavalry school at Fort Riley, Kas. Capt. Jacobs' articles will deal with the subject from various angles. He will stress the proper way to ride in order to obtain the greatest enjoyment with the least tiresome effect on horse and rider, as now taught at the cavalry school.

NO sport in recent years has made greater strides in popularity than horseback riding. Why? Because there is no other sport in which men, women and children, alike, can combine pleasure and physical stimulant. The American College of Surgeons, through its late president, Dr. A. J. Ochsner, M. D., LL. D., once said: "There is no other form of exercise that so fully affects every nerve and every organ of the human body in a healthful way as does horseback riding." Dr. Andrew A. Gour writes: "The visible results of the sport are the distinctive bearing and graceful carriage of the person who rides regularly—bright, clear eyes and healthful complexion."

The word horsemanship is as often abused as are the horses in the hands of the unskilled. Horsemanship includes the care and management of horses, as well as being skilled in the training and riding of horses. Frequently, practice alone may produce individual success, and a man on a certain horse may produce astounding results even in violation of well established principles; while on another horse and using other equipment he would be helpless. No intelligent horseman ever claims for his own method the A and Z of equitation, for it is the belief of all who are not hide bound by prejudice that the method of riding, the bit and saddle and breed of a horse are all dependent upon local conditions and the work required.

Should Women Ride Astride?

Before launching into the specific details of our "seat," which will more nearly than any other I have seen produce the ideal, a relaxed rider on a relaxed horse, I wish to discuss at this time certain generalities which so often have been made the subject of debate.

Should women and girls ride astride? Read farther. For three years I was in charge of equitation and tactics at the University of Arizona, Tucson. During that time I had approximately 600 co-eds from nearly every state in the Union, in addition to the 2,000 or more cadets, in my riding classes. They rode the "McClellan" army saddle and the English, French and American flat saddle astride. I gave them as nearly as I could the so-called "Fort Riley" seat. The advanced class included high school work, jumping four feet, and cross country galloping over the roughest terrain in that vicinity. And the girls gave a better exhibition than did the cadets taking the parallel course.

So there is no question in my mind as to whether a woman shall ride astride a horse. It may be interesting to note that a sixth century vase found at Daphnae, lower Egypt, shows a woman riding astride. It has been proved by other sources that women rode astride until the twelfth century. A pillion or pad was then introduced on which a lady rode sidewise behind her husband and steadied herself by holding on to his belt.

History of the Side Saddle.

In "Readings in Social Problems," by Albert Benedict Wolfe, we find that in Europe, several hundred years ago, riding sidewise by women with feet enveloped in a voluminous skirt, was popularized solely because a French princess set the fashion to conceal her deformed spine. In England the side saddle as well as many other other styles and customs was introduced by Anne, daughter of the king of Bohemia, first queen of Richard II., in 1388.

The side saddle when first fully developed had two heads or pommels between which the right leg was supported, the support of the left being the stirrup. The third pommel or leaping head, against which the left leg rests, was, it is said, invented as the result of a match between two gentlemen riders to ride a steeplechase on side saddles. The winner had provided himself with the additional support for his left leg. At first the leaping head was used only in the hunting field and the double "cow horn" was retained; however, as its uselessness became apparent the second pommel disappeared.

Again, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, the side saddle was popularized because a member of her royal household had a withered right limb, which was not noticeable when she rode sidewise wearing a full skirt. Thus we find the side saddle owes its origin to fashion and to the camouflage of infirmities, rather than to a scientific development to benefit women.

CAPT. FENTON S. JACOBS.

Riding Has Many Benefits.

In America the women who lived in the west, where the country was rough, and sports such as shooting, contest riding, and racing were done on horseback, were the first to take up the cross seat; because it is the natural, safer, and more efficient way to ride.

For accurate riding, the leg around the horse—thigh, knee, calf contact seat (which in a later installment will be discussed in detail) is obviously more sure of the desired result than the tapping of a riding crop on the right or "off side," necessary when riding the side saddle, to turn the horse on the forehand to the right, on two tracks to the left, or any other movement requiring displacement of the hindquarters to the left. And most important, it enables both rider and horse to be symmetrically developed.

Summing up the question, it has been my observation that horseback riding astride, for girls, aside from being an attractive, clean and exhilarating sport, has been highly beneficial for those who master the art. It stimulates self-confidence, daring, consideration for others, aggressiveness, quick thinking, coördination of mind and body, relaxation, a better posture, and, as President Wilson once said, "The outside of a horse is good for the inside of a man"—or woman. However, regardless of method, style or whatnot, let us ride—ride as often as possible, for the good of this and the generation to follow.

ISN'T IT ODD

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the aphids, those tiny insects that live on the tips of tender plants and the under sides of leaves, should go along for generations without wings and then, of a sudden, finding is necessary to move, should overnight equip themselves with the means of flight!

The aphids are the sapsuckers of the garden, the tiny fellows who settle down, drive their beaks into the bark until they reach the sap, and sit there contentedly for a lifetime drinking their fill. So sure are they that they will not want to move that, in shedding their skins as is the way of insects as they grow, some of them cast off both legs and cling there blind and helpless for the rest of their lives.

Clinging thus, the helpless mothers give birth to their young. These have legs and eyes and run quite actively about until they get located and get their connections made with the sap streams.

The processes are repeated until, perhaps, the plant harboring these tiny creatures gets to have so many of them that they drink all its sap. There is none left to nourish its leaves and fruit and it languishes and dies. Thus the aphids prove very harmful to plant life.

But the aphids themselves, having killed the plant that furnished their food, find themselves facing an emergency. They have got to go away from there and find a new source of food. Possibly it is a cherry tree in which they have been living. Possibly the season has so advanced that a hop field near by is full of young and tender plants. If the aphids could but get from the cherry tree to the hop field they would again be in clover.

It is when faced with this emergency that the insects perform the miracle. All the generations of the summer have been quite wingless. One watching them would long ago have written them down as insects without wings. But here, of a sudden, they need the means of flight that they may preserve themselves. Of a sudden a generation of aphids appears that is possessed of wings. These they unfurl and fly away to the hop field. After the journey they bore into the streams of hop sap, make their connections, shed their traveling skin, wings and all, and again settle down to a quiet life.

But when, later on, the hop plants mature and begin to dry out, a new generation of winged aphids appears and they fly away to some other plant where the sap still flows.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The barometer on the side porch hung rather high and Rowen saw his father take it down one morning to get a more accurate reading.

So Rowen proceeded to do the same thing later, and it fell from his little hands and broke. He ran to his mother with a fragment in his hands. "M-mother, I b-busted the weather," he sobbed. C. M.

I am a country school teacher. Recently we gave a little playlet. I had memorized most of it hearing the children rehearse, and expected to be able to prompt any who needed it without reference to the book.

A little girl named Susie took the part of the "queen." When the play came off and we had come to the part where the queen enters the scene, she was slow in coming, and thinking there was a hitch somewhere I said, sotto voce: "Enter, Susie."

But Susie piped up, much affronted and excited, and said: "You shouldn't say 'Susie,' I'm the queen!"

"It brought down the house." We are "booked" for another night, and Susie's reputation as an actress is speeding towards stardom. H. K.

The workmen had been grading for a new street past the house and Lloyd, aged 3, had been told to play in the yard and not go out near the place where the men were at work, but during the day he managed to get out there, and was having a grand time when his mother discovered him.

"Lloyd, I thought I told you to stay in the yard."

"I is in the yard. They took it all out in the street, so I had to go out there to play in it, didn't I?" C. E. O.

The Strange Adventures of Young Robinson Grewso

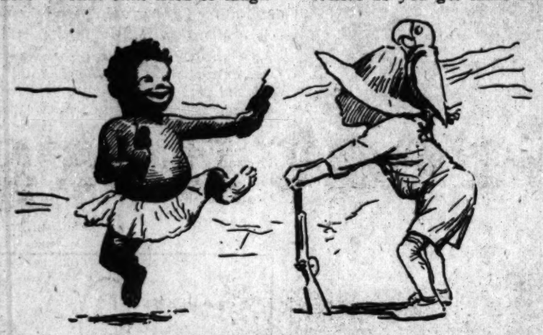
By KEMBLE

His Ma called him Robin; his Dad called him Son;
He grew like a weed and thought it great fun.
So he called himself Robinson Grewso.

THE sun had been up for several hours when Robin and Chin-Chin finally wakened. Robin rubbed his eyes and looked around.

"Where are we?" he asked, in a small, frightened voice.

"I have an idea we're right here." Chin-Chin tried to laugh as he said it, but the laugh wasn't in him. He was too scared.



"Here, have a soldier."

They ate their breakfast without saying a word to each other. Then Robin said, very seriously: "Chin-Chin, we must start right out and discover what lives on this island. I'll take the gun and the jelly beans, and you fly ahead and if you see anything, just drop to the ground and flap your wings three times and I'll creep up and shoot."

The parrot did as he was told, and as he neared the top of a little hill he dropped to the ground. Flap, flap, flap went his wings. Robin crept up and looked.

"A cannibal. That's what he is," gasped Robin.

Down in the hollow sat a fat little colored boy, eating chocolate soldiers. Robin rushed at him, waving his gun and yelling like an Indian.

"Shoot a jelly bean at him to scare him," screamed Chin-Chin.

The fat little colored boy rose and stood perfectly still.

"What you-all acting so foolish about?" he grinned. "I ain't going to hurt you," and he danced up and down as he stretched out his chubby hand.

"Here, have a soldier. I play with them first; then I eat them. They don't mind at all. I used to lose them all the time, so now I eat them. Then I know just where they are."

Robin could not help laughing at this.

"You're not such a bad cannibal, after all. What's your name?" he said.

"Ain't got no name. Never had none," grinned the little darky.

"Well, I'll give you one," said Robin. "The same name that is in my book at home. I'll call you Friday."

"No, no," screamed Chin-Chin. "It's perfectly foolish to call him Friday. Call him Chocolate Sundae."

"My, my, but that's a sweet name. I never ate one, but I've heard about them. Now you-all come up to my camp and I'll show you how I live."

Sundae led the way, and soon Robin and Chin-Chin found themselves seated on a big mat made of long grass, eating popcorn balls.

"Where do you get these nice popcorn balls?" asked Chin-Chin.

"I'll show you," and Sundae jumped up and took them to his "plant ground." "First I want you to see my digger bug at work."

The biggest beetle Robin had ever seen was busy making holes in the earth. He would poke his nose down and push the dirt back with his claws, then he'd drop a seed in each hole and cover it up and stamp on it.

"He's planting for my next crop. He keeps busy, he does."

Over in another field were cornstalks nearly ten feet high. On the stalks the ears of corn were popping and scattering the big white kernels all about them.

"The sun does that," said Sundae, and he was very proud. "You see, the sun is my best friend. He wakes me up in the morning and tells me when to go to bed at night, and he keeps me warm and makes a fire for me so I can cook my food, and he does lots of kind things just like this."

Sundae gathered up the popcorn and dipped it into a bucket filled with maple sirup, and made some more nice fresh popcorn balls.

"You know, I have a friendly woodpecker that taps the trees for me so I can get this maple sirup. All the birds and beasts on this island are friendly. They won't hurt you if you are kind to them. And funny! Smoky mackerel! But some of them just make you die a-laughing. Funniest things you ever saw. You just stick around and you'll have a good time."

"O, we'll stick," said Robin, "won't we, Chin-Chin?"

"You bet," said Chin-Chin. "We're the sticky kind, especially when we're eating popcorn balls."

Eating popcorn balls.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

HERE'S A CHALLENGE EASY TO MEET.

THERE are many, I know, able to help the young girl who wrote this letter:

"Dear Miss Brown: Owing to a great deal of illness and misfortune for the last six months, we are almost penniless. I am 21 and the oldest in a family of six girls. My mother is a widow. Can any of your readers help us with clothing? We can remodel them, and anything given us will be greatly appreciated. V. P."

Isn't this a challenge to all of us—and one of the easiest chances to help that we could imagine? It is the same story that causes so much misery in the world—illness—too much expense at once, and a breakdown of courage and spirit under the burden.

The case is only one of scores we have on record right now, where illness is falling with crushing force on families whose savings have been exhausted by illness or misfortunes, and whose earnings leave no margin above current living expenses. And when we think of all the clothing outgrown and discarded every day in Chicago, is there any reason why we should allow this hardship to continue bearing upon these families?

There's the happiness of giving and a suggestion to you, my friends. The appeals do not ask for real sacrifice; outgrown clothing still good but which has outlived its usefulness to you means so much and fulfills long felt wants in many cases. Ask yourself whether you can afford to miss the happiness that will come to the recipient and to you from meeting the need. If you do, I'm certain you'll be among those who help.

Song Books to Pass On.

"Our church has four sets of song books, with 24 to 30 in each set. We will gladly pass them on to some organization who can pay the postage on them. MRS. G. B."

Some Sunday school or mission could make splendid use of these song books. If you would like to have them, let me know at once.

Boys Want a Wagon.

"I am a widow and the mother of two boys. They want a wagon to play with and I can't afford to buy it for them, as I am just starting to keep house. I would appreciate anything in the line of furniture or rugs, also. "MRS. H. A."

Children outgrow their playthings so quickly, I am sure there will be a wagon for these small boys. If you have any furniture for the mother let us know about that, too.

Deserted Mother.

"A young mother with two babies has been deserted by her husband. She has been sick with heart trouble, but hopes to be able to go to work soon. They need clothing badly. She takes size 38 and the children are a girl, 3, and a boy, 2. MRS. E. O."

This young mother's chances for finding a position probably would be improved greatly if she had some of the clothing you are about to discard. Perhaps you'll have some for the babies, too.

Hard Working Youngster.

"I am just a poor working boy, therefore I come to you for help. I have been promised a job working evenings in a grocery store, but I must have a bicycle to deliver groceries, and I wonder if some one of your readers has one he no longer wants. R. C."

An ambitious lad is this, who could make splendid use of the bicycle you've outgrown. May he have it?

For Youthful Actors.

"The high school in which I teach is putting on 'The Willow Plate,' and some of the pupils cannot afford the Chinese costumes needed. Perhaps some readers have costumes and queues they will be willing to pass on to our school. S. P."

Have you a mandarin coat or a queue to give these high school students? They'll be quite necessary if the performance is to be a success.

Widow Needs Coat and Dress.

"Do you think you could get me a black coat and dress, size 40? My husband is dead and I have a broken ankle, so I can't work. MRS. D. S."

Somewhere, I know, there must be a black coat and a black dress in this poor widow's size, which she might be wearing. Have you either of these garments to give her?

Dog to Give Away.

"I have a white fox terrier, female, clean and intelligent which I will give to some one who can give it a good home. D. K."

How I Dress My Hair

By Edna Wallace Hopper

The thousands who see me daily on the stage wonder at my beautiful hair. It is wavy, glossy and abundant. Nearly everyone thinks that some wonderful hair dresser gives it daily care.

Not so—I'm too busy for that. I never go to a hair dresser for a Marcel wave. I simply apply twice weekly a hair dress which great experts made for me. It is not sticky, not greasy. Before they made it I never dreamed a liquid could do so much. Now all toilet counters supply it as Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75c.

Nothing else I know gives a girl or woman so much added loveliness at once. No one can resist it when she knows. My guarantee is enclosed with every bottle, so it costs you nothing if it doesn't please. Go try it at my expense.

FOR PERFECT PERMANENT WAVING

A Wave like Nature's Own —and equally Safe!

A Circuline Wave assures you of two things—a wave as tight or as loose as you yourself prefer; and absolute freedom from chemicals such as lye, ammonia or potash, injurious to the hair. With Circuline your hair is as beautiful, as naturally flowing, as though Nature herself had waved it. Because Circuline treats your hair according to its individual requirements, it assures you in advance of perfect results in the end!

But to be sure that you are getting a Circuline Wave, make certain that your hairdresser uses authentic Circulines. You will recognize them as she immerses one for each curl in clear, fresh water. Each is individually wrapped, and stamped with the name "Nestle Circuline". Only when you see them, when your hairdresser uses them, are you sure of a Circuline Wave. Write for Circuline booklet to:

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

On the Food Piece Called a Sandwich Is Modeled an Array of Edibles Ranging from Humble Snacks to Superdelicacies

By Jane Eddington.

NO ADEQUATE classification of sandwiches can be made, yet we are tempted to make the following:

1. Plain cold sandwiches, or two slices of bread, preferably well buttered, with slices of meat—beef, ham, chicken, etc.—or American or Swiss cheese, or some mince for a filling. And, best of all, often plain bread and butter sandwiches — sometimes substantial, sometimes of the thinnest slices of bread that can be cut.

2. Plain hot sandwiches. A favorite humble form of this type is the sandwich filled with slices of roast beef with a hot gravy over it, but many other sorts have been devised. The summer salad is freshened up often with a slice of hot bacon or of thin broiled ham or cold cooked ham sliced, heated up, or made like broiled meat.

3. Open sandwiches. Here we have possibilities and suggestions. The ship's steward on the great ocean liners serves these. In color and design they furnish interest as an afternoon tea refreshment. The relish called a canape is on this model. In both these cases the size is small, but quite large open sandwiches may be made for luncheon purposes and several served on a plate—one more like a relish, another like a main dish, another much like a salad, and yet another like a dessert.

4. Storied sandwiches. For these more than the original two slices of bread are used, or from three up. These range in variety from the hearty club to the tea delicacy of many thinnest slices of bread with fillings like the thinnest of icings, and these, like cakes, are sometimes finished with pipings of cream cheese, or butter or even of a fondant.

5 Fancy sandwiches. Here we have a medley of true sandwich forms with great variety secured through fillings of the most divers sorts, fish and meat pastes, spicy mixtures and sweet fillings.

6. Dessert sandwiches. In these cake or wafers take the place of bread, and they are only related to the sandwich by their form. Commercially the ice cream sandwich is of this type. Slices of sponge cake toasted, or not, with slices of a brick of ice cream make a pleasant dessert. Some of the elaborate puff paste forms are really on the sandwich model, and so is a cream puff and, for that matter, a layer cake.

Making Plain Sandwiches.

It is a great advantage to cream butter before trying to spread bread with it. Tough crusts must be cut off for politeness' sake, but it is better to leave them on unless the sandwiches are to be closely wrapped, especially if they are to be kept for a half day. This is why rolls and biscuits and even cream puffs replace the slices of bread acceptably. The crusts keep the bread from drying out. Unless the sandwiches are to be put into a press, it is best to use several small slices of meat for filling them, because otherwise all the meat may be pulled out with the first bite.

The meat should not be sliced until the bread has been buttered, and it is best to have each slice of bread buttered because thus the meat is protected, or kept from drying out. It is, in other words, briefly potted.

Sandwich Breads.

Commercially, in this day, there is the special sandwich loaf of white bread, but one of the best ways to keep sandwiches from being monotonously tiresome is to vary the breads with every picnic, or tea party, by using different breads and to depend as much on the dark breads as upon the white.

Home made oatmeal bread that will cut as thin as a wafer makes a delicious foundation for a chopped olive and mayonnaise filling. A good Boston brown bread that will cut in thin slices is wonderfully appetizing with almost all the cream cheese fillings, and in fact is excellent with a thick sour cream filling which old fashioned people might have a prejudice concerning until they tasted the mixture.

Cheese Spiced Sandwich Filling.

One pound of American cheese, two or three beaten eggs, one-half cup of cream, salt and pepper. Cut the cheese fine. Beat the eggs and mix the cream and the cheese with them. Put all in a double boiler or over a gentle fire and stir constantly until the cheese melts. Add the seasonings after taking it from the fire, and it is well to include a few grains of red pepper. Pour into a jar and cool. When it is cool it should be the consistency of soft butter. If it should happen to curdle in cooking, or if we wish to have it extra smooth it should be sieved. It will keep for a week and is an economical way of using cheese, more so than using American cheese sliced.

Stiff Cheese Fillings in General.

The open cheese sandwich for luncheon is excellent, and may be used as the main part, or as a dessert part. In the latter case sprinkle some sugar over the cheese as it melts on the top of a slice of bread which has been toasted on one side, before the small chips of cheese are put on the other and melted under the broiler. Well pressed cheese sandwiches are dipped like French toast and heated up in the same way that it is.

The Cream Cheese Fillings.

Variety in these perhaps began when the cream cheese was mixed with pimento purees, or the red ingredient chopped, and open sandwiches fixed up in all sorts of fancy ways with this combination. Sometimes the cheese was put on the thin and fancy cut of bread, and the pimento cut fine was scattered over it, or crosses made, or lattices. Cream cheese mixed with green sweet pepper chopped fine—the pepper is excellent, also, with butter—makes an attractive filling. Jam and jellies to color the cheese, or dates to make it sweet and tasty or nuts to make it more substantial and some nuts to make it heartier, are other ways of using this exceedingly versatile ingredient in sandwich making. Quite plain it is used for many storied sandwiches well pressed and then sliced to look like a slice of layer cake.

Egg Sandwich Fillings.

Hard but gently cooked eggs, chopped and buttered while hot, salted just a bit, may be used for a thick filling for two slices of well buttered bread. They can be made ideally palatable. Grated cheese mixed with melted butter and mashed egg yolk makes a good variation of this sandwich.

Pressed Eggs.

Hard cook the eggs, drop them into cold water, drain and dry and shell and chop fine with salt, pepper, a bit of prepared mustard, and one teaspoon of melted butter to each egg used. Mix these together and press them into a small square loaf. Slices of these with lettuce dipped in a salad dressing and put together just before eating make a hearty and also a pretty sandwich.

Nut Fillings.

Almost any of the nuts, chopped and salted and mixed to a paste with cream or butter, make a good sandwich filling, without any additions, but figs, or raisins, or dates may be combined with the nuts, or chopped celery. For tea sandwiches almonds blanched and pounded with sugar, then mixed to a paste with rich cream, with a bit of salt added, may be most dainty. A piece of lettuce with the nut fillings always gives character.

Peanut Sandwich Filling or Butter.

Pound or chop home shelled roasted peanuts fine, mix them with cream, or melted butter, or even a fine oil, to the consistency of a good spread.

Peanut Caramels and Sandwich Filling.

Cook to soft ball [238] stage one cup of sugar, six tablespoons of milk, three or six tablespoons of peanut butter. Be sure the sugar is dissolved before the whole boils. Cool when taken from the fire, and then beat to the opera caramel stage, adding a few drops of vanilla, if you wish. With a sweet bread of the type of a coffee cake or bun this makes a delicious filling, or it may be set and cut into caramels. This recipe will make filling enough for from fifteen to twenty large sandwiches, best for a dessert, perhaps. But it is a bit heavy, and should not be indulged in by some people. After a light meal it will be a good dessert for a child, who is likely to love it. Cut the bread thin, thinly butter, and then crush the caramels for it, if that form has been made.

Sweet Fillings in General.

Chocolate drops crushed, soft caramels and bon bons, and all such make pleasant variation of the perhaps childish luncheon of bread and butter with sugar.

The Green Sandwiches.

These sandwiches and those of tomato and cucumber have the disadvantage of needing to be made just as they are used, but lettuce leaves, cress, nasturtium leaves [a sort of cress] and even the blossom dipped in mayonnaise, or a cooked salad dressing, make delightful fillings for tea sandwiches cut in strips, or crescents, or small rounds or squares. Nut bread with any of these fillings, perhaps the quick home made sort, is dainty. The fine stems of lettuce cut in thin disks and mixed with fine celery, finely chopped olives and perhaps a few nut meats can be mixed with mayonnaise for an acceptable and inexpensive filling.

Tomato Sandwiches.

Slices of tomato of a fine spicy quality—some do not have this quality—is without any addition of seasoning an agreeably cool filling for a sandwich But it may be combined daintily with chopped chives or have some crisp bacon powdered over it. Or it may be mixed with just a bit of mayonnaise and a chopped caper or two.

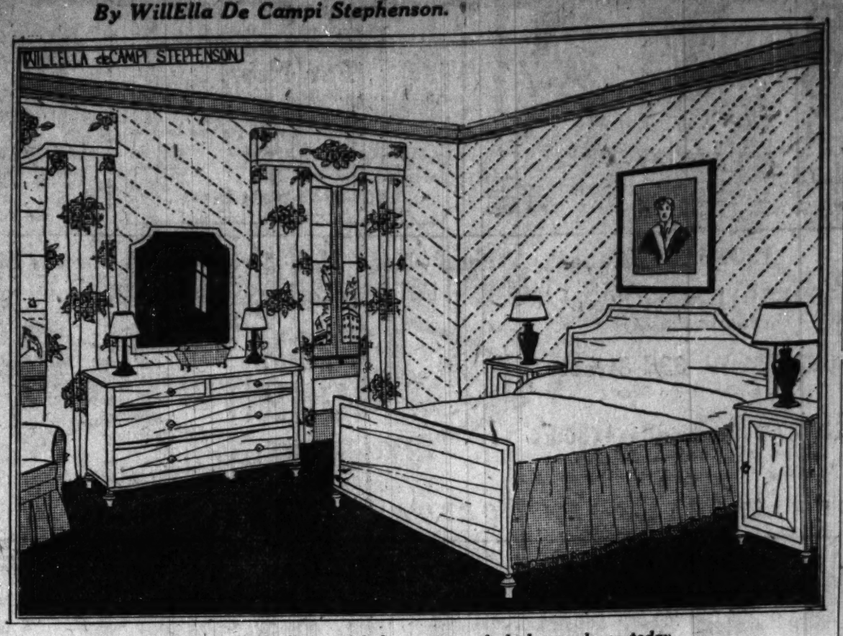
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

This Suburban Home Is Beautifully Carried Out and Is Perfect in Every Detail.



Simplicity is the keynote of the young man's bedroom shown today.

INDIVIDUALITY may be as strongly expressed in the decorations and furnishings of a house as in the actual manners and speech of those people who occupy it. In order properly to serve as a home for the owner, the house must be more than a mere dwelling place. It must satisfy, in its plan and design, in its equipment and decorative treatment, the individual requirements and personal needs of those who live in it. The furnishing of a house affords wonderful opportunity for the expression of originality.

Beautifully carried out and perfect in every detail is a suburban home which has just been completed. The house is divided in the center by a spacious entrance and stair hall. A lovely scenic paper is used in panels on the walls. It is done in tones of ecru and ivory. Woodwork is painted ivory. Taupe carpeting is used on the floor and stairs. At the windows are ivory silk and wool casement cloth glass curtains, beneath draperies of sepia colored velvet. A Queen Anne sofa at one side of the hall is upholstered in soft red damask. Against the opposite wall space is a console table, flanked by a pair of William and Mary chairs. A lovely mirror hangs above the table.

An open doorway leads into the living room. Here there are many windows, and the room is flooded with light. Consequently, a dark wall covering combining amethyst and sepia is used satisfactorily. Several portraits in dull gold frames show to advantage against this background. The woodwork is painted a soft cream color. Natural colored silk and wool casement cloth glass curtains are edged with a narrow block fringe of the same color. Amethyst velvet makes the draperies. Drawn up near an open fireplace is a comfortable sofa upholstered in a deep amethyst block patterned mohair. One large arm chair is done in an exceptionally handsome tapestry, and another is in the drapery material. The remainder of the furniture is mahogany. Tables holding lamps and decorative accessories are conveniently placed. Deep amethyst carpeting is supplemeated by interesting Oriental rugs.

Adjoining this living room is a delightful library. Woodwork and the many built-in, open book shelves are finished in dark walnut. A coarse, ecru grass cloth wall covering is used. At the windows are curtains of heavy ecru linen, decorated with crewel embroidery in deep, rich tones. They are finished at the edges with a thick, short, worsted fringe in many colors. Pulley cords are arranged so the curtains may be drawn together at will. A large wing chair is upholstered in the same embroidered linen. Matching the deep red of the crewel work is the velvet upholstery of a comfortable sofa. Deep blue wool damask covers a luxurious arm chair. Lamp shades and shields are made of parchment, decorated with bands of color, matching those in the draperies. A full, rich tone is given to the room by means of a large Bokhara rug.

The dining room and a charming little breakfast room are across the hall. In the dining room, woodwork and dado are painted cream color. The wall space above is covered with an interesting Japanese tea box paper in gold. It is finished with a coat of shellac, which gives it a mellow tone and a most substantial feeling. Cream colored silk and wool casement cloth, like that in the living room and hall, is used for glass curtains. Having the glass curtains alike in these three rooms which face the front of the house, produces a pleasing result from the exterior. Ample variety is given in the draperies. In this room they are made of a sumptuous black and gold damask. Chinese Chippendale furniture is used. A Chinese rug, in soft colors, almost completely covers the floor.

For informal use is the lovely little breakfast room. Here the walls are done in a dull gold grass cloth. Woodwork is painted sage green. Gold colored gauze makes glass curtains. Sage green and gold sunfast, in a damask pattern, is used for long draperies. The furniture is painted sage green, high lighted with gold, and decorated with floral motifs. Plate glass protects the table top. Chair seats are upholstered in mohair, in a jacquard pattern, in sage green and gold color. The floor is made of deep green square tiles, set in old ivory mortar. It is unrugged.

All of the bedrooms are charming. In the largest of them is used a wall paper showing clusters of flowers on an ivory ground. Woodwork is painted ivory. Glass curtains are of ivory point d'esprit. Changeable dull rose and gold taffeta make the draperies and covers for the twin beds. A Dresden lamp, on the night stand, has a soft rose silk shade, decorated with French silk flowers. Shields on the side lights and a shade for the drop light over the dressing table are made to match. The furniture, of French design, is made of walnut. A large, plain, mulberry rug covers the floor, leaving a border of about eighteen inches around the edge.

Expressly furnished for the young man of the house is the bedroom shown in today's illustration. The wall paper is in two tones of gray. Draperies at the windows are of a semi-glazed chintz, flowered, on a blue-green ground, and topped by shaped lambrequins, which are finished with an edging of plain raspberry red chintz. Glass curtains are dispensed with. The furniture is mahogany. A cover on the bed is made of raspberry red poplin, piped with blue-green, and finished with a narrow, multi-colored upholsterers' fringe. A large, comfortable arm chair, upholstered in the flowered chintz, is accompanied by a low table, which holds books and a lamp. Deep red pottery lamps, on commodes at each side of the bed, have parchment shades. Plain blue-green chenille, in a deep, dark tone, covers the floor.

American colonial furniture, in a modern adaptation, furnishes the young daughter's room. The wall paper shows tiny sprigs of flowers on a pale gray ground. Woodwork is ivory. At the windows are ivory silk gauze glass curtains. Producing an unusual effect are overdraperies of silk gauze, showing fairylike rainbow colors in an ombré treatment. They are finished at the edges with a French ribbon trim. Wooden cornices topping these draperies are painted leaf green, outlined with a fine band of straw color and decorated with floral medallions.

The bed and one chair are painted in the same way. Plain leaf green green wool chenille rugs are used.

Gray Hair Tinted for 50¢

Why pay $10 to the hair dresser?

In Just 5 Minutes

Don't throw your money away by needlessly paying from ten to fifteen dollars to a hairdresser to restore your gray, faded, or dingy hair to its youthful shade and lustre. Every woman can now immediately bring back the original color to her hair right in the privacy of her own home—for a few cents.

BROWNATONE, the one guaranteed harmless hair tint, in just five minutes, will transform gray or streaky hair to any beautiful shade that you favor. And there isn't the slightest danger of poisoning, which sometimes results from the harmful dyes used by many professionals. Just sit before your dressing table and brush BROWNATONE through the gray strands. Immediately the color will start to develop. Even your closest friends will be unable to detect that your hair is tinted.

BROWNATONE is so perfect—so precise in shade—so easy to apply—permeates gray hair in such a natural way—that without any previous experience, you are sure to obtain professional results.

They Say:

"I can recommend BROWNATONE in the highest terms. It is easily the best thing for the purpose that I ever used." Mrs. C. E. Goodlet, Strother, S. C.

"I never found its equal for tinting hair and stopping hair from falling out. I have used BROWNATONE about ten years and can give it a 100 percent endorsement." — H. Butterbaugh, Commodore, Pa.

BROWNATONE is guaranteed harmless to hair, scalp or skin. It is so scientific in formula that self hair tinting treatments cannot be discovered in strongest lights—even in sunlight. It is the one bottle preparation that does not require the use of harmful peroxide, which must first be applied with many hair coloring preparations.

Test it for yourself. You will be amazed and delighted at the marvelous results you will so easily obtain. Any shade desired from two colors. (Blonde to Medium Brown), (Dark Brown to Black). Sold on Money Back Guarantee. At drug and toilet counters. Two sizes: 50c. and $1.50—the larger size containing five times as much.

Easy to Apply, Wonderful in Results

BROWNATONE penetrates all of the hair. It does not wash off—will not fade or rub because the hair absorbs it. Only one application is necessary. It permits waving, marcelling, curling, shampooing and is even unaffected by perspiration. Further applications needed only as new hair grows.

MY GREATEST THRILL—A Boy's Lucky Break

My Greatest Thrill

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter, we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

A Practical Joker.

I was visiting my girl friend whose brother is a great cut-up and keeps the family in round eyed terror of his next prank. We were sitting up late telling ghost stories and weird tales and finally Gracie and I went upstairs to bed. We felt our way along the dark hall and into the bedroom where we groped around for the chain that pulls the electric light.

Suddenly my fingers clutched something soft and warm and furry. With a wild scream I fled from the room and down stairs with Gracie tearing along behind me, sobbing at some unknown danger. Terrified, we waited while the family investigated.

Result: Brother had tied a dead mouse to the light cord with a fancy red ribbon! I. S. J.

In a Runaway Car.

By far the "greatest thrill" of my life occurred last summer while visiting some friends in Denver. We had motored to the mountains and spent a wonderful day and were returning by way of Bear Creek canyon in the evening. The driver was having trouble with the car when a motor cop stopped to help us, and suggested pushing the machine over the edge of a descent and that the momentum of the car would start the engine.

Well, it did, but imagine our horror when we found the driver had no control of the car. The brakes wouldn't work, a rear hub was broken and we were a runaway machine with the mountains on one side, the canyon 2,000 feet deep on the other, a sharp curve about 100 yards ahead—every revolution of the wheels taking us nearer to certain death.

I covered my eyes for the end, but Fate was kind, for the driver, seeing a little jut in the side of the mountain, managed to turn the car in and the impact killed the engine. We were saved. K. C.

Working on the Railroad.

Years ago I was working for a short while with a gang of hobos laying steel on a railroad between St. Louis and Cape Girardeau.

On my first morning the boss sent a number of us up the track with a half dozen steel rails on a push car. One of the men was supposed to have charge of the rest of us.

The region was hilly and the road rather crooked, so that you could not see far up the track. Presently we were startled by the whistle of a freight train and at the same time we saw it rounding the curve altogether too close for comfort.

The "straw" boss rushed forward, frantically waving a red flag. There was nothing for the rest of us to do but scatter, which we did like scared chickens.

We left the push car and steel rails on the track. I climbed over the right of way fence and did not feel safe till quite a way beyond it. I never expected anything any more in my life than I did to see those freight cars pile up on top of one another and come rolling down the embankment.

The engineer set the brakes hard and he and the fireman got down on the lower steps of the engine ready to jump. The engine hit the push car, shoving it along ahead. Some of the rails got jammed through the bars of the pilot and got tangled up in the machinery of the engine. One rail was bent like a fish hook. But the engine did not leave the track and it presently came to a stop. It was disabled, though, and another had to be sent for to take the train on.

As one engineer expressed it, "A fellow thinks some pretty d——d funny things when something of this kind is about to happen." C. J. B.

In a Storm.

My greatest thrill happened about four years ago. I went boat riding with a friend of mine who was eight years older than I. We started up the river and had gone about two miles when a storm came up.

I became frightened and hollered. In a few minutes the wind blew the boat over, throwing us in the stream. I could not swim, but my friend could swim a little. He grabbed hold of me, but the wind was so strong he could not make much headway. He managed to get hold of a floating log and by this method we were both saved. R. J. H.

Child in a Runaway.

My friend, who lives on a farm, asked me to take charge of her four year old child at her home while she and her husband went to the city for a day. The little boy asked for permission to ride into the corn field with the hired man as had been his habit of doing.

The man lifted the child on the wagon and stepped back to pick up his gloves which he had dropped. The horses suddenly became frightened and started running wildly down the lane.

My greatest thrill was one of terror to see the child intrusted to my care being carried swiftly down the road and expecting any moment to see him fall and be run over, or to have the wagon strike a stump and turn over on the child. Grateful indeed was I to see the little boy running to meet me uninjured after the team had been caught. L. M. W.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

You Look Years Younger—Assist Nature if she needs your help. Obtain an ounce of Mercolized Wax from your druggist or department store, use as directed—and you will bless the day that you made the acquaintance of this wonder working product.

Music Events Crowd Critic's Calendar

By Eric DeLamarter

ONE of our earnest townsmen, whose ascetic thought processes and Calvinistic speech strip many over-stuffed truths to their stark nakedness, recently offered the suggestion that music has the least general appeal of the arts. This remark had faded out of my memory until this afternoon, when reams of announcements littered this desk, detailing festivals, summer operas, summer concerts, relevant and irrelevant gabbis of what next year will bring forth. My mind frisked back over the few weeks since Mr. Moore, the rightful and soon returning denizen of this column, at the moment somewhere in Italy, left me to wrestle with its problems.

EDWARD JOHNSON will sing at the Evanston Festival soon. [Mishkin Photo.]

It seems as though each evening had brought forth into public performance a different choral society, or another orchestra, myriad soloists, new operatic efforts; that my days on the long defunct Inter Ocean in similar duty relatively were holidays for my ears, even though a greater strain on the dictionary. Think of all the industrial and commercial organizations in this city alone who sponsor their orchestras or their choral societies: don't forget such a significant institution as the Business Men's orchestra of tomorrow evening's concert, under the conducting of Clarence Evans, a musician whose ideals are as remorselessly high as his methods of achieving those ideals are remorselessly exacting. And, beyond all this amateur effort, there is the tremendously complex and comprehensive professional effort.

Submitted, for some first class wrangler to take into pow-wow with our friend: Neither in any other art, nor in any sport, is there so much active participation of the amateur as there is in the musical art.

A Fascinating Festival at Quebec.

My earnest friend's remark is only part of the text this morning. A document from Quebec on this desk is indicative of the wonderfully widened interest and participation in music during the last quarter century. It is the "Canadian Folk-Song and Handicrafts Festival" to be held in Quebec May 20-22. The score of Vaughan Williams' "A Sea Symphony," to be sung for the first time in this country at the Evanston Festival within a fortnight, lies beside the proclamation. Here are exemplified the two extremes of community musical interest—and both are "off-season" functions!

The matter of this Quebec festival is fascinating. Sound musicians, with laymen of various interests, are behind it. Aiding the village singers, coming even from far Gaspé and Baie Saint Paul, are such composers as Healy Willan, Ernest MacMillan, and Oscar O'Brien; the Hart House String Quartet, acclaimed here this season; the chansonnier, Charles Marchand; Mlle. Juliette Gaultrier, Mme. Jeanne Dusseau, known to our opera public; Rodolphe Plamondon, tenor of the Paris Opera, and others of importance.

These songs are woven through the early history of this, our immediate country. The first white men to penetrate into the middle west and reach the places now known as Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, and Duluth came as canoe men under the leadership of explorers like La Salle, Father Hennepin, Radisson, and Du Lhut up the great inland waterway of the rivers St. Lawrence, Ottawa, and Mattawa, then over Lake Nipissing and down the French river into Lake Huron and so through the great lakes.

As They Paddled Their Canoes.

As they paddled their canoes these French-Canadian voyageurs sang the songs of old France, many of which are still heard in Quebec and among the French-Canadian communities in Vermont and Massachusetts. Some, too, among the Acadian French who were exiled from the land of Evangeline in Nova Scotia to New Orleans. A selection of thirty of these songs has been made and translated into singable English by a Canadian author, John Murray Gibbon, with harmonization by Geoffrey O'Hara and Oscar O'Brien. So that round the piano in any of our homes we can hear the old canoe men's songs as they echoed on the Illinois and Mississippi rivers 300 years ago.

Does your memory contain this text of more than a century ago:

Faintly as tolls the evening chime,
Our voices keep tune and our oars keep time.
Soon as the woods on shore look dim,
We'll sing at St. Ann's our parting hymn.

"I wrote these words to an air which our boatmen sang to us frequently," wrote Thomas Moore. "The wind was so unfavorable that they were obliged to row us all the way, and we were five days descending the river from Kingston to Montreal. . . . Our voyageurs had good voices, and sung perfectly in tune together." This was in 1804, and the original French verses to the tune ("Dans mon chemin j'ai rencontré") indicate a much greater antiquity to the song.

The wonder to me is that this treasury of tunes and texts has not been drawn upon by some composer with failings toward opera composition; for pathos, passion, and the picturesque are at his hand.

An Opportunity for Vaughan Williams.

Possibly Vaughan Williams would be the man, could he extricate himself from the British tradition sufficiently to lose the square-toed method of his thought—an Anglo-Saxon earnestness characteristic of all the English fraternity excepting possibly Holst—and acquire a bit of the Gallic touch-and-go persisting in these Canadian folk-tunes even today.

Vaughan Williams knows the solo voice, its best treatment, and its effective background. If you recall his "On Wenlock Edge," a song cycle for tenor, you'll agree. His "A London Symphony" has been one of the quickest orchestral successes of the last half dozen years. And his new "Choral Symphony" shows the same imagination and the same authority in the treatment of voices in mass.

It is a comprehensive score, with large chorus, small chorus, two soloists—Florence Austral, soprano, and Horace Stevens, baritone, are announced for this performance—and the modern orchestra. The text is taken from verse by our first lyric socialist, Walt Whitman. It has the usual symphonic division into four movements, and the third even wears a sub-caption "Scherzo." The first movement begins with the lines:

Behold, the sea itself,
And on its limitless, heaving breast, the ships.

The second, the customary slow movement, takes up the same beginning:

On the beach at night alone,
As the old mother sways her to and fro singing her husky song.

And the scherzo, with a remarkable wave effect created in the voices in the orchestra, begins:

After the sea ship, after the whistling winds,
After the white-gray sails taut to their spars and ropes.

Finally, the philosopher, in all his natural vein of prophetic rhapsody:

O seat Rondure, swimming in space,
Covered all over with visible power and beauty,
Alternate light and day and the teeming spiritual darkness.

Something over 600 amateurs will learn the Whitman verses for this occasion, and a vast acreage of consonant sound about seven times that number will listen. Pretty soon.

GOOD MORNING!

"An Irish director from Paris, a wrestler from Greece, a strong man from Russia, a giant from the wilds of Utah, and an assortment of actors from various parts of America make up the personnel of the company which filmed 'The Tender Hour.'"

I quote from a press sheet.

BILLIE DOVE is Marcia Kane in "The Tender Hour." [Freulich Photo.]

Your immediate inquiry is, of course, "Where does the 'tender hour' come in?" To which I reply that it's there, all right, but is so completely surrounded by orgies, fist fights, pageants, Roman soldiers, Egyptian dancing girls, subterranean passages, low comedians, Nubian slaves, to say nothing of 6,000 extras, that it does not, so to speak, stand out in bold relief.

Somebody remarked recently that the idea that pictures were made FOR 10 year old minds was all wrong; that they were made BY 10 year old minds. "The Tender Hour" decidedly bears out this thought.

The heroine is Marcia Kane, an American girl. The villain is an expatriated Russian grand duke whom she has married at her mercenary father's urgent behest, believing the man she loves—young Wally Mackenzie, also of America—is dead. He isn't. Dad and Grand Duke have deceived her.

* *

You're Introduced to a Sad Bride.

As the picture opens you discover her all in her wedding gown and veil, just after the marriage ceremony, pacing her gorgeous boudoir, a sad, sweet sight, weeping over the picture of her Wally. This she is about to consign tenderly to the grate fire when——

Door opens, and in walks Wally!

But, alas, Marcia is married now! Broken hearted Wally goes away to drown his sorrow in the French cafés (all this is in Paris) and Marcia confronts her husband, when he enters, with the news that never, never, never will she live with him, liar that he is.

"I won't even go to your villa"—it is just outside of Paris—"with you!" she cries.

But he says, showing his teeth in a nasty grin, "O, yes, you will, my lady! For the sake of Mrs. Grundy, you will go! But I promise you shall not be molested."

They hie them to the villa, a startling combination of Westminster Abbey-Cecil De Mille interiors at their yes-est and Nero's banquet hall just before Rome burned, and here the lady is exceedingly unhappy, though she does manage to evade the Grand Duke. For he is, after all, well cared for by a number of dancing girls who, in the garb of maids, "do little things around the house," as the duke tells his bride when he presents them to her upon her arrival. (How their perfect service must have made the censors cringe!)

Back Home to Godfather.

Well—the orgies she sees prove too much for Marcia. She flies to the home of her godfather, the Vicomte Rene Laguaste Chinilly, who is interested in theatricals and has promised the Grand Duke to put on a society pageant that shall feature his beautiful wife.

When Marcia arrives—there is Wally. The Vicomte leaves them to a tender hour upon which the Grand Duke bursts in all his fury.

Now godfather is a good old actor, himself. Debonairly he assures the ferocious noble that the two are merely rehearsing for the pageant which he himself has ordered.

It looks fishy to the Grand Duke, but he consents to be calmed down. He departs with many a backward glance—and the rehearsal goes on.

And so does the story—on and on—through an accruing maze of elaborate idiocies that are ended finally by some rowdy American friends of Wally's "persuading" the Grand Duke to agree to a divorce.

It's Hard on Billy Dove.

It honestly hurts to be so unfriendly to this, Billy Dove's first starring venture, for if ever anybody deserved a splendid picture in which to star she is that person. You know how beautiful she is and if you don't happen to be aware that she is one of the most capable of the screen actresses, let me tell you she is. To me her charm is the production's ONLY charm.

The acting of the principals is good. The low comedians are terrible—the fault of their rôles. The way money has been lavished on meaningless, unnecessary, and suggestive sets and scenes is a shame, as well as an insult to the average intelligence.

In such a film it doesn't really matter who the hero is. So round faced Ben Lyons, who always looks like somebody's nice little boy all fixed up for Sunday school, does as well as another. There's not a thing the matter with his work. But, young as Billy Dove is, he still seems ridiculously childish beside her, and in the fight scenes where he bests the powerful Russian, impersonated by Montagu Love—you know Montagu—Ben proves to be the only real laugh of the production.

"The Tender Hour" is an exhibition of a producer getting off on the wrong foot—right! Assisted by "an Irish director from Paris, a wrestler from Greece, a strong man from Russia, a giant from the wilds of Utah, and an assortment of actors from various parts of America."

On Eugenics

By H. L. Mencken.

THE more I plow through the literature confected by the eugenists and their allies, the birth controllers, the more I am convinced that their great cause is mainly blather. Somehow, what they write so indignantly always reminds me of the music of certain of the so-called moderns, who wander around in a maze of tonalities without landing anywhere. In none of their books have I ever found a clear definition of the superiority they talk about so copiously. At one time they seem to identify it with high intelligence, at another time with character, i. e., moral stability, and yet another time with mere fame, i. e., luck. Was Napoleon I. a superior man, as I am privately inclined to believe, along with many of the eugenists? Then so was Aaron Burr, if in less measure. Was Paul of Tarsus? Then so was Brigham Young. Were the Gracchi? Then so were Karl Marx and William Jennings Bryan.

This matter of superiority, indeed, presents cruel and ineradicable difficulties. If it is made to run with service to the human race the eugenist is soon mired, for many men held to be highly useful are obviously second rate, and leave third rate progeny behind them; for example, Gen. Grant. And if it is made to run with mere intellectual brilliance and originality the troubles that loom up are just as serious, for men of that rare quality are generally felt to be dangerous, and sometimes they undoubtedly are. The case of Friedrich Wilhelm Nietzsche is in point. I suppose that no rational person today, not even an uncured Liberty loan orator or dollar a year man, would argue seriously that Nietzsche was inferior. On the contrary, his extraordinary gifts are unanimously admitted. But what of his value to the human race? And what of his eugenic fitness?

It is not easy to answer these questions. Nietzsche, in fact, preached a gospel that, to most human beings, is unbearable, and it will probably remain unbearable for centuries to come. Its adoption by Dr. Coolidge, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, would plunge this republic into dreadful woe. And Nietzsche himself was a chronic invalid who died insane—the sort of wreck who, had he lived into our time, would have been a customer of chiropractors. Worse, he suffered from a malady of a scandalous nature, and of evil effects upon the sufferer's offspring. Was it good or bad luck for the world, eugenically speaking, that he was a bachelor?

But their vagueness about the exact nature of superiority is not the only thing that corrupts the fine fury of the eugenists. Even more dismaying is their gratuitous assumption that all of the socially useful and laudable qualities (whatever they may be) are the exclusive possession of one class of men, and that the other classes lack them altogether. This is plainly not true. All that may be truthfully said of such qualities is that they appear rather more frequently in one class than in another. But they are rare in all classes, and the difference in the frequency of their occurrence between this class and that one is not very great, and of little genuine importance.

If all the biologists in the United States were hanged tomorrow (as has been proposed by the Mississippi clergy) and their children with them, we'd probably still have a sufficiency of biologists in the next generation. There might not be as many as we have today, but there would be enough. They would come out of the families of bricklayers and politicians, bootleggers and bond salesmen. Some of them, indeed, might even come out of the families of Mississippi ecclesiastics. For the supply of such men, like the supply of synthetic gin, always tends to run with the demand. Whenever the supply is short the demand almost automatically augments it.

Every one knows that this is true on the lower levels. Before baseball was invented there were no Ty Cobbs and Babe Ruths; now they appear in an apparently endless series. Before the Wright brothers made their first flight there were no men skilled at aviation; now there are multitudes of highly competent experts. The eugenists forget that the same thing happens on the higher levels. Whenever the world has stood in absolute need of a genius he has appeared. And though it is true that he has usually come out of the better half of humanity, it is also true that he has sometimes come out of the worse half. Beethoven was the grandson of a cook and the son of a drunkard, and Lincoln's forbears for many generations were nobodies.

The fact is that the difference between the better sort of human beings and the lesser sort, biologically speaking, is very slight. There may be, at the very top, a small class of people whose blood is preponderantly superior and distinguished, and there may be, at the bottom, another class whose blood is almost wholly debased, but both are very small. The folks between are all pretty much alike. The baron has a great deal of peasant blood in him and the peasant has some blood that is blue. The natural sinfulness of man is enough to make sure of that. No man in this world can ever be quite certain that he is the actual great-great-grandson of the great-great-grandfather whose memory he venerates.

Thus when the relatively superior and distinguished class ceases to be fecund (a phenomenon now visible everywhere in the world) natural selection comes to the rescue by selecting out and promoting individuals from the classes below. These individuals are probably just as sound in blood as any one in the class they enter. Their sound blood has been concealed, perhaps for generations, but it has been there all the time. If Abraham Lincoln's ancestry were known with any certainty it would probably be found to run back to manifestly able and distinguished men. There are many more such hidden family trees in the folk.

The eugenists simply overlook them. They are also singularly blind to many familiar biological phenomena—for example, the appearance of mutations or sports. It is not likely that a commonplace family will produce a genius, but nevertheless it is by no means impossible: the thing has probably happened more than once. They forget, too, the influence of environment in human society. Mere environment, to be sure, cannot produce a genius, but it can certainly help him enormously after he is born. If a potential Wagner were born to a Greek bootblack in Toledo, O., tomorrow, the chances of his coming to fruition and fame would be at least even. But if he were born an Arab in the Libyan desert or to a fundamentalist in Rhea county, Tennessee, the chances are that he would be a total loss.

The eugenists constantly make the false assumption that a healthy degree of human progress demands a large supply of first rate men. Here they succumb to the modern craze for mass production. Because a hundred policemen, or garbage men, or bootleggers are manifestly better than one, they conclude absurdly that a hundred Beethovens would be better than one. But this is not true. The actual value of a genius often lies in his singularity. If there had been a hundred Beethovens the music of all of them would be very little known today, and so its civilizing effect would be appreciably less than it is.

The number of first rate men necessary to make a high civilization is really very small. If the United States could produce one Shakespeare or Newton or Bach or Michelangelo or Vesalius a century it would be doing better than any nation has ever done in history. Such culture as we have is due to a group of men so small that all of them alive at one time could be hauled in a single Pullman train. Once I went through "Who's Who in America," hunting for the really first rate men among its 27,000 names—that is, for the men who had really done something unique and difficult, and of value to the human race. I found 200. The rest of the 27,000 were simply respectable blanks.

An overproduction of geniuses, indeed, would be very dangerous, for though they make for progress they also tend to disturb the peace. Imagine a country housing 100 head of Aristotles! It would be as unhappy as a city housing 100 head of Jesse Jameses. Even quasi-geniuses are a great burden upon society. There are in the United States today 1,500 professional philosophers—that is, men who make their livings at the trade. The country would be far better off if all save two or three of them were driving taxicabs or serving with the Rum Fleet.

Margaret Anglin Wins Drama Laurels

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—If you were asked, since asking questions has become the fad of the hour, to name America's greatest actress, who would be your choice?

You probably would answer that there are no more great actresses, because, in the accepted sense, there are no more great plays in which actresses are called upon to prove their greatness.

Mrs. Fiske, after an unsuccessful search for a modern play suitable to her gifts, was forced to revive "Ghosts," to which this particular correspondent believes she is none too well suited.

Ethel Barrymore, having failed in her attempt at Shakespearean rôles playing opposite Walter Hampden, has fallen back on the brightly written but comparatively trivial social comedy, "The Constant Wife."

MARGARET ANGLIN plays "Electra" to an enthusiastic audience. [Charlotte Fairchild Photo.]

Jane Cowl, after an encouraging start with Juliet, failed to maintain the lofty heights with "Antony and Cleopatra" and "Pelleas and Melisande" and was glad to find "The Road to Rome."

Katherine Cornell, Pauline Lord, Alice Brady, Laurette Taylor, Helen Hayes, Jean Eagels, Helen Menken, Lynn Fontanne, Laura Hope Crews, Eva Le Gallienne are all in the second flight. Gifted young women, capable of playing modern heroines better than any of their older sisters would have been, but of limited range and experience, largely, be it admitted, because their opportunities have been limited.

But hold! There is one. Margaret Anglin is her name, and though she was Canadian born, we can claim her, for all her stage life she has spent with us.

There Were Cheers for "Electra."

Miss Anglin came back to New York this week for two performances of the "Electra" of Sophocles. These were given in the Metropolitan opera house, as a benefit for an association of hopeful citizens who hope to carry culture into the byways and the Chautauqua circuits and give the people something to think about beside floods, and corn crops, third terms for the canny Coolidge and the costly failure of prohibition.

There were thirty-five hundred persons present the night I was there, and they were the least bronchial and restless audience of the week. From the moment Miss Anglin, the mourning weeds of the vengeful daughter of Agamemnon hiding the lines dieting has failed to correct, edged her way through the doors of the palace until she stood with arms uplifted exultantly in the general direction of her gods' abiding place, that huge audience was stilled and thrilled.

It was another triumph for the first actress of this day, and it was mightily impressive. At the close of the performance there were cheers for her that must have been as sweet to her ears as those other cheers she heard the night she first played Roxane to Richard Mansfield's Cyrano, or those that proclaimed her the greatest emotionalist of that day when she dragged a nerve-wracked body across the floor of Mrs. Dane's apartment in "Mrs. Dane's Defense."

Next season, if present plans carry, Miss Anglin is to tour with Mrs. Fiske and William Faversham in a revival of "The Merry Wives of Windsor." And unless this prophet is completely out of touch with the sentiment of his time, that will be the supreme attraction of the theater season of 1927-'28.

The Audience Is Suspected.

The drama continues to spill over into the audience. A new play called "Triple Crossed" has followed "The Spider," and, again, following a murder committed on the stage, the audience is made suspect and technically placed under arrest by one of those barking police inspectors who threatens to jail any one caught leaving the house.

I'm not so keen, personally, for these auditorium plays. There is usually an actor planted somewhere in my immediate vicinity who is dragged out of his seat and hustled to the stage. Heavens, suppose they make a mistake some night! I am not at all sure my coat collar would stand the strain, and I'm sure my nerves would snap. And the effort of trying to sit still and look as unlike a criminal, or an actor, as possible, is beginning to tell.

"Triple Crossed" is not as good a play as "The Spider" Not near. Its author, F. S. Merlin, insists he submitted it for copyright in 1922, and has the documents to prove it. But if the "Spider" folks have stolen his thunder, they have improved upon it as much as Shakespeare improved "The Duke of Malta," when he made it over into "The Merchant of Venice."

"Triple Crossed" starts as a conventional triangle play. Husband away on a trip, lover waiting around the corner, husband back suddenly finds lover in wife's arms. Or vice versa. Out with the revolver, lover cowering, husband threatening to shoot. And then, to prove he is not a killer, he snaps the gun to show it is unloaded.

This night, however, some one has slipped a loaded shell into the gun, and the villain is accidentally shot through the heart. Then the police and theatrical pandemonium. The villain, it transpires, was hated by half the company, and by the shooting hero particularly.

Finally they reënact the crime in the hope of uncovering the person who changed the guns. And the second time the villain really does die. The stage cocktails have been poisoned by the property man.

It comes out all right at 10:30, and the audience seemed to enjoy the show.

Little Theater Tournament.

Seventeen Little theater groups have been competing this week in the fifth annual tournament for four $200 cash prizes and the Belasco cup, emblematic of the Little theater championship for the year.

There were entrants from as far away as Wellwyn Garden City, England, who won the British championship; Shreveport, La.; Memphis, Tenn.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Wellesley, Mass.; Tulsa, Okla., and Charlotte, N. C.

From what I saw of them the amateurs have improved more in their playing than they have in their play writing. The original plays were, most of them, pretty poor. But the acting, in many instances, was excellent.

The winners of the four cash prizes, the order in which they were named by the five judges, were the Memphis players, presenting a timely tragedy of flood days along the Mississippi called "The Delta Wife," by Walter McClellan; the English group, offering one of the few comedies, "Mr. Sampson," by Charles Lee; the Mount Kisco players, playing "The Immortal Beloved," a Beethoven legend, by Martia Leonard, and "The Fool's Errand," written by Eulalie Spence and presented by a company of colored actors from Harlem.

The colored folk were the only entrants from the New York district among the prize winners, though a group representing the Young Men's Hebrew association won honorable mention for their performance of a Kenyon Nicholson playlet, "Confession."

In the finals, the Belasco trophy was awarded to the English players and "Mr. Sampson," the comedy they brought over from Wellwyn Garden City, which is a suburb about twenty miles from London. The cup therefore goes out of the country for the first time.

The Dallas Little theater players, who have been consistent winners in previous tournaments, did not contest this years. They wanted to give the other groups a chance, so they wrote.

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

MR. KEENAN and his co-performers will break in "Different Women" Saturday afternoon in South Bend. . . . One of Miss Laurette Taylor's daughters is gone on the stage. . . . The Manhattan Spaniards failed to respond at the box-office to the visit of the Spanish Art Theater, which accordingly shut down last night after a fortnight; whereas, by all accounts, the same Manhattan Spaniards are kind to the Messrs. Shubert's show named "A Night in Spain." . . . And this leads directly to the reflection that allen players other than English haven't of recent years been doing so well in this United States, and to the related reflection that there really isn't any reason why they should. . . . Other things tossed last night into one or the other of New York's well-known rivers were "Yours Truly," which had Leon Errol in it, and was reported successful, although it now turns out that it hasn't been; "Cherry-Blossoms," an operetta based on the vanilla-extract called "The Willow-Tree," in which Miss Fay Bainter performed here about ten years ago; this season's issue of Earl Carroll's Vanities, which had nothing in its favor save the presence of Moran and Mack, whose separation wasn't permitted to become permanent; "The Devil in the Cheese," a piece by Tom Cushing that had quite a run in a theater with 299 seats; "The House of Shadows," "Julie," "What Anne Brought Home," and, as told the other day, Lemaire's Affairs, so prosperous last Summer in Chicago. . . . Eighteen of Manhattan's sixty-odd theaters are shuttered, with others being used for films; and he is a smart New-Yorker who can keep accurate account of the new theaters planned, designed, or actually in the course of erection down there. . . . Keen disciples of this column who possess a flair for simple arithmetic may figure for themselves that the aforesaid eighteen theaters closed in Manhattan are three in excess of all the theaters susceptible of being closed in Chicago; and, in working out of the problem, it is to be kept in mind that the Apollo and the La Salle are gone incurably movie.

CHARLES WALDRON He's acting with effect as the Governor in "The Noose."

Correction of a Stupidity.

Excessive Friday mail for this desk was due to my having described Louis Broomfield's "The Green Bay Tree" (which he is footlighting as "The House of Women") as the reason why this year's Pulitzer prize was given to him. Why I made this slip is beyond any explanation I may offer; for I had just ended a reading of the prize-winning tale, "Early Autumn," that set me to wondering again if the Pulitzer jurymen are consciously comic.

Reproof from Box 86.

A bitter person who cares to be known to me merely as Box 86 of Notre Dame University chides me for having recently kidded the affectation of writers for print who tell of "the 'Electra' of Sophocles" and of "the 'Frogs' of Aristophanes" when they mean merely Sophocles' "Electra" and Aristophanes' "The Frogs." Box 86 bitterly tells me that Euripides, also, wrote a play named "Electra," and "that it is necessary at times to differentiate between the two." It is, Box 86; and, what's the matter with the celebrated possessive case? My point was not specific as to "the 'Electra' of Sophocles," but general as to more than nine in every ten references in newspapers and magazines to the entire théâtre of the Greeks. When Martin Harvey was here, about three years ago, I more than once encountered in newspapers the information that he would appear in "the celebrated Greek tragedy entitled 'The CEdipus Rex of Sophocles.'"

On Leaving the Theater Before the "Tag."

Mr. Ashton Stevens, telling in the Herald and Examiner how Miss Amy Leslie's first work as the drama-critic of the Daily News consisted of the account of a performance that hadn't been given because the players were snowbound hundreds of miles from Chicago, quotes Miss Leslie as saying: "When I see youngsters like you and Fred leaving a performance before it is over to make your morning deadline, I think of what Butch White said to me that day." What Butch White said to her that day was good stuff, and was to the effect that a good critic was a good reporter, and that a good reporter wouldn't fail to see the rise of the first curtain and the fall of the last.

When, Dear Amy and Dear Ashton, you see a youngster like me leaving a performance before it is over, you may from now on assure yourselves that I'm not leaving because of the deadline. THE TRIBUNE is a civilized institution, knows that drama and opera are late chores for the reporter, and places its deadline with due consideration of the fact. When a new play or an exhibition of acting seems to me to require me to remain in the theater so late that I may not hope to write and to beat the deadline, I remain in the theater, and the deadline isn't crashed. When a play that is started at 8:30 isn't finished by 11:15, the duty of the manager is, plainly, to start the play earlier than 8:30; not in the specific interest of the reporters for morning papers, but in the interest of commerce at the box-office. Experience through the ages teaches that three hours, even with liberal time out for entr'actes, about defines the capacity of the average audience for enjoying itself in contemplation of a play. . . .

Now-and-again, delays in transportation, accidents to paraphernalia, incompetent stage-hands, actors with brain-storm, or happenings not necessarily described as "acts of God" or "force majeure" may make for a late start and a midnight ending; but they do not constitute a reason why THE TRIBUNE should be annoyed to the extent of either moving its deadline on drama or printing in the morning a report based on the reviewer's having seen but part of a performance which, for all the purposes of good reporting, requires that all of it be seen. And, in such cases, I am in my seat until the end, and regard myself as the best kind of good reporter by holding the review for another day.

A youngster like me, my Estimable Colleagues, may have reasons other than the deadline for quitting after the penultimate act of a play or at any earlier or later period in the course of the performance. "The Little Spitfire" or "Not Herbert!" were a reason; if Mr. Sothern doesn't manage to be good as (say) Malvolio or Petruchio by 10:00 o'clock, there is no reason beneath Heaven to suppose that he will be good later in the evening,—assuming, of course, that the reporter knows what in the play is to come. A play already seen, although it with another cast, were a reason. And so on, and so on, and so on: reasons multiply even as I write. . . . I recall Mr. Eric DeLamarter's confessing to me one night in the Auditorium that he never found out that "Aida" possessed a last act until after he gave up being music-critic of THE TRIBUNE; but even the fact that "Aida" is one of the longest of the good operas doesn't persuade me that the trouble lay in THE TRIBUNE's deadline on the stage-arts so much as in Mr. DeLamarter's attitude toward that deadline.

More Literary Actors.

Leslie Howard is credited with having written a play "Murray Hill," and Julius Tannen with having written a revue, "Boudoirs and Boulevards of 1928." . . . And although Robert A. Simon, the music-critic, has written criticisms for it, I think Mr. Tannen's title is the worst for a revue I've ever encountered.

Experiment with a "nationality" concert last season at Ravinia was made with a program of music by Polish composers, the Polish arts club being the most interested party southwest of the footlights. Ina Bourskaya, born in Poland, though a resident of Russia since her childhood, was the soloist.

though a resident of Russia since her childhood, was the soloist.

Several thousand Chicagoans of Polish birth or descent were present, and Felix Borowski, the famous local Polish composer, was featured during the festivities. The experiment was considered so highly successful that a much more comprehensive scheme of "nationality concerts" is planned for the coming season—even including an "American day" to cap the climax.

News of Singers.

Speaking of Miss Bourskaya, we are reminded that at present she is on a long concert tour, after a saddening visit to Russia of two years ago. And it may be of interest to note that Julia Claussen also is on tour in concert. Elizabeth Rethberg, at the moment, is singing at the Dresden Opera. Mary Lewis (Mrs. Michael Bohnen) is on her honeymoon in Europe. Lucrezia Bori is "visitin' 'round," as they used to say on Frank Ridgway's farm. Florence Macbeth is in New York, Tina Paggi is in Italy, and Marjorie Maxwell is in Chicago. Giovanni Martinelli is in Italy on business. Edward Johnson is "doing" such spring festivals as there are. Mario Chamlee is hoeing the honeysuckle around his Connecticut home. José Mojica is in Mexico, Ruth Page is in Bermuda, and Giuseppe Danise is "seeing America" one lap ahead of the Cerberi of the motorcycles. Mario Busiola is somewhere on this continent and Desire Defrere is in Belgium. Virgilio Lazzari is in Italy, Leon Rothier is in New York, and Vittorio Trevisan (behold a loyal Chicagoan) is living in his home only a mezzo-voce hail from the pavilion at Ravinia park.

Conductors don't count. Stage managers, also. They are the chauffeurs.

Of Imminent Concerts.

Strange situation, this! You have your choice of two performances of Mendelssohn's "Elijah" today, one in Oak Park this evening by the Festival Chorus and Choral society, Theodore Kratt, conductor, with the original Biblical text; the other will be sung this afternoon at Orchestra hall by the United Yiddish Freiheit Singing societies, Mr. Manusovich, conductor, with a new text. This new text "has been so written that it portrays Elijah as a leader in the social conflict of his time, summoning the oppressed masses to the strife for freedom." Frederik Fredriksen and Grace Henshaw-Fredriksen, violinist and pianist, will give a sonata recital at the Sherwood Recital hall, Fine Arts building this afternoon. Other concerts and recitals will be as follows:

MONDAY: Chicago Business Men's Orchestra, Clarence Evans, conductor, Orchestra hall, 8:15 p. m.

TUESDAY: Chicago Musical College orchestra, Leon Sametini and Isaac Van Grove, conductors, Orchestra hall, 8:15 p. m. Roselle Bass, pianist, Lyon & Healy hall, 8:15 p. m.

THURSDAY: Edith Mansfield, soprano, and David Lenhart, pianist, Fine Arts Recital hall, 8:15 p. m.; Columbia School of Music commencement concert, Orchestra hall, 8:15 p. m.

Among other future concerts will be one by Joseph Regan next Sunday.

It appears I have done Walter Hampden an injustice. In a paragraph a week or so ago I made reference to the many excellent plays in New York that were selling at the cut-rate brokerages at practically half-rates, and included "Caponsacchi" in this list. This I am informed by the Hampden offices, is a misstatement.

"Tickets for Mr. Hampden's performances," reads the letter, "have never been sold in the cut-rate offices, and there have been no reduced prices for 'Caponsacchi,' except in the case of large theater parties, say of 100 or more coming in a group, when we have made a reduction of one-third on the box office price. The box office prices for 'Caponsacchi' are the highest in the city for a drama, $3.85 for an orchestra seat. So far as I know, Mr. Hampden is the only New York manager who has never permitted tickets for his performances to be sold at cut rates. He does this as a matter of principle, considering that it is not fair for any one to pay twice as much to see a play as the person sitting next to him."

The more honor to the Browning drama. I am glad that one fine play out of 150, and the only poetic drama of the season, has been able to maintain itself for a matter of twenty-nine weeks at so fine a figure.

Love Across the Border.

Although it is the second week in May, and attendance at the theaters is said to be discouragingly slack, many new productions are still being made.

One of these is a piece called "Julie," which came in Monday night to startle and confound the Lyceum theater regulars with its ingeniousness and its little excuse for existence.

In this one, written by Corning White, the heroine is an honest French-Canadian who lives modestly in a shakedown cabin with her alcoholic mother and wears model gowns from Quebec.

She is presumed to be free with her love and to have borne a baby to one of the more persistent of her admirers. But in the end it is proved that not Julie, but a blonde school teacher, is the mother of the child. Julie had merely posed as the mother for $6 a week to help her dear old mother buy her liquor.

Betty Pierce, so long the Tondeleyo of "White Cargo," plays Julie, and a better cast than the piece deserves includes Alison Shipworth, Blanche Friderici, Edward Arnold, and Alexander Clark Jr.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

THAT the little La Salle will not again be used for the articulate drama is indicated by the disposition of a lease which asked for so much annual rent, coupled with prohibitive conditions, that the Messrs. Shubert felt that their reputation as good traders would disappear if they renewed their tenancy. A gentleman from Corinth or Athens or one of those places has taken the theater, and has installed movies therein. It seems that he is certain of his tenancy for eighteen months to come: after that, he may be let out on a six-months notice. . . .

And, so, there goes a retreat whose annals have their importance in the traditions and the legends and the tales of the Union Loop. As a playhouse, it was a matter of the evolutions that come from expediency in the most expedient of the businesses: it had its days as a sort of beer-hall, other days as the Orpheum, and then a quick succession of up-steps in growing popularity until it won recognition as a "producing-house" under Mort H. Singer, with Adams, Hough, and Howard as a collaboration of authors who turned out a string of popular pieces belonging to what became known as the "Chicago school." The Singer tradition was continued and, perhaps, expanded when, in 1910, Mr. Askin and his associates took over the makeshift little theater, reached by a high flight of wooden steps. "The Girl from Paris," "The Girl I Love," "Louisiana Lou," and "The Girl at the Gate,"—and all save "The Ghrl I Love" successful,—carried Mr. Askin through three seasons: then came the slump and the shrinkage from the election of Wilson as President, the necessity of rebuilding the theater to meet the technical interpretation of the safety ordinances, and a bad guess as to the "next show"—a song-and-dance version of Hoyt's "A Texas Steer"; and the valuable lease of the La Salle was turned over for the benefit of creditors, with Jones, Linick & Schaefer as the next tenants.

That firm was at the time seemingly bent on leasing everything in town save the Art Institute; but they had added nothing to the glories of the La Salle when, in 1917, Comstock & Gest took the house and started it on fresh prosperity with "Oh, Boy!" "Leave It to Jane!" and other "intimate" pieces,—although, unlike Mr. Singer and Mr. Askin, the new lessees didn't "produce" for Chicago, but brought their wares here after they had been exhibited in New-York. . . . Since the Messrs. Shubert took the theater under the Comstock & Gest lease, the theater has been used less for song-and-dance pieces than of old, and has been the place of some long and successful runs with tuneless drama.

I'm sorry to see it sold to those film-fellows from down the river—or, rather, from the Acropolis: I helped to write "Louisiana Lou" and "The Girl at the Gate," went often to the bank to put in as a result of having so helped, and took from my experiences with those pieces the notion that I made a mistake when I refused the chore of making over the Hoyt piece, although Mr. Askin and I were in heated disagreement as to just how that chore should be performed.

Two in Manhattan.

And there's nothing new this week save the fifth issue of the Grand-Street Follies in the Neighboring Playhouse, which is quite near where the southeastern corner of Manhattan Island ceases to be. I've written with enthusiasm in preceding years of the Grand-Street Follies, calling it, as it was in 1924 and 1925, the best revue of the respective years. Last year's wasn't so good, it seems: at least, it wasn't a box-office success. And this year's, no matter how good it may be nor how successful, is bound to be a sad diversion; for the Neighborhood Playhouse will pass with the final performance, whenever that may be. Mr. Mantle has explained, in his column, why it is to pass, and, although I'm most of the time all but a thousand miles away from it, I'm as sorry as if it were a Chicago institution of like merits and like achievements.

Apart from this final Grand-Street Follies, the sole "event" of the week in Manhattan will be a revival of "Ruddigore; or, The Witch's Curse," with William Danforth, Miss Sara Edwards, Craig Campbell, and Miss Violet Carlson; and this cast, on paper, doesn't make me believe that the revival will be a riot.

Shifting Playbills

Tonight:

"False-Faces" in the Studebaker.—A play by Richard Hardinge Barker and Greatrex Newman, with Charles Richman, Miss Helen Baxter, A. G. Andrews, Leo Donnelly, Miss Catharine Willard, Frederick Burton, Dallas Welford, Carleton Macy, Miss Louise Macintosh, and Robert W. Craig. Tonight's performance will be the première of the piece.

Next Sunday night:

"Different Women," with Frank Keenan, in the Woods—A new work by Eugene Walter, of whom little has been heard in recent seasons, although he had uncommon vogue in the days when he was represented on the stage by "Paid in Full," "The Wolf," and "The Easiest Way."

"Gay Paree," with Miss Sophie Tucker, in the Garrick.—The second of the Messrs. Shubert's shows to carry this title: this one has been through a run in the New-York Winter Garden; and Chick Sale is in it.

Monday, May 23:

"A Mid-Summer Night's Dream" in the Goodman Memorial.—Revival of Shakspere's fantasy for the final week of the theater's second season. . . .

"As You Like It," with Miss Alexandra Carlisle as Rosalind, will be given this week from Wednesday night till Saturday night, with a matinée Saturday. . . . The pupils-in-acting of the theater will end their season tomorrow and Tuesday nights with a revival of Stephen Phillips' "Paola and Francesca."

Sunday, May 29:

"The Wild Westcotts" in the Cort.—A comedy by Miss Anne Morrison, one of the authors of "Pigs," that was shown in New-York late in 1923. Percy Helton, Lorin Raker, Miss Allen Bradshaw, Charles Hammond, and Fred Irving Lewis are to be in it. . . . "The Little Spitfire," current in the Cort, will be retained until the 28th.

F. D.

ONE DOESN'T DANCE: T'OTHER DANCES

MISS HELEN BAXTER

MISS MARIE DAYNE

MISS BAXTER comes back to the Studebaker tonight as the principal actress in "False-Faces," which is, as an entertainment for Chicago, as new as they make 'em. She was in that theater less than a year ago, as the principal actress in the play made by Owen Davis on the basis of "The Great Gatsby," wherein she was liked by many who saw it. . . . As to Miss Dayne, she seems to be new here, save as she may have appeared without special identity in variety-shows. Anyway, she made a little success all her own with an eccentric dance in the first act at the first performance here, last week, of "The Madcap," wherein Mitzi is to be observed in the Olympic. Although in the picture Miss Dayne looks like Miss Beatrice Lillie, she really doesn't.

Here's a Castle in Spain a la Hollywood

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. [Special Correspondence.] — Edmund Lowe is enjoying a between pictures vacation, but is a bit hampered by the fact that his wife, Lilyan Tashman, is in such demand for rôles that she is not getting to spend much time with Eddie. So far they have been compromising by giving small dinner parties at their new home in Linden drive, Beverly Hills. The house is of the Spanish type. The patio is large and beautifully gardened and furnished. There is a balcony from which one can glimpse an old stone well and fountain with its tinkling drip among the surrounding fern beds.

All the furnishings for the home were brought from Europe on Eddie and Lilyan's trip abroad last summer, when Lowe was in England making "One Increasing Purpose." Included in their art treasures is an original Van Dyke, a portrait of a cavalier, which hangs in solitary splendor in Lowe's bed chamber. This room is furnished in tasteful and simple antique English oak. Below stairs there is a beautiful Spanish tile wall panel from Seville representing Murillo's painting, "The Immaculate Conception." There is another similar panel representing Saint Michael and the devil, the latter in the form of a dragon.

A French Bedroom.

Lilyan Tashman's own bedroom is done entirely in French painted furniture with Dresden lamps, figurines, needlepoint chairs with gilded frames and dainty bric-a-brac and brocaded draperies that belong to the time of Marie Antoinette.

A gorgeous bath is done in black tile and gold walls whose draperies show fawns and nymphs in black silhouette on a gold ground. White marble fittings with a large rose cushioned chair add high lights to the room. It is a fitting setting for a famous Follies beauty.

The table service is the result of long searching through art shops in Paris and other cities and holds some museum pieces. There is a silver salt cellar in the form of a conch shell held aloft by nymphs, the work of a famous Italian silversmith. The coffee service is Sevres ware. Antique fillet covers the hand carved Spanish oak table.

Much Sold Scenario.

The vicissitudes of a scenario are well illustrated by the career of "The Trail of '98," which Clarence Brown is now directing as a big special for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The story, originally by Robert W. Service, was sold five years ago by a literary agent. It brought $5,000 from B. P. Schulberg, at that time connected elsewhere than at Lasky's, where he now is studio manager.

The manuscript kicked around in Schulberg's office for some time. That gentleman finally brought it back to the agent, who resold it to Frank Lloyd at a profit for Schulberg. Lloyd held the story for a considerable time and then resold it through the same agent to Louis B. Mayer. Again there was a profit, this time to Lloyd. The final price was $18,000.

Mayer tried to resell it through the agent a third time, but meanwhile the merger, which resulted in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer combine, took place and the story was listed among Mayer's assets and became the property of the M-G-M company. After over two years it was brought forth and is now being turned into a picture. This record should be sufficient discouragement to those who think that writing and selling scenarios is easy, or in fact at all possible for an outsider.

From Villain to Hero.

Warner Oland and John Miljan, tried and true heavies around the studios, are now working together on "What Happened to Father" at Warner Brothers. Oland is being starred for the first time and the two men are having a lot of amusement out of it, for now Oland is a hero and a good boy and his years of screen villainy lie behind him.

Oland upbraids Miljan, whom he advises to give up his evil ways and reform. Incidentally, villaining has proved a profitable and popular vanture for Miljan. Last year he held the record in working in fifteen pictures. He formerly played in stock and for a time was in Richmond, Va., in the same company with Ada Adair, mother of John Gilbert.

Notes of Films and Players.

Rumors that all is not well in the home circle of Noah Beery and his wife may soon be climaxed by announcement of a trial separation. Friends of the two claim a trial separation has been going on for some time. A quarrel took place at the New Year's Mayfair party when the couple were making one of their occasional appearance in public together. At present Noah is living in the Hollywood home of the couple and Mrs. Beery at the ranch home in the San Fernando valley. Beery has been known as devoted to his wife and 14 year old son, 'Pidge," and is credited with making strenuous efforts for a reconciliation.

This column first surmised that the engagement of Rod LaRocque and Vilma Banky might be a publicity stunt. While there is every indication of romantic devotion, the wedding which was to take place in June has been indefinitely deferred. Vilma Banky states it is doubtful when the wedding bells will tinkle, because "when I am free Rod is working," and as they both have a number of pictures scheduled ahead there is no telling when they can find time for a big church wedding.

Lila Lee was seen lunching recently with Gus Edwards, the man who made her a child star years ago when she was exploited as "Cuddles Edwards."

Maude Fulton has been having some fun mystifying her friends lately. She appeared with a large and elaborate diamond ring set with several magnificent stones. After blushing and kidding for quite a while she told the astonished friends Sid Grauman was the donor of the ring. They all believed it until she followed it up with the airy statement that he was going to give her the new Chinese theater for a wedding present and then the friends got wise. The diamonds were left Miss Fulton by her mother and the local jewelers' reset them all in one ring. It was great fun while the delusion lasted, as Grauman is Hollywood's most confirmed bachelor.

Lita Gray Chaplin was present at a luncheon party given by Kathleen Clifford. It is the first appearance of Mrs. Chaplin at any of the local cafes since her charges against the comedian were filed.

Announcement is expected shortly as to what John Barrymore intends to do. If he does "Cellini," as it is likely, Estelle Taylor is the probable duchess. It is rumored at the United Artists lot that Miss Taylor and Nils Asther, the Scandinavian star recently arrived here, who played in "Topsy and Eva," will be exploited as a team similar to that Samuel Goldwyn has in Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman. Both are under contract to United Artists.

American Singers for Gotham Opera

By Joan King.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Judging by General Manager Guilio Gatti Casazza's recent announcement, upon the eve of his seasonal departure for Europe, next season will mark no cessation in the trend of American influence which has been so strongly felt this year at the Metropolitan Opera house. Seven young American singers have been engaged by the impresario for 1927-'28 for appearances with the Metropolitan.

* *

Frederick Jagel, 25 years old, tenor of Hollis, L. I., who has just completed a tour of Holland and is now singing in Italy; Fred Pattan, well known concert baritone and native of South Manchester, Conn.; Margaret Bergin, mezzo-soprano of Paterson, N. J.; Mildred Parisette, soprano of Philadelphia, who made her debut three years ago with the De Feo Opera company; Dreda Aves, soprano of Galveston, Tex., daughter of an Episcopal clergyman and niece of the bishop of Mexico, who also made a debut with the De Feo company; Leonora Corona, dramatic soprano of Dallas, Tex., who made her debut at Naples, Italy, and is now appearing with the Bracale Opera company in Havana, and Philine Falco, soprano, who was born in Holland but has spent most of her life in the United States, who also made her debut with the Bracale company and since has been a member of the Chicago and Ravinia Opera companies—these comprise the native singers who will be added to the Metropolitan cast next season.

* *

Three novelties will be included upon the répertoire of the Metropolitan during 1927-'28, according to Mr. Gatti-Casazza's annual announcement, namely: "La Rondine," by Puccini; "Violante," by Korngold, and "Madonna Imperia," by Alfano. "Hansel und Gretel," by Humperdinck; "Norma," by Bellini, and "Le Prophete," by Meyerber, will be revived. Bizet's "Carmen," with Jeritza in the title rôle; Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte," Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Le Coq d'Or" will be restored.

BACK IN THE VARIETY-SHOWS

MISS WINNIE LIGHTNER

SHE'S in the new bill in the Palace, the engagement marking her first appearance hereabout in the two-a-day since in 1922 George White found employment for her in the issue of Scandals dated that year. She was in Scandals for 1923, and again for 1924; and she was here last year in the first issue of "Gay Paree." Miss Lightner has her admirers when she sings a raffish ballad.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

Dear Mae: I wonder what you and the fans think of James Hall. I've seen and heard little about him, but maybe it's because he's fairly new to the films. I think he's awfully good looking and in the three pictures I've seen him in he seems to be a good and intelligent actor. Won't some one second the motion that we have a picture of him soon in the picture section of THE TRIBUNE?

Also I want to lay a belated bouquet at the feet of every one connected with "The Big Parade." I haven't seen "What Price Glory" in the movie version yet, but I don't see how it could surpass "The Big Parade."

RIANE.

Not Like the Book.

Mae Tinée: Will you please tell me why these various moving picture concerns insist on ruining perfectly good books by dramatizing them? I went to see "Wolf's Clothing" last night and I never saw such a jumbled up affair in all my life. The picture was no more like the original book than anything. There were two scenes that lasted about a second each that had some reference to the book. Otherwise it had ABSOLUTELY nothing to do with it, everything being changed to such an extent that any one reading the book before or after would never recognize it as the same.

All I can say is, that I for one will never go to see the plays that have been reconstructed from the books of the day, because I have found in almost all of them nothing but disappointment and absolute disgust for the person whose mind could take good reading matter and distort it to such an extent, that only the name remains to honor the author, and incidentally fool the public. Yours in disgust,

MARY C. T.

Editor's note: Didn't read the book but I though it was a swell picture.

AUTO RACE FROM INDIANAPOLIS TO BE PUT ON AIR

W-G-N Will Broadcast Classic Again.

W-G-N will broadcast the Indianapolis 500 mile auto race again this year. The CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel will radio the great spectacle on Monday, May 30, starting at 10:20 o'clock daylight saving time, and continuing until the last machine is flagged out by the starter. This is the fourth year that W-G-N has broadcast the famous auto classic. . .

The Indianapolis race is the auto event of the year, and a sports highlight that draws the attention of motoring fans the country over. The most famous drivers in the world enter the competition, and the prize money is the largest offered the speed kings on any track. Thousands of people make the pilgrimage to the Indiana capital, and this year the crowd is expected to exceed 120,000.

Winning Driver on Air.

With three years of experience behind it in broadcasting the race, W-G-N against promises listeners a thrilling and graphic account of the famous gasoline gallop. Experts who have aided in broadcasting the event for the last three years will once again be at the microphone, headed by Quin Ryan, who has announced at the race for the last two years. Quin tells the main story of the race, describing the crowds, the Speedway scene, and the actions of the drivers during the gruelling five hour test. Assisting him with the technical details of the race will be a host of motor experts, among them J. L. Jenkins, auto editor of THE TRIBUNE. The winning driver and many of the race officials will also be heard.

On the entertainment side there will be "Sam 'n' Henry," W-G-N's two colored boys, who were a feature of last year's race broadcast. They will describe the Indianapolis race as they see it. Correll and Gosden, the harmony kings, will also be among the entertainers at the W-G-N broadcasting booth.

Special Broadcasting Booths.

These special broadcasting booths, constructed last year for W-G-N by the Speedway officials, involve all the latest developments in radio studio design and construction. The two booths are in all respects miniature radio studios of the finest workmanship. They offer an exceptional view of the track having windows on three sides. The windows are of sufficient thickness to keep the greater part of the terrific roar of the racing cars from reaching the announcer's microphone.

The race holds its place as one of the longest broadcasts of the year. The station will go on the air at 10:30, Chicago time, and continue with its story of the race until nearly 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

GLEE CLUB AND CHOIR TO SING AT W-G-N STUDIO

Two exceptional choral programs will be heard by W-G-N listeners during the coming week. On Wednesday between 10:30 and 11 o'clock the Simmons Glee club of Kenosha, Wis., will offer a program, and on Thursday between 10:10 and 11:10 o'clock the Welsh male choir, which has been heard before over W-G-N, will come back for a second program.

The Simmons Glee club is exceptionally well known to music lovers of Wisconsin and they have given many fine programs in Kenosha. This will be their first appearance over a Chicago station. The club is directed by Maurice G. Ivins, baritone. Their half hour program contains many selections popular as choral numbers.

The Chicago Welsh male choir, one of the greatest organizations of its kind, is directed by Daniel Protheroe. Prof. Robert Gomer Jones is the accompanist. The choir has scored many successes in concert, and a host of listeners are sure to tune in for their radio appearance. There are fifty-five voices in the choir. A mixed program of popular choral numbers will be offered.

WMAQ to Active Part in Woman's World's Fair

WMAQ, the only major radio station in the world directed by a woman, is to play a prominent part in the activities which are planned for the Woman's World Fair at the Coliseum from May 20 to 27. A broadcasting house of several rooms has been constructed in the Coliseum with ample room for the visitors to observe "how it is done." Afternoons and evenings during the seven days the fair is in progress WMAQ will barry the messages of celebrities in the feminine world to women throughout the middle west.

AMERICAN SINGERS TO GIVE OLD POPULAR FAVORITES TONIGHT

Old popular favorites will feature the program broadcast by the American Singers in the half hour Atwater Kent concert tonight over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

"Alice, Where Art Thou?" and "A Perfect Day" are among the most popular numbers of a varied program that includes solos, duets, and quartets.

Joseph Ascher, who wrote "Alice, Where Art Thou?" was a London pianist and composer who at eighteen went to Paris, where he became the court pianist for Empress Eugenie, wife of Napoleon III. He later returned to London, where he died in 1869, at the age of thirty-eight.

Carrie Jacobs Bond says she composed her "Perfect Day" while dressing for dinner with friends at Riverside, Cal., where the setting sun inspired her. She read the poem at dinner and it was not until, months later, while crossing the Mojave desert with a party one starlit night that the music came to her and she sang for the first time what has become perhaps the most popular of all modern songs.

G. E. TO MAKE TWO 24 HOUR TESTS OF SHORT WAVES

Fans Throughout World to Make Reports.

Schenectady, N. Y., May 14.—[Special.]—Two twenty-four hour transmission tests will be made by radio engineers of the General Electric company on short wave transmitters. Observers, located throughout the world, will coöperate in making reports on signal strength and clarity in daylight and dark of the various transmitters. The tests will be held on Saturday, May 28, 12 o'clock noon until noon the following day, and Saturday, June 4, until noon next day.

The transmission of music and speech will be on station 2XAF, 32.77 meters, and station 2XAD, 26.8 meters, on May 28. On the following Saturday, 22.02 and 32.77 meters will be used simultaneously.

It is possible that both transmitters will not be heard at the same time. For example 2XAF has been most effective in broadcasting during darkness and the greatest distances have been obtained over areas entirely in the dark zone. The recent successful rebroadcasting of 2XAF's signals by Australian stations occurred at about 6 p. m. Australian time of a program which originated at the studio of WGY at 5:30 a. m. Station 2XAD, operating on 22 meters, has proved a more reliable station for European rebroadcasting when part of the intervening territory was in the daylight zone. These tests are conducted for the purpose of getting fairly reliable data on the comparative value of the various transmitters in daylight and darkness.

Observers will make reports from six points in the United States, from Berlin, London, five cities in South Amsterdam, North Palmerston, New Zealand, Melbourne and Perth, Australia, Shanghai, Tokio, Johannesburg, Manila and one station in Hawaii.

A FAN'S TRIBUTE TO RADIO—GOD'S GIFT TO MANKIND

God, in one of His kindest moods, whispered into the ear of one of His favorite children, and out of His dreams and labors came one of the greatest blessings ever received by man—the radio.

No matter how tired one may be, or depressed, tune in, and out of the space comes a beautiful strain from a symphony orchestra, or an inspirational sermon, or the soul-stirring notes from the sonorous pipe-organ. And soon all cares and trials are forgotten, and you receive new strength to go back to your tasks and fight life's battles.

You are never alone when you have a radio; it is your companion, your friend, your inspiration. It comforts the suffering patient in the sick room; it is the solace of the ice-bound habitants of the far north; it stills the raving of the mentally deranged, and it even softens the heart of the most hardened criminal. It makes life more worth living; it links us with the divine. Its mystery fills us with awe, for we can feel God's presence about us.

We know not what forces are streaming through the space surrounding us, and we can but realize the wondrous power of our Creator, and marvel at His greatness and goodness to mankind. The vibrations are there; we must but have the key to unlock the door and let your very beings be thrilled with the delights at our command. Through the air comes music, words of wisdom, knowledge galore, and entertainment of all kinds.

To be without a radio is like living back ten thousand years when men lived in caves and ate the raw flesh of beasts, and knew naught of the glorious gifts which nature offered them, and knew not how to use them.

To link yourself with this gift of the occult world is to reap a harvest of joy, never ending.

OVERWEIGHT IS NOT INHERITED, SAYS DIETITIAN

Good news for fat folk is promised in the talk to be given by Mrs. Delle Ross, prominent Bloomington, Ill., dietition, from station WMAQ, at 4:10 Friday afternoon, May 20. Mrs. Ross will discuss food in its relation to overweight and reducing, and will outline her reasons for believing that overweight is not inheritable.

"The belief held my many that it is natural for some to be fat is all wrong," says Mrs. Ross. "It is not natural for any one to be fat. The only thing we inherit from our parents is a tiny speck of life. All the rest is food. Most people eat like their parents, and this accounts for the apparent streak of overweight noted in many families.

CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL COURSES AIDED BY RADIO

Lack of Personal Contact Is Eliminated.

San Francisco, Cal., May 14.—[Special.]—Lack of personal contact, the bugaboo of correspondence courses, has been eliminated by radio.

During the last fourteen weeks Dr. Virgil Dickson of the University of California extension division has been conducting a correspondence course on "Mental Measurements."

Radio's importance as a supplement to this course has been proven by the talks which Dr. Dickson gives over KGO. In order to keep up with the radio talks given at 5 o'clock every Tuesday, students must prepare two written assignments each week. The highlights of these assignments and further instructions on matters not clear in students' minds form the substance of the radio lessons.

Get Credits for Course.

Speaking of the course, Dr. Dickson said: "In the adjustment in life's work, if we are going to be successful in the treatment of human nature, we have to recognize mental differences in children and train each child for the kind of work to which he is more adapted. This instruction on "Mental Measurements" has been designed to give parents and teachers the ability to understand and help children."

The course has been accepted by the state board of education toward a teacher's credential, and yields two units of university credits. Although the work can be done without the explanatory radio talks, letters indicate that 95 per cent of the students find these supplementary lectures invaluable.

Students Grope in Dark.

"Before radio's participation in a correspondence course, students groped in the dark with their problems," Dr. Dickson says. "Now groups of students gather before loudspeakers, listen to their instructors' talks, and discuss perplexing questions collectively.

"With radio as a general stimuff, a larger percentage of students complete the course than previously, when interest would wane in the middle of a semester.

"Many students attribute this sustaining of interest to the radio lectures. The guiding voice of their instructor from the loudspeaker gives the personal instruction touch that students formerly missed. The value of this radio personality in incalculable."

Dr. Dickson, now a lecturer in the University of California, was formerly with the Oakland Board of Education.

RADIO QUEEN FOR THIS YEAR NOW BEING SOUGHT

New York, May 14.— [Special.] — The search for the queen of American radio, 1927-28, has begun. She will be the official representative of the women radio fans of the United States for the term of one year, and will be a guest of honor at the radio world's fair in New Madison Square Garden, New York City, Sept. 19-24.

Her predecessors as queens are Miss Rena Jane Frew of Beaver, Pa., for 1925-26, and Mrs. Lotta Harrauff, Princeton, Ill., 1926-27.

They were chosen because of their knowledge of radio and their ability to interpret its usefulness, in spoken and written word, and they have drawn ever increasing attention to the fact that radio is now a necessity in every home. They emphasized the value of radio as an educator and molder of public opinion.

Another woman holds high position in radio, Mrs. Flossie Erickson of Bloomington, Ill., whose achievements in reception set new records. Mrs. Erickson, with various receivers and many different aerials, has brought in foreign countries as well as nearly 400 American stations. She has received four cups from the radio world's fair and the Chicago radio show by vote of the judges designated at these official exhibits of the radio manufacturers.

Holland Has New Station, PCJJ for Broadcasting

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 14.—A new Dutch broadcasting station has just been installed at Eindhoven and given the call letters PCJJ. Communication has already been established with Sydney and Bandoeng, this to be followed by the introduction of broadcasting for the benefit of English listeners. In keeping with her position in the front ranks of broadcasting, Holland is developing the new station so successfully that not only can its dispatches be picked up at great distances, but it has been possible for the Sydney station to rebroadcast them with far greater success than has attended the rebroadcasts in this country of the American stations.

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

WE are wondering if the day of make your own receiving set is passing. The first radio sets were of the home made type and the first radio fans were the men who tinker with mechanical things as a hobby.

All of us remember when some friend of ours told us of the nutty new dingus he had in his attic or bassment or bedroom, with which he could hear people talking and a piano playing from downtown somewhere. He told us that down in one of the department stores or hotels they were "broadcasting," shooting music into the air which we could catch if we had the right contrivance to catch it with.

He showed us the apparatus that he called his "set"—don't you remember?—he put tight ear phones on our heads and bade us listen hard; he moved the little slide along the cylinder; and he twitched the frail wire to make it scratch the little crystal. And all we heard at first was squawks and wails and puppy dogs' tails, and then very faintly, as though a long way off, a man's voice!

Then everybody started to build these monkey businesses. We heard men talking about coils, and antennae, and aerials, and ground wires and such. Some housewives began to complain because their husbands were making the living room look like the famous china shop after the sojourn therein of the also famous bull. They seemed to have collected late stove pipes, erstwhile bedsprings and former waffle irons. They reveled in it, and that was enough.

Men once made their own automobiles, but the fashions and the factories put an end to that. The radio tinkerer will always remain a radio tinkerer. The novelty of building radio sets as a fad will wear off, or maybe it has already, but there will always be a fair percentage of the male population who will build for the love of building, whether the object of the moment be radio sets, bookshelves, desks or bird houses. And radio sets, with their daily increasing improvements, will remain uppermost as a hobby.

Church organizations, we understand, were active during the public hearings of the new radio commission in Washington, appealing for restriction of all but religious broadcasting on Sundays. If the blue laws ever extend to this ridiculous length, then the prohibition of motoring or eating on the Sabbath won't be far off.

Last Sunday was "Mother's day." The inspiration of observing a Mother's day is sublime, but its celebration last week by the radio stations was grotesque.

The outstanding fault that listeners have ever found with the radio stations in general is their incurable habit of doing the obvious thing and even imitating their rivals in so doing. Especially is this so in their holiday programs.

Lincoln's birthday brings, in one hour of dial twirling, a score of speeches of eulogistic bromides and a dozen renditions of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

A friend of ours who has shied from the radio for a number of years finally procured a receiving set last week. Sunday afternoon brought him "Mother Machree" nine times, to the accompaniment of gobs of sentimental goo on the subject of "mother." Now he maintains that his long cherished suspicions of radio have been justified—and the radio set goes back to the dealer!

THE BUSINESS MAN'S PREACHER TALKS AT SUNDAY CLUB TONIGHT

Radio fans who are accustomed to listen to the Sunday Evening club broadcast every Sunday evening from WMAQ will have but three more opportunities to listen in to these services, as the present season closes with the meeting of May 29.

Dr. Albert W. Beaven, leader in the Baptist denomination, and head of one of their largest churches in the country at Rochester, N. Y., will be the speaker tonight. His subject, "Religion's Challenge to the Man in the Street," is one which fits his rôle of "business man's preacher," as he has come to be known by reason of his success in speaking before civic organizations and groups of executives. He is an official of the Rotary club and is also prominently connected with educational work in New York state. This will be his first appearance before the Sunday Evening club.

Clifford W. Barnes will give the final talk in his series, "Tales of Friendship," at the early service beginning at 7. Willys W. Baird will have a part in the program at the later meeting.

INDIA PLANS TO BEAT AUSTRALIA IN RADIO FIELD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 14.—Lively competition of a friendly nature has developed between radio enthusiasts in Australia and India, those in Bombay having set out to surpass Australia in the broadcasting of the British programs of the B. B. C.

Through the new short wave wireless beam stations which have been built for the British post office, it is expected not only that India radio fans will be brought into closer touch with England, but that programs broadcast here will be relayed with much greater dispatch throughout the United Kingdom.

Mikes Aid Juries and Judge to Hear Witnesses

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 14.—Still another and more solemn field to be invaded by wireless broadcasting is that of justice. In spite of its recognized conservatism, the law has followed the example of the churches, public halls, and theaters, with the result that several law courts have installed microphones in their witness boxes. The system has a very great practical value, since it enables the witness to speak in a natural tone of voice, still enabling the judge and members of the jury to catch each word without difficulty.

ART AND ARTISTS

Critic and Modern Discuss New "Art"

By Eleanor Jewett.

I WHITTLED my soul on the curb of the infinite and as the shavings grew I knelt among them and chose, now here, now there, the ones that were alive, curling with vigor as worms that measure the spring, lifting blind heads to feel eternity. From the mud that was my life I broke the crust and thrust the particles from my soul deep into the mire, relishing the succulent squash and suck of the wet dirt as I stamped down my foot and then withdrew it. The bell of heaven rang in my ears and I knew myself for a god.

Little man that you are! Did you dig around in what you call your soul, with dirty fingers, and when infection set in and your soul was sick, did you shower praise upon yourself? Did you cry out: "Look what I have done! Where there was a clear pool, there is now muddied water and a great seething of life." Did you stand on the corner and shout: "Come and see. Come and praise. Praise me. I, with my fingers, yea, unwashed as you see them still, have created life out of nothing."

So runs a dialogue between a modern and his critic. The modern is swelled with supreme conceit and the critic looks down upon him from an Olympus of contempt.

Nothing Valuable at Stake.

There is just a chance that each of the two may be justified in his position. Both contentions would have value were there something valuable at stake. There lies the fallacy. So little of the radical stuff is worth an argument. It is just so much vanity to be got around or through or over. If you wade through it, some may cling to you; go around it, and you may fear it because it is still strange to you; go over it, on a bridge of traditions and ideals, and you can see it truly for what it is.

And what is that? Usually the effluvia of men of twisted spirit, sometimes, but not often, a conscious stepping stone to fresh, worthwhile developments.

Last Sunday this column scourged and scoffed at the Arts club exhibit of paintings by the moderns, Ganso and Kuniyoshi. As far as Ganso and Kuniyoshi go, their pictures are in danger of becoming of importance if they continue to be the sole objects of discussion. Luckily there is, close at hand, a third man whom we might as well let in to the heat of battle. From his name, Flannagan (initials J. B.), he might be Irish. From his work, sculpture, shown in the New York Moderns exhibit here, he might be an offshoot of lower class Negroid mixed with Jap. His taste is for flat-faced orientals culled from the gutter. Look at his lascivious "Blues," and his startling "Mother and Son." Could you conceive it possible that an artist would have imagined that grouping? It seems more the sneering fling of an insolent degenerate.

Plenty of Contrast.

Henry Mattson is found in this exhibit with several landscapes thick and warm with paint, wrapped in it like a wax flower in cotton-wool. Charles Sheeler affords a keen contrast. His landscapes are cold and dry as Arctic snows, the drawing precise, nothing personal in the combination of houses or trees or what not. His still life, "Apples on Plate" is cleverly executed and blessed with the advantage of pure color.

Wanda Gag is a genius at solving problems in drawing. Peggy Bacon, as always, mixes a nice sense of humor with good draughtsmanship. Her sketches are invariably amusing and to the point. Look and laugh with her at the "Auction," the "Classic Pose," the "Frenzied Effort" and the "Bucolic Felicity." Alexander Brook shows the strongest and most level work of the several exhibitors. He is a sane modern.

Emil Ganso and Kuniyoshi complete the list and enough concerning them has been written. They do not belong here the reputation the Arts club exhibit has given them.

At the Palette and Chisel.

It is with a sense of relief that one hurries from that exhibit to the exhibition now open at the Palette and Chisel club. The freedom of being again among beautiful things comes like a liberation of the spirit. There is no obligation in the Palette and Chisel club show to bow down before gods of any kind. The moderns set their art on a pedestal, a hollow, stucco pedestal, gaudily painted, and wave the strong incense of many words in mystifying clouds before it. Their contemporaries feel no necessity for this. Words are idle in the face of good painting.

An exquisite idyll has been contributed by Othmar Hoffler, "The Princess and the Fawn." Perfect in each detail, it stands a page of loveliness drawn from the heart of a fairy tale. Leo Marzolo has a still life, blue jars, from which are thrust forward sprays of brown branch, flicked here and there with pink blossoms, like hesitant butterflies. There is marvelous quality in this simple painting. The longer one looks at it, the greater the spell its unpretentious, prosaic excellence casts upon one. It is a picture to return to, again and again.

Two striking self-portraits are found in the work of Oskar Gröss and Maurice Greenberg. Mr. Greenberg has, by the way, a second picture in the show. It is a fascinating snatch of "Winter" in a back street in a quiet, moderate circumstanced neighborhood. Even there is beauty, have you the eyes to see it.

Pleasant and Friendly Canvases.

Stark Davis is represented by a stunning panel of two yellow parrots, which he lets go under the title "Decoration." Anthony Buchta has two warmly colored and pleasant, friendly paintings, "The Rusty Tin Roof" and "The Friendly Bird House." John H. Carlsen shows a gloriously, thunderous sunset in his "Evening Glories." Edward T. Grigware is represented by two bright, romantic landscapes (the second is romantic, the first bright), "Sunlit Elms" and "End of the Day."

"Flowers" by Frank J. Gavencky is a gorgeous galaxy of blossoms set against a pink background. Holger W. Jensen has a beautiful landscape in "Vermont Hills" and Fred T. Larson has a hot, sunny afternoon in "Uplands." "Maxwell Street" by Henry L. Levy has a foreign flavor. Karl Ouren is responsible for two snowy landscapes and John A. Spelman again is showing the brilliance of fall leaves and water in "Autumn in Minnesota."

Glen C. Sheffer offers his charming "The Sewing Circle" and James Topping presents two sides to his palette, the one a quiet, clear painting, "Old House in Maywood" and the second his more familiar brilliant sailing cloud effect, with a vast blue sky over a smiling valley: "Afternoon Clouds."

Prize Awards.

Several prizes were given in the exhibit. The Lydia Bcutoux purchase prize of $300 went to "Afternoon Clouds" by James Topping; the "In the Studio" by Felix Schmidt was awarded the Second Worcester Studio prize; the First Worcester Studio prize went to "The Model" by Paul Lohman; the Circle club prize of $100 went to "Sunlit Elms" by Edward T. Grigware. The Municipal Art league prize of $100 and the Palette and Chisel club gold medal are yet to be awarded. The exhibition will continue to June 5.

News of Art and Artists.

A number of water colors have been sold from the international water color exhibit current at the Art institute. Among these are: "Street in Provincetown" by John R. Frazier; "Winter Morning" by John Whorf, "Arabs Under the Trees" by Martha Walters, and also by her "Fish Market, Tangiers," and "Luxembourg Garden"; "St. Martin's Pageant" by Adolf Munzer, "Park" by Ethel Spears, "After Dinner" by Felicie W. Howell and "Courtyard of Chateau de Lorie" and "Sunday Morning at St. Gerais" by Lucile Kaltenbach.

At present in the Children's museum at the Art institute there is an exhibit of various kinds of work done in the art classes of the settlements of Chicago. Pottery, batik, etchings, drawings, sculpture and paintings are among those present. The settlements which submitted work are Hull house, the Chicago Commons, the Jewish People's institute and Gads Hill center.

An interesting and curious and imposing statue of Moses by Ivan Mestrovic has just been given to the Art institute by David Adler. It is a valuable acquisition to the museum's permanent collection.

The fifth annual exhibit of work by Chicago Jewish artists is now to be found at the Culture club center, 75 West Randolph street. The exhibit will close on Wednesday, May 18.

"STILL LIFE" by Alexander Brook, apparently the sanest, soundest and strongest artist contributing to the exhibition of New York Moderns, shown in the Celotex cottage on North Michigan avenue and brought together by the Chicago sculptor, Tennessee Mitchell Anderson. The exhibit will close June fourth.

Owed Her Twenty Cents.

Some friends and I were invited to a luncheon. As our hostess had lately been hurt in an accident, she asked me to buy some rolls on the way to her home. When I handed them to her she asked the price.

I replied, "Twenty cents," thinking how much cheaper they were than at home.

"No," she argued, "I'm sure they must have cost thirty."

I insisted on the former price and the incident was forgotten.

When we were ready to leave I, wishing to make conversation, blurted out, "When you want some cheap rolls, let me shop for you."

Can you picture my embarrassment when Mrs. B—— hurried for her purse to pay me? D. H. D.

Discovered at Work.

Our office building is old, and worse than that we have no janitor, so it is my custom to straighten the office every morning. Our windows looked as though they had never been washed and as I did not expect my boss for an hour I thought that here was my chance to wash them.

I climbed outside and was industriously scrubbing at the panes when, glancing into my office, who should I see watching me but my boss—and the look on his face! I shall remember it to my dying day. There was I, perched on the window ledge, wishing the earth would swallow me and I had to climb in, too—with the aid of my boss.

Was I embarrassed? No, not much. T. E. S.

Wasting the Beans.

When I was married I had never cooked a meal in my life. One day I decided I wanted pork and beans for Jay's dinner and looked up a recipe. It read, "soak a quart of beans over night in a bowl," I did! In the morning after the beans had absorbed all the water, they ROSE in their might and distributed themselves in a shower of hail all over the kitchen floor! It seemed there were enough beans for an army!

My embarrassment was utter and complete when my husband's mother, who is of frugal Scottish stock, was the first to encounter what appeared to her thrifty Scot's soul as unpardonable waste of her son's substance!

More Letters from Film Fans

If you would like your letters printed in this column, please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want personal answer, send stamped, self-addressed envelope—please!

On Sunday Subjects.

Dear Mae: Having written you before, I feel perfectly at ease to call you by your first name. I hope you don't object. Just finished reading "Voice of the Fan" and then, looking through some of my old scrapbooks, I have firmly made up my mind to join the ranks of those fans who object to the great difference in the ages of the leading men and women in the recent pictures.

Milton Sills was entirely too old for Betty Bronson in "Paradise." The last rôle he ever played was opposite Anna Q. Nilsson in "Adam's Rib."

Ben Lyon has leading women twice his age, and it certainly makes it hard for the younger stars to become popular with a star twice their age playing opposite them.

Recently I have become disinterested in Gloria Swanson's pictures. Five and seven years ago she played opposite Thomas Meighan and Milton Sills in good pictures. Now she's playing with juveniles like Larry Gray, John Boles, etc. Let it be "youth to youth," I say, and match up the older ones. A good team makes a rotten story good, so give us what we want. [I hope a casting director sees this.]

Also, I'd like to see the king and queen of films co-star, too.

Then, I'd like to throw in a few good words for the villains that would make better leading men: Lloyd Whitlock, Ward Crane, Walter McGrail and many more.

Thanks, Mae. See you in the movies!

VIRGINIA T.

Editor's note: Y' wekkum, Virginia! Come again.

Likes the Column.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am writing to tell you about the best actor with the best praise. I refer to Chester Conklin. His acting in "The Kiss in a Taxi" was superb. Is he the Chester Conklin that plays the Negro parts of certain movies? I also hand it to the writer of that story. But Miss Daniels was not the one to play in that part. Renee Adoree would have played the part well.

It seems that most of the critics say that Lya de Putti is overacting, but to me it is acting. Her work has been far above the standard, particularly in "The Prince of Tempters." Ben Lyon and John Gilbert also take the cake. But if they allow a booby prize among actors and actresses, Colleen Moore will win without trouble. She ought to be thrown out.

Your reviewing could not be better.

Admiringly yours. AN ADMIRER.

Editor's Note.—Thank you!

Women of Action!

Dear Mae Tinée: Having read your column for about eight of my 17 years I think I'll write you a letter. Being one who means what she says, I have already suited the action to the thought. This is the letter.

The other day [as Donald O. Stewart says] I hied myself with faltering steps to see "Johnny Get Your Hair Cut." If I remember, you spoke highly of it. I was a bit scared, though, because—O, I don't know why, but anyway I was. But, gee, Mae, it was grand! He's still the Jackie Coogan of other years in spite of his haircut, which makes him more adorable than ever.

I also want to add my plea to that of those who went to see Norma Shearer and Richard Dix play together.

I guess this is just about enuff for the first time. And Mae, if it isn't too much to ask, would you please print this?

S'long. MARILLYN.

Editor's note: And right away her letter was printed!

* *

Will Mary Ever Grow Up?

Dear Mae Tinée: Will Mary Pickford ever be on the screen as a grownup lady? As such I would love to see a lot of her. I know she would be as popular in a grownup part as she always was in juvenile ones.

I'm always hoping and looking forward to seeing her on the screen again.

Whenever I see her I always left her pictures with a feeling of having seen something so clean and nice and good. I do hope she will return some day soon in grownup parts. LOTTIE M.

Editor's note: Perhaps Mary will read this and oblige.

Suggestion for Mary.

Dear Miss Tinée: If Harold Gray and Mary Pickford could get together on "Little Orphan Annie," then could be produced one of the greatest screen pictures of its kind that was ever put out.

The Warbucks, the count, the Silos, the circus, furnish tragedy, comedy and pathos galore, even down to Sandy, the dog.

No one within my vision could do Annie as could Mary. As to Mr. Warbucks, where is there a better than Douglas, himself? Plenty of opportunity, too, for some of the Fairbanks stunts.

If this suggestion should add seven figures to the bank account of Harold and Mary please remember that my income is limited!

MISS MARY L. B.

Thinks Success Make One High Hat.

Dear Mae: I never saw any one change like Ronald Colman. I knew him before he entered the movies and I always considered him sort of—well, plain. He was always friendly, but I'm afraid he is too good now to speak to a human being, in his own estimation.

Yours hopingly, L.

Editor's Note: Bet he isn't!

Another Admirer of Greta's.

Dear Mae Tinée: I am a Garbo fan. I never forgot her in "The Torrent." "The Temptress" was wonderful.

"The Flesh and the Devil" is one of the best pictures I have seen this year. Greta Garbo is a great actress. She lives in her work and she is so attractive and so refined. Even if she is the devil in this picture you just can't help loving her.

I am glad she is back at work again. I am looking forward to her next picture. B. M.

* *

Admirers of Tom Mix.

Dear Miss Tinée: Well, well, right when our hearts were in our shoes you come along and plant them in the air. And how?

We have felt heretofore that you were inclined to slight and neglect our friend and favorite actor, namely,

NATIVE

MISS MARIAN STOKES

She is in "That French Lady," appearing in all the acts thereof as a young woman who knows her way about the night-clubs, the floor-shows, and the dance-joints which have sprung up as a tribute to the popular endorsement of the Eighteenth Amendment and its ennobling legislation. Miss Stokes was of Chicago before she went down to New York to find her first part in the piece now in the Playhouse.

Tom Mix. And then you came along Sunday and gave him a whole column, page length, pictures and everything. That sure was mighty sweet of you, Miss Tinée.

Tom may not be a "lady killer," but what he can do with "us boys" is a plenty. And we bet he is one of the very, very few actors whose fans know not the meaning of the word "fickle."

Thank you very much.

Yours truly,

THE BECK BROTHERS.

One-Two-Three.

Editor's note: Attaboys!

Wants to See Mae Often.

Dear Lady: Recently you spoke of the return of May McAvoy in the filming of a picture, and stressed the fact that you could not understand why she didn't appear oftener. . . . I, too, wonder about it. . . . I think she is one of the loveliest women of the screen, and would go to any picture in which she appears just to look at her. There are several others whose pull I really do not get. But May McAvoy ought to appear "frequent and considerable," according to my notion. . . . How about stressing this point now and then? J. C.

Sky Line Club Has Unique Location

By Mme. X.

NOT only is Chicago growing big and strong, like a mighty monarch of the forest; she is also putting out blossoms, delightful and ornamental institutions that add as much to the city's renown as do her huge industries and sturdy finances. One of these is that delightful new enterprise dubbed the Sky Line club. This, as the name would indicate, is set high above the rest of the world, on top of one of our skyscrapers, the Bell building, on the east side of Michigan avenue, a little south of the Boulevard Link bridge. The club is twenty-four stories above terra firma. From its windows looking north, south, east, and west, there is a set of views unsurpassed anywhere in the city.

It is housed in what in New York is called a pent house; that is, a smaller structure perched atop of a high and mighty one. It has a good sized terrace bounding it on all four sides, with a waist high parapet. The windows are casemented and open out on the terrace. The club consists of a charming suit of rooms; a delightful lounge facing west and north; a good sized dining room along the south side, a private dining room looking south and east, and adequate dressing rooms. If the men's dressing room is as snappy and up to date as that dedicated to the women it must be most attractive. The former is chic and effective in decoration.

A Spirit of Cordiality.

The lounge, or sitting room, is paneled in waxed beech, a lovely wood with a fine grain and of delicious hue of mellow soft brown. It is also fashioned or carved in a harmonious design. I believe that this is called Norman peasant style. If Normandy's farmer folk live in anything like this setting they "do themselves very well," as the English would say. There is picturesque and comfortable furnishing for this room, smart cretonne in tones of brown, and its effect is in extremely good and sophisticated taste.

The Sky Line is essentially a men's club, but women are admitted as guests from 6 o'clock until 11; no, that doesn't mean 6 o'clock a. m. Members can—and do—invite their fair friends there for dinner with, if they want it, a quiet game of bridge afterwards. Not the least important attribute of the club is its cuisine. The chef is an important personage, and, if the X family be any judge, he is one deserving the "cordon bleu" devised for his kind by one of the French monarchs; was it Louis XIV. or XV.?

The evening the writer had the privilege of dining at the Sky Line club was one never to be forgotten. In the first place it was last Monday when that capricious hurricane was prancing up and down our city streets. From the windows of the club we looked northward towards the matchless Tribune Tower, lit by fitful sunshine, or looming gray and stern among storm clouds. Beyond it we had a good view of the extremely effective Furniture Mart tower, the roofs of which were at that time in the process of donning their smart blue coat. To the northwest the Wrigley Tower gleamed white in the storm or ruddy when the fitful sun shone on it.

The most dramatic of the soaring towers, however, was that being put up by the Mather building. It stood out like a gaunt skeleton against the exciting western sky, and as we watched it great planks blew off from the scaffoldings on its summit and from its specterlike sides like feathers and floated groundward. A hoisting machine on the forty-first story toppled and hung down, flopping in the hurricane like a withered branch.

A Great Spectacle.

Far below us the river, a shining way, looked more like a smooth asphalt boulevard than a stream of water, as it stretched out to the west, the bridges etched across it in unsubstantial fashion. Above and beyond the city the clouds rolled back and forth, now letting a dazzling splash of sunshine shine out from the flaming west, now closing down on the city with a mad howl and a fierce dash of rain. It was a great spectacle. It was hard to turn from it even for so delicious a repast as that set forth by the club's chef. Artichokes a la Roi Dagobert, filets mignon Voltaire, salad, au printemps, soufflé Alaska, doesn't that sound alluring enough to divert one from even the most stunning sky pageants and city silhouettes ever offered dwellers on housetops?

The three men to whom is accredited most of the impetus which created this unique club are Hugh McLennan, its president, Byron Harvey, and Lawrunce Whiting. There are two other extremely attractive clubs perched high above the thronging, throbbing streets in the downtown districts. These are the Midday club in the top of the First National Bank building and the Attic club on the upper floor of 120 West Adams street, both of them popular with men in the business section of town. New York, also, has many of these sky restaurants, favorite rendezvous for the men of affairs who transact affairs in the noon hour over their coffee and pie, but, probably because it is the latest, none of them can beat the Sky Line club, both for its chic interior and its superb outlook.

To Travel by Air.

It is an odd thing that a country as enterprising as this one of ours should let old and tired Europe surpass us in an enterprise so entirely modern as aviation, a field in which we were the real discoverers and pioneers. But so it is. When they were abroad last winter Robert Allerton and Frederick C. Bartlett flew everywhere, never taking a train where there was air service to be had. Nor is it more expensive to travel in this way than by the slower trains and steamers such as connect England with the continent.

A recent letter from a correspondent describes a flight from England to Germany as quite a commonplace experience. It took only from eight o'clock in the morning to four o'clock in the afternoon to get from London to Berlin, 650 miles away. And this flight included three stops; one at Brussels, the second at Cologne, and the third at Essen-am-Ruhr. To cover the distance between London and Berlin in eight hours seems amazing. Here's a brief description of the trip:

"Shortly after leaving London we pierced the clouds and emerged into brilliant sunlight at 4,000 feet altitude. From there to well into Belgium we flew over a white mountainous country of cloud, a most beautiful sight! Occasionally we passed over a hole in the white carpet, and could see the dark farms, woods or sea beneath us—themselves in shadow, very weird and strange and lovely. It was my first experience of super-cloud flying, and I was sorry when we came down to 1,000 feet and shade. The air was quite rough in Germany and the man opposite me was sick, which diminished my enjoyment."

The same correspondent speaks of going in Berlin to "a rather tragically poor and disappointing war film. The only thing that interested me in the dead affair was that the audience hissed the American troops—and none other! We are woefully unpopular in Europe."

That "none other" is certainly surprising. Where would the Germans have been if we had not sat in at the peace conference? It was not a successful document that was drawn up there, but what mitigations there were in it were almost entirely due to our efforts. Think what a peace would have been imposed on Europe and the world at large had Germany won the war!

* *

Available and Reasonable.

But to return to the European air service: It seems to be much more available there and much more popular than anything that we have in that line. It is not considered particularly courageous or even an adventure any more for people to undertake long flights from point to point. Nor is it even an extravagance. It costs forty-five dollars to go to Berlin from London by airplane, which was about the same price as the three section trip of the railway, boat, and railway would have been, and in less than half the time. Had it been a continuous flight it could have been made much under six hours.

The fact that we do not have to pass so many troublesome frontiers on an ordinary trip makes flying less desirable to us than it is to Europeans, who are continually running into customs officials and having to produce credentials and go through the many tedious formalities of going from one national boundary to another. Apropos of this, my same correspondent tells me that the wise Germans have abolished payment for passport visas. This ceremony is now done without charge. When will the rest of the civilized nations abolish this remnant of medievalism?

Conditions in Italy.

I'm sorry for the Italians if what a recently returned traveler reports is true. In that benighted country the passport system is in full swing and the natives of that delightful land are now debarred by their government from leaving it unless they have important business. Passports are refused them and they are obliged to stay at home and tend to business.

Also, strangers touring the country must be prepared to find a state of supervision not unlike that obtaining in both old and new Russia. It is not wise to go abroad in Italy without, not only your passport, but likewise, your identification paper, which every foreigner must purchase on arriving there and be ready to produce when any official requests it. Nor are they negligent in following up this order.

Under Fascism the former gay and pleasant manner customary among Italians on duty in public places has been abandoned in favor of a stern and autocratic air, not unlike that of the former Prussian junkers.

Little Freedom.

We loose-tongued Americans must be careful, if we travel in Italy, not to say anything that can possibly be considered as in any way derogatory to the present régime. Arrest and imprisonment await the critics of Mussolini and his rule, no matter what flag is supposed to protect the critic. It is perhaps a wholesome order, but what would happen if a similar law were enacted and enforced in this land of the free and home of the talkative? Our prisons would be spilling over in twenty-four hours.

Those Italians who are not in sympathy with the present ruling force in their native land, and they are to be found, are practically prisoners, according to my informant, and cannot move about or consort with any one without a consciousness of a pervasive government supervision. If report be true, Italians in Italy are living on the thin crust of a dozing volcano. When it erupts or blows up, heaven help the superfluous Americans who have taken up their abode there, for the natives are an excitable race and will not always stop to find out nationalities when they are on the warpath.

These may be only traveler's tales and are to be accepted with reservations. My authority is an extremely intelligent American who has been traveling in Italy this spring and who speaks Italian and also knows many Italians in various walks of life. The great majority of our countrymen who visit the land of the Cæsars have neither of these advantages and therefore know little of the real Italy.

Woman's World's Fair.

The third annual Woman's World's Fair opens its doors at the Coliseum next Thursday evening. This has become an institution which each year enlarges its scope until now it is one of the big events in the realm of the modern woman and her activities. Its fundamental idea is to show what women are doing in art, science, industry, the professions, and so on. The previous fairs were held at the Furniture Mart, which has now been obliged to use its former exhibition hall for its own needs. So the historic old Coliseum, which has sheltered so many famous enterprises in the course of its more than thirty years of existence, is once more opening its doors to the public.

Among the features of this exhibition will be an enclosure, a miniature village square, with a fountain in the center, wherein those would-be exhibitors who cannot indulge in the expenses of a large space can have little booths in which to show their achievements. This is to be called after a well known little square in old St. Petersburg, in Russia, called Narodny Dom, where peasants and the producers of simple handwork were wont to set up booths and transact their business.

Foreign Lands Represented.

In the north and south wings of the Coliseum there will be other specialties. In the former there will be a foreign street wherein Czecho-Slovakia, Finland, Norway, Sweden, France, and Japan will be represented in booths tended by women in the national garb of their several countries. There will also be in this section a tea garden and a department devoted to interior decorators.

In the southern wing there will be a theater where will be given folk songs and dances and performances by various organizations. Also Elena Moneak and her Women's Symphony orchestra will give musical programs here. Here, too, will be an art gallery.

The main part of the building will be occupied, as heretofore, by the infinite variety of exhibits of women's work in all lines of achievement. The fair will last until the evening of May 27, which, as Sunday is a "dies non," gives it seven days of life. There will be different events and functions each day. On Tuesday, the 24th, a luncheon will be given for famous women, to which will come representatives from each of the forty-eight states, selected for this honor by the governors of these commonwealths. On the opening night there will be dinners given by the Mesdames Joseph G. Coleman, Joseph T. Bowen, Rockefeller McCormick, George Bass, Howard Linn, and George Deane.

Officers of the Fair.

The officers of the association running this fair are: Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, honorary chairman; Mrs. George Bass, president; Mrs. Howard Linn, vice president; Mrs. Theodore Robinson, secretary; Mrs. George Deane, treasurer; Mrs. Medill McCormick, general executive; Miss Helen Bennett, managing director, and Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, directors. Mrs. Medill McCormick is coming on from Washington for the opening night.

At 7 o'clock next Thursday evening Vice President Dawes will proclaim the fair open. It promises to be an event interesting both to men and women, to the former to see how hard this imperious sex is threatening their supremacy; to the latter to see what progress, if any, their sisters have

Card Party to Aid Service Council

By Kate Webber

PERHAPS the last large card party of the season benefiting a popular cause will be the one to be given on the afternoon of June 3 at the Edgewater Beach hotel, under the auspices of the Service Council for Girls. Mrs. Clair E. More is general chairman of the affair, proceeds from which will be used by the council to carry on its work during the summer months, when most of the volunteer workers are away.

The Service council, as its name implies, has for its chief motive being of service to young girls who pass through the Juvenile court. The work is chiefly preventive, not all of the girls coming under its sponsorship having had court experience, though the majority come to them through that department. This means to many people that these girls are delinquent, but this is an erroneous idea. Cases are not sent to institutions unless it seems to be the best solution, for it is the aim of the council members to provide material aid and advice to tide these girls over their individual problems.

How the Council Started.

The Service council was started by a group of women in clubs and Protestant churches who had been doing service for the court as it had been assigned to them, in fragmentary fashion. By forming a central clearing house they were able to place a trained worker in the court and to coördinate what they were doing to avoid duplication of effort.

The girls come mostly from broken homes, and volunteer workers have found their needs as varied as their circumstances. What they need particularly is individual care, and in the two years of its service the council has given this care to more than 300 girls.

A Volunteer Organization.

With the exception of a court worker, a visitor, and a clerk in the office, the council is a volunteer organization. There are fifty-one "big sisters" at work. In spite of this personnel the council never has been able entirely to take care of all of the girls who come for aid, because it needs more workers and more funds with which to meet emergencies and regular needs.

Mrs. Alfred C. Tyler, first vice president of the council, says: "All summer the courts will be open and there will be an endless stream of girls passing through them. But most of the volunteer workers will be gone and there will be no revenue for the constant emergency that we will have to meet. It is because we learned last summer how difficult the situation can be that we are determined to avert similar trouble this year by establishing a fund with which to carry on this highly important work."

Mrs. S. C. Plummer, president of the council; Judge Mary Bartelme, honorary president; Mrs. Alfred C. Tyler, Mrs. Payson S. Wild, Mrs. James Campbell, Mrs. F. B. Moorhead, and Mrs. Charles A. Ford are the officers who will assist Mrs. More and her committee in working for the success of the party on June 3.

MRS. ALFRED C. TYLER is first vice president of the Service Council for Girls, which will give a card party at the Edgewater hotel on June 3 in order to add to its funds for work during the summer months. Details of the council's work among young girls are given in a nearby column.

Mrs. Nathan P. Colwell is the retiring president of the Woman's club of Wilmette, which recently closed one of the most active seasons in its history. More than $5,000 has been raised toward a fund for a permanent club house, and through its philanthropy department the club has disbursed more than $3,000 to various organizations.

Mrs. J. Parke Hackett was elected president of the Edgewater Catholic Woman's club at its annual meeting held late in April.

MRS. WILLIAM F. FARRELL.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Newport Expects Gay Social Season

By Dolly Madison.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—With society concentrated in London and Paris at present, New York concerns itself with plans for the summer. From all indications Newport will have its most successful season in years.

Strangely enough, Newport is either insufferably dull or totally delightful. There is no half-way measure. Since everything depends on the amount of entertaining, a sparsely populated summer colony means a dearth of pleasure. Thames street and its contingent delights no longer held any attraction, even for the giddiest of the bachelor clan.

This season, however, all the magnificent cottages will be tenanted and there is no doubt that the London sojourn of so many fashionables will lead to the presence in the Rhode Island spa of a host of titled English folk.

The dowager Mrs. Vanderbilt will make one of the colony, as has been her custom for many summers. However, with no debutante grandchildren to be presented, she will not entertain on the grand scale, keeping most of her activity confined to the members of the clan.

Newport would not be the same without Dr. and Mrs. Roderick Terry, who will once more keep open house at Lincoln Gate, while another spot of much interest will be Aspen Hall, Mrs. John Aspegren's Newport estate, which this summer will be the stopping place of the Joe Wideners.

At Oakland Farm.

Oakland farm has seen young William H. Vanderbilt all winter, with his absences few and far between, usually occasioned only by business calls to New York, which have kept him never more than a few hours. This summer will see the farm, so-called, the scene of many gay gatherings. It would appear that young Vanderbilt is determined to forget that his wife, the former Emily Davies, is making a gay round of Paris, evidently totally oblivious of the fact that her husband and daughter are very much alone on the other side of the Atlantic.

Another Newport resident this season will be Mrs. William H. Force, who, as the grandmother of young John Jacob Astor, shines in the reflected glory of the name. Her daughter and son-in-law, the William K. Dicks, will also be a part of the colony.

Others of the notables who will be much to the fore in a short while include Mrs. Le Roy French, Mrs. Cornelius Tangeman, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James.

* *

Virginia Kimball Engaged.

There being a lull in the way of engagements, the announcement of Virginia Kimball's betrothal to Francis Burrall Hoffman is of particular interest to New York fashionables, most of whom were close friends of the young man's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Burrall Hoffman.

Like many another swagger union, the wedding will take place abroad, this time in Paris, where Virginia is at present with her mother, Mrs. H. Ingalls Kimball of 66 Rue Costambert.

Young Mr. Hoffman, who is a member of the Racquet and Tennis, and the Knickerbocker club, is one of a large family. His brothers are William Wickham Hoffman, Albert L. Hoffman, and Murray Hoffman.

A Wedding of Interest.

Much interest centers in the wedding on Thursday of Julia E. Brokaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Brokaw, and James Russell Lowell, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lowell, in St. Thomas' church.

Edna Brokaw will be her sister's maid of honor, with the baby of the Brokaw family, Peggy, as flower girl.

The other attendants will be Mrs. Harry C. Cushing III., the slant-eyed Cathleen Vanderbilt that was; Peggy Phipps, Florence Havemeyer, Estelle Manville, Rita Dolan, Betty Stettinius, Camilla Livingston, and Florence Loew.

Joseph Carson will be Mr. Lowell's best man and the ushers will be John Minturn Le Roy, Willys R. Betts Jr., Duncan Dunscombe, Harold Scott, Palmer Kountze, George E. Watson Jr., George Carey, William T. Adee, Henry R. Hoyt, and Clifford V. Brokaw Jr.

Carnival for Charity.

Wednesday night saw Madison Square Garden turned over to the carnival in aid of the Judson Health Center. Mrs. Arthur B. Claflin headed the committee on arrangements and the events included boxing, bazaars, pageants, and ballets.

Among the girls and matrons who took part in the long program, were: Etheldra Seabury, Geraldine Thompson, Zella Crook, Julia Hoyt, Genevieve Fox, Constance Fox, Violet Tangeman, Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, Dorothy Havemeyer, Frances Gillmore, Lentilhon Gilford, Mrs. William S. Fairchild, Nancy Watson, Hope Hewlett, Sally Heaton, Mrs. Rosamond Fuller, Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, Judith Smith, Mrs. Esmond P. O'Brien, Mrs. George Leary Jr., Elizabeth Wyatt, and Mrs. John A. Rogers.

ENGAGED

MISS EVELYN PARDEE WOODS.

MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK WADHAMS PENFIELD of Glencoe announce the engagement of their niece, Miss Evelyn Pardee Woods, to I. Roy Martin Jr., of Cleveland, O., son of I. Roy Martin of St. Louis, Mo. Miss Woods attended Miss Bennett's school at Millbrook, N. Y., and Mr. Martin is a Harvard graduate.

Every one of the theatrical, political, and social worlds were present with the festivities lasting well into the morning. The proceeds, well over $20,000, are to be applied to the work of the health center which cares for the children of the Washington Square district.

Following Tradition.

May parties are a tradition of New York. The bad weather has retarded the season somewhat, but on Tuesday thousands of tiny public school girls will dance about the Maypole in Central park on the occasion of the twentieth annual park fête. Folk dances and games will be included in the program.

Among those interested in the dances are: Mrs. Gustavus Kirby, Mrs. Lewis Gouverneur Morris, Mrs. Egerton L. Winthrop, Mrs. Cleveland H. Dodge, Mrs. Edwin Gould, Martha L. Draper, Sheila Burden, Katherine Leverich, Mrs. John Garrett Underhill, Mrs. Reginald De Koven, Mrs. William A. Delano, Mrs. C. Lorillard Spencer, Mrs. James D. Sawyer, Mrs. Guy Carey, and Mrs. Richard Aldrich.

Chicago Tourists Flock to Paris

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

THE French capital suddenly is swarming with Chicagoans who are settling for the spring season after traveling in Europe. Mrs. William J. Calhoun, the former Lucy Monroe of Chicago, widow of the late American minister to China, just arrived from Peking, where she has resided since the death of her husband. She left China because of the revolutionary troubles and plans to be in Paris indefinitely. Her niece, Mrs. Polly Root Collier, and Edwin Collier, the latter's husband, have an apartment here.

Mrs. Calhoun is being extensively entertained by Chicagoans residing in Paris. Her house at Peking has been a shelter for many Americans since the outbreak of hostilities. She will return there as soon as the trouble is over.

Another prominent Chicagoan, Miss Clara Gilbert, formerly president of the Fortnightly club, has arrived at Paris after traveling through Italy. She will be here throughout the spring. George Forsyth, inventor of railroad devices, formerly of Chicago, and his wife are here after touring Italy. They will remain several weeks. Mrs. Harry Royce, who has been here for the last few weeks, will sail the end of the month to spend the summer at her new country home at New Canaan, Conn.

Henry R. Luce, magazine publisher, with his wife, the former Lila Holtz of Chicago, who are now in Italy after a long stay in Corsica, are expected in Paris this week to meet Mrs. Luce's mother, Mrs. Frederick T. Haskell, who is soon to arrive from Chicago. Miss Margaret Enders now is in Paris at the Hotel Astoria after being with the Luces.

Other Chicagoans here and much in the social life of the capital for the moment are Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Drake, who are visiting their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Drake, in their apartment in Avenue Charles-Floquet, after an extensive cruise on the Mediterranean and a trip in Spain. All four of the Drakes are going to London May 18 and the Tracy Drakes will sail for America on May 21.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Sweden

"I AM surely glad Mrs. Tinley got the chairmanship of the fine arts department," remarked the chairman of the nominating committee. "There was a time when I thought it looked very dubious."

"What was the objection to her?" asked the long time member. "She's always seemed to me to be extremely capable and a woman of many interests."

"You'll laugh when I tell you. Some of the younger members thought she was too old!"

"Too old, my word!" ejaculated the long time member. "I've known much younger women who have never been as alert as she is, and I've known some who have gone stale mentally at 30 and 40. Mrs. Tinley says she's never going to allow herself to get old, and I believe her."

"It was during the mid-Victorian age, was it not, that women donned caps and retired to the fireplace as soon as their children were reared?" inquired the nominating chairman.

"You're not suggesting that the youngsters are mid-Victorian in their attitude toward the ability of the older women, are you?" asked the long time member.

"I wouldn't go as far as that," answered the chairman, but some of them have very definite ideas of what a woman should be and do at a certain age and if she isn't and doesn't it's somewhat of a shock to them. But I do think that as a whole we're beginning to realize that ability and capability are not always a matter of years."

"I heard the other day of a club woman over 85—we brag about it when we're that old—who has just written and published a most creditable book and we have any number of club members of 50 and 60 and more and otherwise—who are doing private and public life credit to any age."

"Undoubtedly we took the standpoint as the youngsters we were in our twenties and the point will shift as ours did we add a few years to it."

made since the fair last year. So runs the world along, competition being the soul of progress, no matter what Socialists and their ilk may say. Life is a battle and he or she who wins must fight for victory.

A Yearly Event.

Last Monday afternoon Miss Emily Larned, who might well be called the high priestess of our motorbus system, took a party of friends in a big motorbus over a specially laid out course to show them the city and the boulevards. This is an annual event ever since these behemoths were instituted here, ten years or so ago.

There are some who will remember the struggle that was made here to have these convenient public vehicles introduced and given a right of way over certain routes. Miss Larned was among their most vigorous and valiant champions at that time and in recognition of her services in their behalf the motorbus company has made it a yearly custom to give her and such friends as she invites a ride over our boulevards. These busses antedated by only a few months that momentous period of our city history when the north side was discovered by the rest of the city through the opening of the boulevard link bridge.

Never has any municipal district gone through such an utter change in as short a time as that part of the city which lies between the river and North avenue. How old Capt. Streeter's eyes would "bung" could he return and see the territory of his battles!

The writer recalls once, three decades or so ago, when he and a small army of tramps he had collected at the foot of Chicago avenue to protect his squatter's rights were routed by a troop of policemen armed with rifles. From the windows we watched the latter go by towards the lake; we listened to the shooting and saw the city's armed and successful forces return with their prisoners, a sorry lot hanging their heads and ruing the day they met the captain. And now this once debatable land is fast becoming a place of giant structures and soaring towers.

Gardens to Be on View.

In spite of the rather chill and inclement spring, the summer garden season opens next Saturday. Under the auspices of the Lake Forest Garden club, the north shore gardens will open once a month this year, instead of seven Saturdays in succession, as it was thought the May gardens, which have never been exhibited before, and which feature bulbs and wild flowers, would be interesting to the public.

On Saturday of this week, the Winnetka gardens of Mrs. John W. Gary, Mrs. James Simpson, Mrs. John W. Scott, Mrs. Frederick H. Scott, and Mrs. John Stuart will be on view.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Teachers Prepare for Bible Schools

The first edition, 10,000 copies, of "Religion Today," The Tribune religious editorials, has been exhausted. A recent order from Little Rock, Ark., called for 500 and a telegram from Grand Rapids, Mich., asked for 200. Inquiries for still larger contracts have been received. Now is the time to rush in orders to enable The Tribune to decide intelligently as to the probable demand for a second edition. If churches yet unheard from will equal churches which have already responded, a second edition of 10,000 will go quickly.

THE REV. DAVID A. DAVY, D. D.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

A STANDARD training school for teachers in preparation for the Daily Vacation Bible schools to be opened immediately following the close of the Chicago public schools will be held evenings from 7 to 9 beginning tomorrow evening. There will be six sessions, May 16, 17, 19, 23, 24 and 26.

Next month there will be three all day general conferences, June 11, 24 and 25, and three afternoon training conferences, June 27, July 11 and 18. The vacation schools will begin June 27.

The instructors include Miss Violet Rush, "Kindergarten"; Miss Vera L. Noyes, "Primary"; Mrs. H. Louis Auten, "Juniors"; Dr. Herbert W. Blashfield, "Intermediates," and the Rev. C. W. Longman, "Organization and Administration." The training classes will meet at the Woman's City club, 360 North Michigan avenue.

Last year there were 247 schools under various denominations with an enrollment of 27,523. It is hoped and expected the number will be exceeded this year. The division on vacation church schools is under the auspices of the Chicago Council of Religious Education, a department of the Chicago Church federation. The secretary is Emerson O. Bradshaw, 77 West Washington street, telephone Central 0681.

Other volunteers who will occupy Chicago pulpits today are Lieut. Col. J. H. Berry, San Francisco, at Central Presbyterian church, Sacramento and Warren avenues; Lieut. Col. E. F. Hites, Indianapolis, at Englewood Christian church, Stewart avenue and 66th place; Col. A. Wright, New Orleans, Messiah Baptist church, 2930 Flournoy street, and Lieut. Col. Abbie Wiederbuhl, Newark, N. J., at Portage Park Methodist Episcopal church, Irving Park boulevard and North Lawler avenue. The officers are here for a three days' session of the council, which ends Wednesday.

Bishop Charles P. Anderson will make his annual address at the Episcopal clergy round table tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at St. James church, Cass and Huron streets. Officers will be elected.

A fellowship banquet will be held by Disciples churches tomorrow evening at 6:30 at the Hotel La Salle. This is one of 70 similar banquets in Illinois which have had an attendance of 16,000. While the banquet is for promoting interest in a crusade for $1,000,000 for education, no money will be solicited at the banquet. Of the fund, which is expected to be oversubscribed, $425,000 will go to Eureka college, $425,000 to the Disciples foundation at the University of Illinois and $50,000 to the Illinois Christian Missionary society. The speakers tomorrow evening will be Dr. Stephen E. Fisher of Champaign, Dr. Bert Wilson of Eureka, Dr. H. H. Peters, and Dr. H. H. Harmon. George C. Aydelott, associate director, located at the Atlantic hotel, is arranging for the banquet.

The 1,280 persons married by Dr. John De Lacy during his pastorate of the Thoburn Methodist Episcopal church, 64th and South Paulina streets, have been invited to a home coming service this evening at 7:45 at the church. Every one taking part in the program was married by Dr. De Lacy. The choir will be made up of Thoburn married couples.

Dr. Robert A. Hume, famous as a missionary in India, will be the speaker tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the Congregational ministers' union, Association building, 19 South La Salle street. It will be the last meeting of the union before adjournment for the summer vacation.

O. J. Kvale, United States congressman from Minnesota, will speak this evening at 7:30 at a meeting in connection with boys' week at our Saviour's English Lutheran church, Berteau and Laramie avenues, the Rev. Jesse E. Thorson, pastor.

A musical festival will be held Tuesday evening at Bethel Lutheran church, Humboldt boulevard and Dickens avenue. The Rev. Johannes Holfjeld, Duluth, Minn., will deliver the principal address. There is no charge for admission. The Rev. Sander Tollefson is pastor of the church.

Dr. Albert W. Beaven, pastor of the Lake Avenue Baptist church, Rochester, N. Y., will speak this evening at 8 at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall. His subject will be, "Religion's Challenge to the Man in the Street." Dr. Beaven answers questions in the Church Management magazine under the title, "Ask Dr. Beaven." President Clifford W. Barnes will give his final talk at 7 o'clock in the series, "Tales of Friendship." The Sunday Evening club's closing meeting for the season will be the Memorial day meeting May 29.

The fortieth annual conference of the north Illinois district of the Evangelical synod of North America will be held in the St. John's Evangelical church, Freeport, Ill., beginning Wednesday. It will continue in session over next Sunday. A revision of the constitution of the synod will be one of the important subjects to come before the conference. Dr. H. J. Schick, pastor of Immanuel church, Chicago, will be the presiding officer.

The Rev. J. P. Donoghue has been appointed as permanent rector of St. James church, 29th street and South Wabash avenue, and the Rev. Charles Murphy, former assistant at Ascension church, Oak Park, has been appointed pastor of St. Dennis church, Lockport, Ill.

Dr. David A. Davy, for more than twenty years pastor of Unity English Lutheran church, Balmoral and Magnolia avenues, who resigned last December to become superintendent of the Inner Mission Society of the United Lutheran Church in America and Chicago city missionary, is leading this week in a final effort to obtain 5,000 members for the society. Next Sunday at 3 o'clock a roll call will be made at a massmeeting in the ballroom of the Auditorium hotel with the expectation that the full goal will be reached.

The Inner Mission is the name given to the Lutheran society which engages in philanthropic work, such as the care of the aged, hospitals, orphans, and rescue mission work. The special campaign for a 5,000 enrollment began on Easter, when Dr. Davy and other workers held a service at the Illinois Research hospital. The significance of the word "inner," as applied to the mission, is seen in the appeal for 5,000 members who not only will pay annual dues but who also will pray for the success of the work. The society is already in successful operation in other cities, but is only two years old in Chicago. Dr. Davy served in the world war as a chaplain and in his pastorate was active in philanthropic and social service work.

The first anniversary of the dedication of the gymnasium and Sunday school annex of the Grace Evangelical Community church, Wrightwood and Kimball avenues, will be observed today with services at 11 a. m., 4:30 and 7:30 p. m. A sandwich luncheon will be served at 6 p. m. The Rev. G. B. Kimmel, D. D., president of the Evangelical Theological seminary, will be the special speaker. The ladies' sextette will sing and the church orchestra will play at the afternoon service.

St. Cornelius' new church and school will be dedicated at 10:30 today by the Rt. Rev. E. F. Hoban, Catholic auxiliary bishop of Chicago. The church and school auditorium have each a seating capacity of 800. The pastor is the Rev. L. H. Lyons. The buildings are located in a three acre triangular block at Long, Lieb and Gettysburg avenues. The property is now valued at $225,000. In connection with the dedication Bishop Hoban will confirm a class of 125.

St. Clara's Catholic church will be dedicated at 10:30 by his eminence Cardinal Mundelein. Fourth degree Knights of Columbus will form a personal escort to his eminence. Priests of the Carmelite order will assist. The Rev. Fidelis R. Pauliding, O. Carm., will preach the dedicatory sermon. On Thursday last Bishop E. F. Hoban consecrated the five altars of the new church.

Gen. Ballington Booth, president of the Volunteers of America, and his wife, Maud Ballington Booth, will speak today at 2:30 at the Gospel tabernacle, Barry, Clark and Halsted streets, and at 7:30 at the Volunteer's auditorium, 2841 West Washington boulevard.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, city health commissioner, and Knare Krogh, University of Chicago athlete, will be speakers at 7:45 this evening at St. Paul's Episcopal church, 50th street and Dorchester avenue, when a reunion of Camp Houghteling association will be held. The reunion will be held with supper 5-7 and the speaking will follow.

The Rev. Charles T. Hull will be instituted today at 11 a. m. as rector of the Episcopal church, St. Paul's-by-the-Lake, Ashland and Estes avenue. Two deacons will also be ordained, Humphrey Dixon, St. Paul's church, and Mansell B. Green of the local church. Bishop S. M. Griswold will officiate and Dr. E. J. Randall will present the candidates for ordination.

Chicago was selected for the next convention of the national federation of church clubs of the Episcopal church. Walter B. Patterson, president of the Chicago club, was elected vice president of the national organization.

Boys' night will be observed this evening at the First Methodist Episcopal church, Superior street and Oak Park avenue, Oak Park. A thousand boys are expected. The boys' choir of Grace Episcopal church, Oak Park, will sing. W. J. Hamilton, superintendent of the Oak Park public schools, and E. L. Randall of the Cook county Juvenile court, will be the speakers.

Activities of Women.

Mrs. Martha E. Donk, of Newark, N. J., has just completed 54 years' service as telegrapher with the New York Central railroad.

At the International Exposition of Inventions in London, England, this year, 20 per cent of the displays were invented by women.

A 14 year fight for the vote in the Dutch East Indian Volksraad or people's council is being renewed by Javanese women, under the leadership of Dr. Aleta Jacobs, Dutch feminist, who toured the United States two years ago.

Business—or Pleasure
And a Choice Menu—at Chicago's
Morrison Hotel

PRIVATE DINING ROOM, BOSTON OYSTER HOUSE, MORRISON HOTEL, CHICAGO

The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, 46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms

IT would be hard to guess how many big business deals have been arranged across the hospitable tables of the restaurants and dining rooms of the Morrison Hotel.

The Cameo Room

Whether the party meets for a conference or just for pleasure, and whether it numbers two or two thousand, it could not find a more cheery atmosphere in which to get together. For the larger groups the famous Cameo Room is an ideal banquet hall, without a single pillar to impede the view.

Luxury with Economy

Although the cuisine and service are unsurpassed, the moderation of Morrison charges is well illustrated by these figures for fixed price meals:

Breakfast, 35c to $1.00
Luncheon, 80c Dinner, $1.25

1,944 Outside Rooms, $2.50 Up

Every guest room at the Morrison has bath, running ice water, and Servidor, which assures complete privacy. Every patron enjoys garage privileges. Yet minimum rates are charged because the valuable store subleases at this central location pay all the ground rent, and the saving is passed on to the guests.

Go Abroad for a Nickel

National Airplane Reliability Tour starts from Detroit June 27

The thrill of setting foot on foreign soil! The adventure of traveling under a strange flag!

A nickel is your only passport. You board a ferry at Detroit's frontier and get off in a busy metropolis of Canada.

You'll find the spirit of Great Britain just as it is in London. The customs, the shops, the speech are fragments of the Old World.

If you tour, the ferry has facilities for transporting your car. Be sure to carry your license registration card to conform with customs regulations—simplified for tourists. Your Automobile Club membership card gives you special consideration in detouring red tape. Bring it with you too.

Fine paved roads lead you past the famous Kenilworth and Devonshire race tracks. Through quaint villages. Along miles of charming Great Lakes beaches.

Plan your tour via Detroit. Visit the beautiful parks, notably Belle Isle—the impressive art center—historic sites— interesting buildings—giant automobile factories—aviation fields, and a host of other vacation attractions.

Small Carrying Charge

Just when most every one is thinking of freshening up the home for the coming season, and just when many have moved into new homes and apartments and are adding new touches, comes this most remarkable lamp and shade event!

We have held great lamp and shade sales before, but never, we believe, have we been able to make quite as unusual an offer! It's doubly unusual, too, as to lowness of price and terms, not to mention the newness and desirability of the styles.

Don't Buy One—Purchase Two or Three—They'll Brighten Up Your Home Immeasurably.

REMEMBER that the onyx in these lamps is genuine—mined in Arizona and Mexico—not manufactured. The colorings and markings are most unusual.

The Lamps

Made of metal in a great variety of patterns. All with beautifully designed ornaments—many with fancy chased standards in many effects. In fact, the selection is so great you'll have no difficulty selecting just the lamp you desire.

The Shades

The distinctive tailored styles of the shades are most pleasing. They're fashioned of pleated georgette with neat silk drum linings. Prettily trimmed with braid and dainty flowers. All newest color combinations from which to choose.

The Three Wieboldt Stores.

17TH CENTURY ENGLISH HOME POSSESSES 'IT'

Wee Garden Finishes the Picture.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

Again we find the English cottage type, its example dating back to 17th century years, interpreted in common brick of variegated red shades and steeply pitched slate roof, rough laid.

LOUISE BARGELT. [Chambers Photo.]

This design received the 9th prize in the five room division of THE TRIBUNE Homes Competition and the architect is Angus McD. McSweeney, 250 Santa Paula avenue, San Francisco, Cal.

A hedgerow type of home, this, the sort one sees springing up along English country roads. Yet in this country it fits into any kind of site as comfy and demurely as it has fitted in for hundreds of years to many an English roadside. Not so strictly English, either, for if one wandered in northern France and Flanders and even into southern Germany one could find its prototype.

Small windows recall to mind the olden days when there were no windows at all, merely holes in the wall to admit the light which were further developed with the invention of glass. The steeply pitched roof suggests a period as remote as Norman England and the cast iron trim of the walls is almost medieval.

One enters the house by a path through a patio to a door at the side.

Economy and Beauty.

The landscaping treatment, as important to the small house as its exterior or its interior, has been thoughtfully suggested in detail. There is nothing haphazard in the outline. Economy and usefulness, as well as charm, have been considered in the use of all available space.

A small lot usually divides itself into a public portion, or the front lawn, a private portion of lawn and garden, either at the side or the back, and the service area. In this latter is the garage, with space perhaps for cleaning the car, a drying area, and if desired a modest vegetable garden.

The first floor plan is practical and compact from every angle. The dining room and living room are distinctly separate, and the dining room may be reached from the patio as well as from the entry.

The living room here is a story and a half high, with an open trussed wood ceiling with random width sheathing.

Since there is not the profusion of windows in this room, which one sometimes finds in the modern living room, the walls should be comparatively light. If plastered, the surface should be smooth and glossy. This type of surface reflects light better than a rough surface, even though the shade of the two is the same.

Floor of Oak Planks.

The wood suggested for the floor is extra wide, hardwood oak planks, harmonizing with the exposed ceiling. This higher grade of wood is sometimes laid by a flooring contractor specializing in this kind of work. It is a little more costly than the ordinary oak flooring, but is becoming popular in its adjustability to certain types of homes, early English, Spanish, Italian.

The dining room, with fireplace on one wall, opens on to a sizeable rear porch, which can be inclosed or not, as the owner wishes. The fireplace is of brick, well burned, the common brick laid in an irregular manner with wide joints.

The exterior hardware and the hardware in both the living room and dining room are of wrought iron, in designs suitable to an English type house.

The kitchen is conveniently arranged with windows on two sides, enameled iron sink, built in cabinets with maple working tops and drainboards, built in incineration with chute to basement, electric refrigeration in entry and modern sink directly below an outside window. Floor is to be inlaid linoleum.

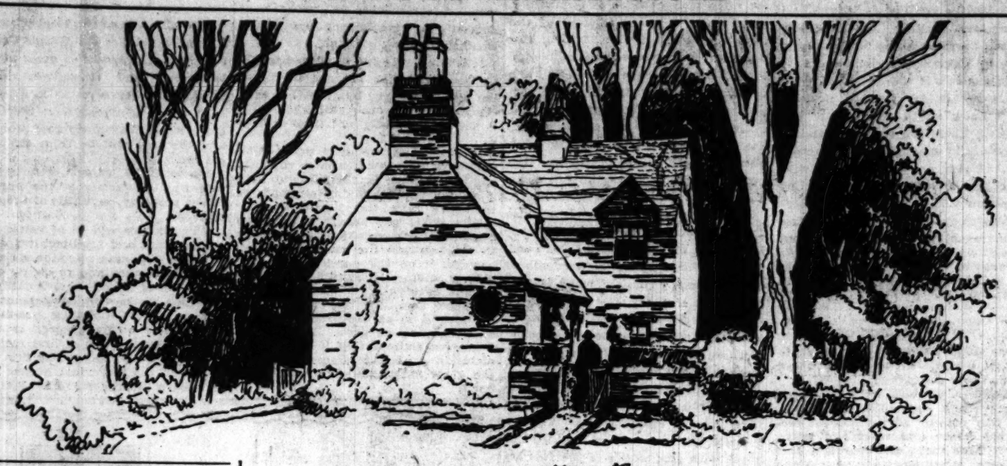
Two Bedrooms Upstairs.

Upstairs a large bedroom and a small one provide the sleeping quarters, with generous bath and large linen closet. A fireplace is also provided here. So attractive is this major bedroom that it could easily be made to serve daytime purpose of library and sitting room by the installation of built in concealed beds, wardrobe and perhaps a concealed dressing table. In this way it would contribute another room to the house for daytime use. Still more room could be had at no great expense by converting the deck into a sunroom or sleeping porch.

In the basement, the coal chute at the back runs directly into the coal room. There is generous storage space, workable room with walls which could easily be made heatproof and waterproof, and a large laundry well separated from the furnace portion, with laundry trays, water softener and water heater. The basement has concrete walls and cement floors.

The cost of this house, if built in the manner of the architect's design, will run between $10,000 and $11,000. A cheaper construction throughout would reduce the cost at least $1,000.

HEDGEROW ARCHITECTURE



Women to Tee Off at Their Own Golf Club

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

The Old Orchard Golf club, composed exclusively of women, has purchased a tract of 180 acres off Rand road and directly adjoining the Rolling Green Country club, about two miles northwest of Des Plaines, where feminine enthusiasts of green and fairway may play without having to submit to the whims of the rougher sex holes. Work has already started on the first nine, and this unit is expected to be ready for play by Sept. 1. The other eighteen holes will be laid out in nine hole units, so members of the club may play over a variable eighteen hole course. And on tournament days, when eighteen holes are in use, there will be nine holes left for private play.

MRS. RICHARD S. FOLSOM.

There are to be twenty-seven

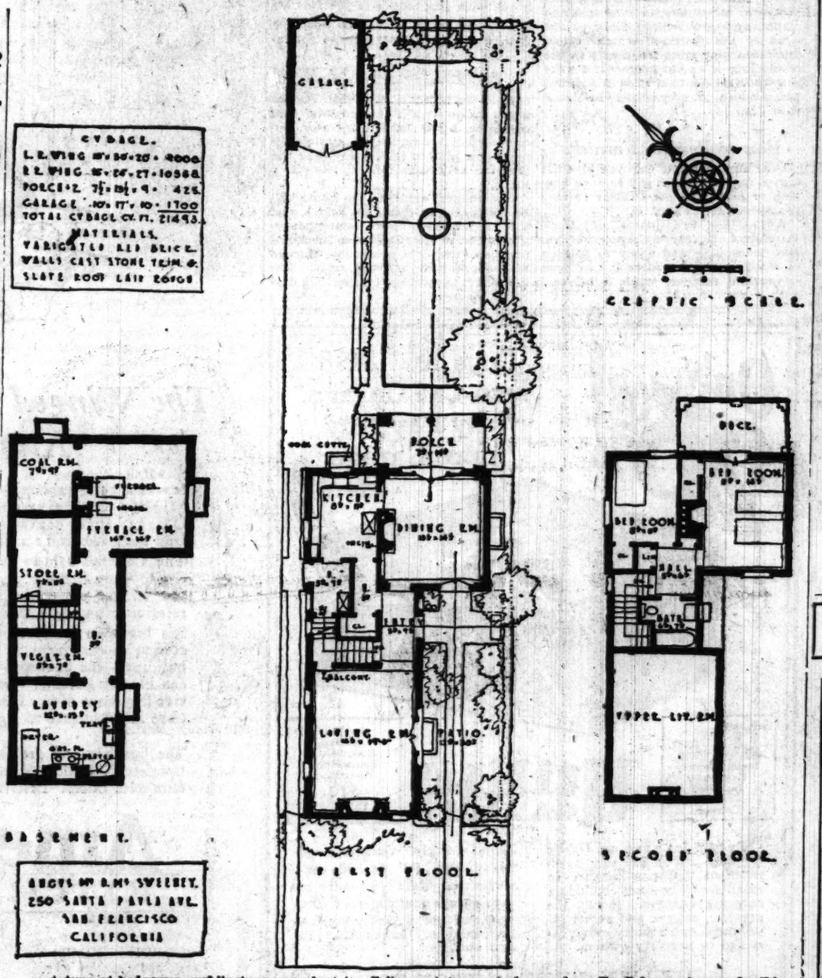
A. N. Rebori of the firm of Rebori, Wentworth, Dewey & McCormick, has designed the clubhouse and outbuildings, which are to be in a low, rambling style of American architecture.

Besides golf, there will be tennis courts, an outdoor swimming pool, and provision for other sports. And there will be a playground near the clubhouse where women may leave their children while they are on the course.

The officers of the club are Mrs. Raymond Ashcraft, president; Mrs. Richard Folsom, first vice president; Eleanor Fifield, second vice president; Wilmot Dunning, secretary, and Estelle V. Dickson, treasurer. Most of these women are prominently identified with the Illinois Women's Athletic club.

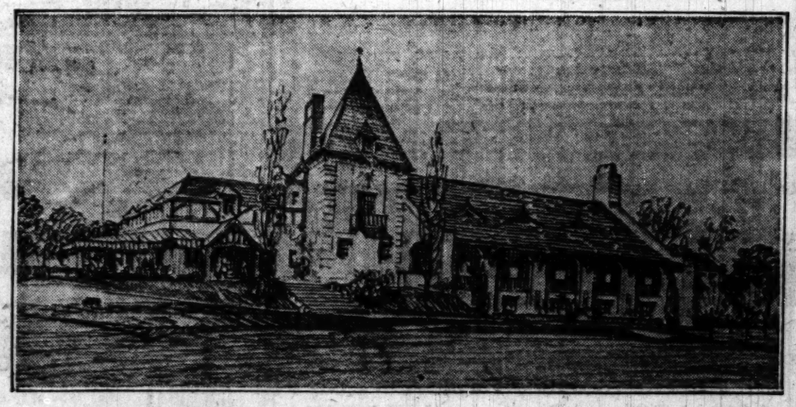
It is stated that the entire investment, including a valuation of $270,000 placed on the land, will be about $600,000. H. Lippincott of Deneen, Healy & Lee represented the sellers in the purchase of the acreage, and Raymond Ashcraft of Ashcraft & Ashcraft acted for the club. Option has been taken on sixty acres adjoining for homesites should this step be approved by the members, of whom there will be 600.

While the club is under construction there will be a men's advisory committee to tell how things should be done. Prominent on this committee are W. A. Alexander, A. E. McCordic, H. H. Taylor, Robert M. Cutting, and Raymond M. Ashcraft.



A type of hedgerow architecture, seen best in all its quaintness of charm along English country roads, this lovely example of brick home, with cast stone trim and steep pitched roof of slate, received the ninth prize in the five room division of the TRIBUNE Homes Competition. Angus McD. McSweeney, architect, 250 Santa Paula avenue, San Francisco.

FOR LOVERS OF THE OUTDOORS



A. N. Rebori of the architectural firm of Rebori, Wentworth, Dewey & McCormick designed the clubhouse which the Old Orchard Golf club, composed exclusively of women, will erect on its newly acquired property near Des Plaines. The club will have a membership of 600. There will be twenty-seven holes, of which the first nine will be ready for play by Sept. 1, it is stated.

CHICAGOANS BUY ARIZONA GOLF CLUB—TOWNSITE

A group of Chicagoans headed by Fred M. Clarke and Harry J. Collis have bought the 600 acre townsite and golf club of La Palma, Arizona, which is halfway between Tucson and Phoenix. Work is to start at once on a hotel. The golf course is to be ready by next fall, according to Mr. Clarke. La Palma also is on the state highway between Tucson and Phoenix. The town has had 800 date palms planted the owners state. There is a 2,000 acre lake north of the golf course.

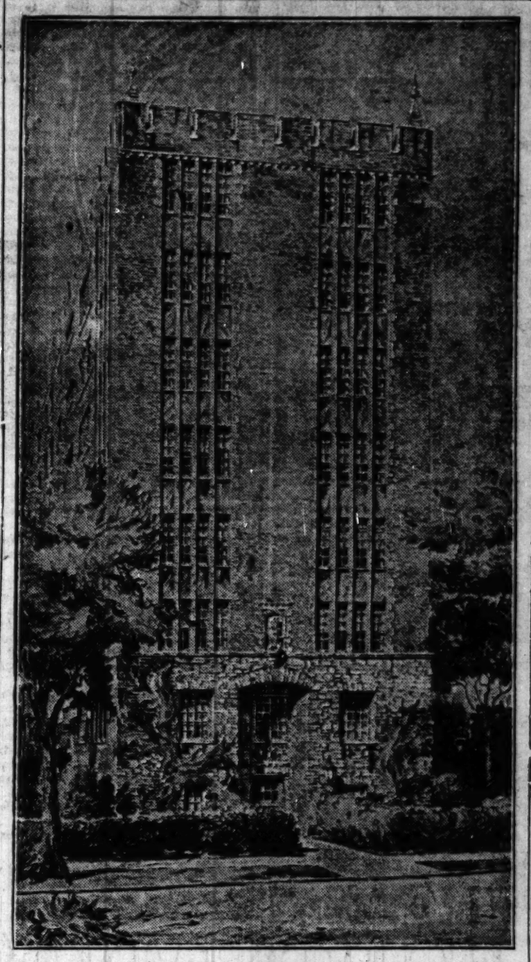
CONTEMPLATE 12 STORY BUILDING FOR ROGERS PARK

A twelve story apartment building is contemplated for 6852-58 Sheridan road, near Morse avenue, Rogers Park, where Axel G. Johnson has purchased from Louis Cole and I. Shanedling a 140x156 vacant site for a reported $125,000. It is stated the development will represent an investment of $1,200,000. The brokers were the Hensel-Coffman company, Mark Levy & Bro., and G. M. Avall.

CHICAGO FIRM WINS HONORS IN NEW YORK CITY

The Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, New York City, has awarded a certificate of honor to a Chicago firm of architects, Eugene H. Kalber and Ernest A. Grunsfeld Jr., "for excellence in design" in the Treo company's plant, which is called the best factory erected in Queens in five years.

EVANSTON'S NEWEST CO-OP



Conner & O'Connor designed the above co-op, to be erected at 1430 Chicago avenue, Evanston, by Victor C. Carlson, as told about in another column.

SERVING THE SICK

Alfred S. Alschuler designed the above ten story building, which will be erected at the southeast corner of Washington and Franklin streets for the Chicago Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat college. The second floor will contain a free clinic and the rest of the structure will be devoted to hospital and medical purposes. Completion is expected by Dec. 1. Dr. W. A. Fisher is president of the college, which gave 20,000 free treatments to poor persons last year.

61 FLAT BUILDING IS BEING ERECTED AT 4625 DREXEL

A three story and English basement building is under construction at 4625 Drexel boulevard which will contain sixty-one two and three room kitchenette apartments. The site is 70x235 feet. Alvin M. Johnson is architect and owner of the property, which it is stated will represent an investment of $315,000. Lackner, Butz & Co. have underwritten a $195,000 bond issue at 6½ per cent on the developments.

The exterior will be of red brick, with a cream terra cotta trim, on a bluish-green granite base. There will be a green mansard roof. All the apartments will have mechanical refrigeration and ventilation.

TRIBUNE MAP IN COLORS READY FOR REALTORS

Real estate brokers as well as realty owners of suburban and country property will find the new TRIBUNE'S "Chicagoland" map, in colors, a valuable thing to have, we believe. It extends from the Wisconsin-Illinois line south to the Lincoln Fields race track and for a few miles west of the Fox river. It shows in color the 163 country clubs, the forty-four forest preserves and points of interest. It's on sale at the Tribune's public service offices at 1 South Dearborn and Tribune Tower.

PHI SIGMA DELTA BUYS HOUSE IN FRATERNITY ROW

Mu chapter of Phi Sigma Delta, a national college fraternity, bought from Elias Mayer the three story residence property at 5625 Woodlawn avenue for a reported $50,000 and is now installed in fraternity row of the University of Chicago. Previously the various fraternity houses were scattered about in the Hyde Park district, but they now are concentrating along Woodlawn avenue. Stein, Mayer & David were attorneys for the seller and George Gordon and Roger S. Hoch acted for the buyer. J. Grafton Parker was the only broker.

FOOD FIRM RENTS FOUR FLOORS IN DUNHAM BUILDING

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company is moving its central division headquarters from the fifth floor of its Pershing road warehouse to the Dunham building at 450 East Ohio street. The food firm will occupy four floors, with approximately 16,000 square feet of space. It employs 150 persons at its general headquarters.

PLAN $1,000,000 PLAYHOUSE AT CICERO-SUPERIOR

Work is to start shortly on a 2,500 seat theater, office and store building at the northwest corner of Cicero and Superior, from plans by Betts & Holcomb, which it is claimed will represent an investment of $1,000,000. It is to be leased to a Chicago theater circuit which will operate vaudeville and films beginning March, 1928.

TO BE PLACED IN TOWN'S NEW MEMORIAL PARK

Dr. Frank Johnson Is Donor.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicago and Northwestern commuters to Glen Ellyn, Wheaton and points west, during lilac time in 1928 will lay down their papers as they pass Glen Ellyn's new memorial park [opposite the library and high school] and feast their eyes [and their noses, too, if they're strong enough to pry open a Northwestern car window] on what is said to be the world's finest collection of lilacs.

DR. FRANK JOHNSON. [Chambers Photo.]

For, according to William Kolacek, president of the Glen Ellyn Park board, that village has been presented with the internationally famous collection of lilacs of Dr. Frank Johnson, now growing on the grounds of his residence at 577 Duane street, Glen Ellyn.

Nation Wide Interest.

"This is one of the finest gifts a municipality ever had and one of the most unusual," said Mr. Kolacek in announcing the lilac legacy. "It will mean much not only to Glen Ellyn but to all of Du Page county—in fact, all of Chicagoland, for we expect it will attract nation-wide attention. It'll throw open to the public of the middle west one of the most comprehensive collections of lilacs to be found anywhere."

The park board, which has unanimously and enthusiastically accepted the Johnson gift, is composed of President Kolacek, David Adams, Archer Hayes, Fred Orsinger, and Acors Rathbun.

Dr. Johnson, who has lived in Glen Ellyn for thirty-five years and has been village forester for many years, started growing lilacs when he first moved into the suburb. Now his grounds are crowded with many more than 300 varieties of the fragrant May bloom.

Seven Varieties on One Bush.

There are light blue, dark blue, sky blue, double blue and single blue, white, deep purple, light purple, and countless other shades of lilacs. There are lilacs that you'd never guess were lilacs if you were merely looking at the color and forgot to note their fragrance. On one huge bush Dr. Johnson has seven varieties and colors.

In addition to his remarkable collection of lilacs, Dr. Johnson has countless varieties of peonies and tulips.

"It may be that Glen Ellyn can develop a 'Lilac Sunday,' such as they have in Rochester, N. Y., said Dr. Johnson. "Thousandstravel from all parts of this country and Canada to see the famous Rochester collection of lilacs on that city's 'Lilac Sunday.' Glen Ellyn is much more centrally located and nearer a great city, and when properly placed in Memorial park and easily seen by the public, the local collection should attract thousands of visitors to Du Page county."

Outnumbers Boston Collection.

Dr. Johnson's collection, by the way, is said to be considerably larger and more comprehensive than that of the Arnold arboretum in Boston and also the one in Rochester. It also outnumbers the famous collection of lilacs of the late Col. William R. Plum, an old friend of Dr. Johnson's, who died last month in Lombard, leaving his grounds and flowers to the town.

Col. Plum's legacy and Dr. Johnson's gift, both unusual and distinctive, being in adjoining suburbs, will enable out of town visitors to Memorial park, Glen Ellyn, to include a visit to the Lombard park lilacs, and vice versa.

"I can think of no material gift of any sort which could hold such lasting interest and cultural benefit to Du Page county as this of Dr. Johnson to Glen Ellyn," said James H. Slawson, president of Glen Ellyn.

CARLSON PLANS 7 STORY CO-OP FOR EVANSTON

Victor C. Carlson, Evanston's indefatigable builder, is to erect another tall structure in the university suburb. It will be a seven story and English basement 100 per cent cooperative apartment building at 1430 Chicago avenue. This is just south of Lake street, and opposite the First Presbyterian church.

The architects are Conner & O'Connor, prize winners in the recent TRIBUNE homes contest. Their building will be of face brick on all four sides with the usually unsightly roof architecturally treated, so 'tis promised. There'll be two elevators.

Plans call for seven apartments of seven rooms each. The living rooms will be 25x17 with master chambers, 18x17. Of course there'll be mechanical refrigeration, etc.

William Zelosky to Talk to Real Estators Tuesday

William Zelosky is to tell the Real Property Institute of the Cook county real estate board all about subdivisions at 4 p. m. Tuesday, May 17. Mr. Zelosky was to have given a talk on this subject last week but had to leave the city at the last moment.

HOME BUILDERS' DEPARTMENT

ITALIAN DESIGNS FOR SMALL HOME GROW IN FAVOR

Combine Artistic with the Practical.

BY HOMER GRANT.

The interest in the Italian style of house is growing. Requests come frequently to this department, for information concerning its practical features, its predominant characteristics, its possibilities for economical construction.

There is nothing inherently expensive about the small Italian home, modeled in the style of those symmetrical and dignified dwellings which dot the hillsides and valleys of Italy. The wealthy Italian aristocracy own villas fashioned along lavishly elaborate lines. But the less wealthy landowners own homes no less architecturally distinctive, though they may conform to much simpler plans.

The Italian style of house in its new popular American adaptation is an essentially practical one, for it can be made to adjust itself to any American climate.

Whether a lot is hilly or flat, or a climate harsh or mild, a prospective home owner can choose an Italian type of home, just as he can choose a colonial type or an English cottage type, and expect to receive from it the same amount of satisfaction.

Is Individually Designed.

Almost every Italian home suggests fine, clear proportions. It shows that it has been individually designed, and is symmetrical in its general effect as well as in such details as window placing, door arrangement. No haphazard appearance is created.

Furthermore, an Italian house is never monotonous because of this regularity of detail, but its charm is many times enhanced by the use of a graceful iron balcony, or wrought iron grilles at the window.

Builders today are employing many of the early stucco effects in the erection of their Italian homes. Brick is also used and so is limestone. In shade the colors of an Italian home cling around the pale grays, soft pinks, the buffs, yellows, or whites.

The modern plasterer is allowed great latitude in his textural stucco work and he can present almost any effect that the home owner wishes. Though if it is to be truly Italian it should be more refined than the shaggier Spanish effects.

Roofing Is Not Flat.

The roofing is not so flat, either, as in the Spanish home which offers another point of suitability for this climate. Tile is probably most generally used in Italy, though slate or shingle is permissible in an American adaptation.

Stone trim is often employed; quoins of stone at the corners of the house and around the doors and windows. Sometimes a builder will treat stucco to resemble stone and use it for this purpose and also for such details as columns and pilasters.

A porch or veranda is seldom seen in the Italian house, but frequently there is a roofed open piazza which is a part of the main entrance, and which can be used for an outdoor sitting room in warm weather.

Another interesting exterior feature is the common use of an iron balcony on the second floor, worked out to harmonize with the rest of the house.

Casement Type Window.

Windows should be of casement type with metal grilles to screen them, or hung with shutters. Mullioned windows are possible, the windows on the first floor larger than those on the second.

For the interior walls, a textured plaster work is appropriate. This may be colored any one of a dozen shades, and may be softly dull or highly glazed. Sometimes a close harmony of color exists between the exterior and the interior walls.

Curved lines are used generously. Italian windows are arched, frequently, and arched embrasures in the interior walls offer charming nooks for china, books, and ornaments. Doorheads with the same curves repeat this note.

A Touch of Romance.

There is a touch of romance hovering about an Italian home where it is picturesquely rendered and where the few featural details carry out the old Italian spirit. It is, so far, not a style which has been employed to any great extent. It is still rather new in small home adaptations and while the time will probably come when it will vie with the Spanish and the English cottage and the colonial for popular favor, at present the owner of an Italian home may know that his dwelling is a little different from many others, a little less frequently seen, and at the same time quite as practical and as charming.

TO BUY OR NOT TO BUY THIS COUPLE'S PROBLEM

The Tribune will print experiences of home owners—letters telling how the home was financed, how the initial payment was gathered, how the mortgages were paid off, how the upkeep was managed. For each letter printed The Tribune will pay $10. Letters should not exceed 300 words. Address them to Home Builders' Department, Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Economy Brought Results.

CHICAGO.—To buy or not to buy? This was the problem which confronted my husband and myself ten years ago. On the one hand were the rapidly soaring rents; on the other the hazards and uncertainty which purchasing with a small down payment and no resources to fall back upon involved.

MRS. JOHN DILLENBACK.

Some instinct within me seemed to say "buy," however, and after a diligent search we found an old brick residence which the owner was offering for $6,500, with an initial payment of $1,000, monthly payments of $60 and interest, and a straight first mortgage of $3,000, maturing in five years.

After presenting our credentials, we got the owner to accept $500 cash. The other $500 of our little capital we used in repairs, which the place was sadly in need of. After working every spare moment ourselves and using all the ingenuity we both possessed, we managed to evolve a most presentable little three room flat out of the top floor, which we rented for $40 per month, the four rooms downstairs being ample for our needs.

We have been improving our property continually, planting shrubs, trees, and making a garden, which has gone a long way in solving the high cost of living. We have made many sacrifices in these years, but our property is now clear and we feel our rigid economy has produced results.

We have been offered considerably more than we paid for the place, but so far have been reluctant to sell. Perhaps all the labor we have put into our home has endeared it to us and we feel it is a sort of memorial to our efforts and sacrifices. "Home is where the heart is," and perhaps for this reason we have turned a deaf ear to the enticing offers made us.

MRS. JOHN DILLENBACK.

Selling in Order to Buy.

CHAMPAIGN.—When we were married, six years ago, my husband had to borrow enough money to buy our first week's groceries. Now, having paid $1,500 for a lot in a good location, a nice home is nearing completion.

MRS. C. R. OZIER.

For two years after our marriage we rented, living in two different houses. Both times the owners moved back to their homes and we were forced to find another place.

We had saved $150 in building and loan shares. We looked at all kinds of houses and finally found a rather old two story one for $2,600, with a payment of $300 down and $36 per month. We borrowed $150 at the bank and moved in. It wasn't modern and was terribly inconvenient, but, nevertheless, it was ours and "home."

We saved all spring and paid back our loan at the bank. Then, little by little, we improved our place, put in a new furnace, drained the basement, repapered every wall, doing all this ourselves and saving the expense of a decorator. We also revarnished the woodwork.

Last spring we sold our place for $3,500 and bought our lot, and now our new home is well on its way. As soon as it is completed, we will move in and put it up for sale at a profit. If we sell, we'll be far ahead; if not, we'll have a lovely new home of our own.

Mrs. C. R. Ozier, 105 W. Charles street, Champaign, Ill.

Answers to Questions on Home Owning

About Electric Heaters.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Are there any methods on the market for heating a house by electricity as one heats by coal or gas or oil? K. W.

Answer—Not for furnace heating, that I know of, in this part of the country. There are electric radiators resembling in size the old steam radiators. These are nearly filled with water and heated by electricity by connection with a wall outlet. There are also electrical heaters resembling the kerosene heaters in general use, the electric reflecting heater—greatly improved to throw more heat the last few years—electric wall heaters, and electric grates.

See a Contractor.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: We want to remodel our old home. How would you go about doing this? W. S.

Answer—One could write a volume on remodeling. One could not, however, give any definite advice without seeing the house and what had to be done. New roofs, new porches, new windows, new floors, new heating plants, and new built-in features are some of the features which would come into play most frequently in the remodeling of an old home. If I were you I should go to a good contractor and discuss your problem in detail with him.

How to Remove Varnish.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Can you give me a good mixture which will remove varnish or paint and not discolor or mar the finest surface?—T. E.

Ans.—Make two quarts of thick starch and add four tablespoons of lye. Mix thoroughly and apply to surface of wood or metal. After it has been on several minutes wash it off well with a good brush.

TRIBUNE PRIZE HOME UNDER CONSTRUCTION AT MOUNT PROSPECT

The Lonnquist Construction company reports THE TRIBUNE's first prize six room house, which it is building, under way. The site selected by the Lonnquist company for building this residence is one of exceptionally fine locale, being in the Prospect Park Country club district, within the corporate limits of Mount Prospect, Ill.

The site is 75x160 feet and overlooks the Northwest Hills Country club house and golf course properties. Especially artistic landscaping will make a befitting setting for the prize house.

The brick used in the Lonnquist TRIBUNE house is the Patrician blend. It consists of that rich red, blue and browns which make a harmonious color scheme, especially when laid in pure white mortar. The roof is to be of dark green shingles. The outside woodwork will be a light cream color. Shutters are to blend in the green tones with the roof scheme.

One of the features especially an attribute of modern construction is the thoroughness of insulation. Figures indicate that the cost of heating the house with gas, which is the fuel selected, will be at an expenditure less than with coal were the house not insulated.

The latest comfort labor saving equipment for the home is to be installed. Included in these features are a gas boiler with a thermostatic heat regulator, a gas lined incinerator, automatic hot water heater, electric refrigerator and, in fact, everything the modern housewife would like in a home.

The builders estimate the house will be completed in detail by July 1, and it is the intention of the Lonnquist organization to have the house furnished and decorated by a prominent Chicago firm specializing in that craft. The house will then be open to visitors during the summer.

APPEARS THERE IS A SUBSTITUTE FOR WINDOW PANE

A glass substitute is on the market and is finding uses for itself in a number of different ways.

This glass substitute is a strong, loose fabric, embued with a substance which is solidifying and gives to it not only a transparency but also a weather resisting quality.

It is not brittle and it will not crack. Of course, it has not the length of life usually enjoyed by glass, but as it costs only about one-eighth as much it is not a very costly matter to replace it.

It can be put up on a porch with only light frames and center supports and it is claimed for this material that it admits the life giving elements of the sun's rays, the ultra-violet ray.

This violet ray affords a generous measure of certain vitamins necessary to children and therefore if children can get it on the porch where they play in winter the results are healthful and not costly.

Besides admitting the violet rays of the sun, it is as excellent a nonconductor of cold as glass. In sanitaria it is even claimed that it is easier to maintain a normal temperature with the glass substitute than with glass itself.

HOUSE PROJECT IS ANNOUNCED FOR STREAMSIDE

The South Shore Real Estate Improvement corporation, of which Hubert J. Braun is president and Rose Van Horn is secretary, bought from the Union Bank of Chicago, trustee, sixty-eight lots in Streamside park, a subdivision located two blocks from the Ivanhoe station of the Illinois Central, on which it proposes to erect at once bungalows and residences ranging from five to seven rooms in size.

All the residences will be erected on lots with at least forty foot frontages and the cost will be from $12,000 to $16,000.

Frederick W. Janson, attorney representing all parties in the purchase of the property, says this of the development:

"The houses will be of varied sizes, construction and architectural design, so as to eliminate monotonous stereotype appearance and to create an atmosphere of artistic individuality."

Which means this development will not be of the unhappy pea-in-a-pod type. The entire project is to be financed by the sale of first mortgage collateral bonds, secured by first mortgages on the individual homes. "Gale H. Dell was broker in the deal.

Glass Lighting Fixture Good Idea for Kitchen

A lighting fixture for the kitchen or the bathroom which is all glass is an excellent feature to install at the season of spring renovating. The fixtures are easy to keep clean and the shade and canopy are all glass, there is no metal save that which is necessary to the mechanism of the porcelain lamp receptacle. These are purchasable in wall bracket style and also in ceiling fixtures.

The Winged Fragrance of Boiled Cabbage Attends the Colonel's Party

It was a good cabbage—firm and tender. Mighty expensive too. It cost Judy O'Grady forty cents and the Colonel's lady her hard won social position.

The Colonel's lady may admit Judy O'Grady's sistership under the skin, but she vehemently denies any sympathetic relationship under the nose.

It's her own fault, of course. Had she chosen an apartment in a really modern building—one equipped with the American Blower Kitchen Ventilator—the elusive fragrance of her Paris perfume might have had a chance to register.

The builders and architects of the new "preferred" buildings are taking steps to eliminate odors. Discriminating tenants and buyers of co-op apartments are moving with the marching cadence of an army into "preferred" apartments where odors never offend. American Blower Kitchen Ventilators waft all cooking and household odors instantly into the great out-of-doors. Your neighbors offend not—neither are they offended

When inspecting your new apartment look first for the ventilator in the kitchen. It is the new high standard of equipment excellence. Its presence proves the quality of the whole apartment. The buildings listed offer apartments with this unusual service feature.

Insure Yourself Against Redecorating

Any type of interior decoration, paper, fabric, paint or textured plaster particularly, requires a plaster job which will not crack, streak or discolor, otherwise you are subject to the heavy expense and trouble of repairs and redecorating.

Your best insurance against this tax is to specify plaster reinforced with steel. That is the only modern specification which has proved its ability to prevent plaster cracks, streaks, discolorations. In addition, it provides truly economical fire safety in all types of residences.

BETTER PLASTERING ON METAL LATH

CITY'S BUILDING PEAK IS FAR OFF, ROSENTHAL SAYS

Sees Stable Conditions as Boon to Industry.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Labor prices have been stabilized and will remain so until June 1, 1928; building material costs are steady and the prospective home builder and investor can feel assured that general conditions in the Chicago building industry will hold steady for the season of 1927-28, according to Oscar W. Rosenthal, president of the Builders Association of Chicago.

OSCAR W. ROSENTHAL.

Chicago is building, asserted Mr. Rosenthal, within its capacity to absorb and he pointed out there has been no construction in Chicago for the past several years that was not meeting a definite demand. Underwriters of construction, he said, have been extremely conservative in their control of this phase.

"There has been more office building space created in the last year than ever before in the history of Chicago, and much of this space has found an immediate market, at prices that justified construction," Mr. Rosenthal said.

Room for More.

"This in spite of the fact that statistics prepared from time to time might lead one to believe Chicago was overbuilding in office building space. The next twelve or eighteen months will see all this space absorbed and a crying need for more.

"We still have much to do in apartment and residential construction, to say nothing of commercial structures, to meet the requirements of the Chicago situation and Chicago's normal growth. That does not mean it is not possible to overbuild temporarily in particular localities. However, throughout the community generally and throughout the suburban districts the requirements have not yet been fully met.

"It is my opinion that for several months a large construction program can be looked for. The investor who uses judgment in the selection of his location and type of structure to be placed thereon will find a favorable market for construction."

Statistics compiled by the Illinois Federation corporation show Chicago's building program for the first four months of the year to be leading that of a corresponding period in 1926 by $38,800,000, and 1926 was recorded as a banner building year in Chicago.

Edward Kracke Sells His Residence in Wilmette

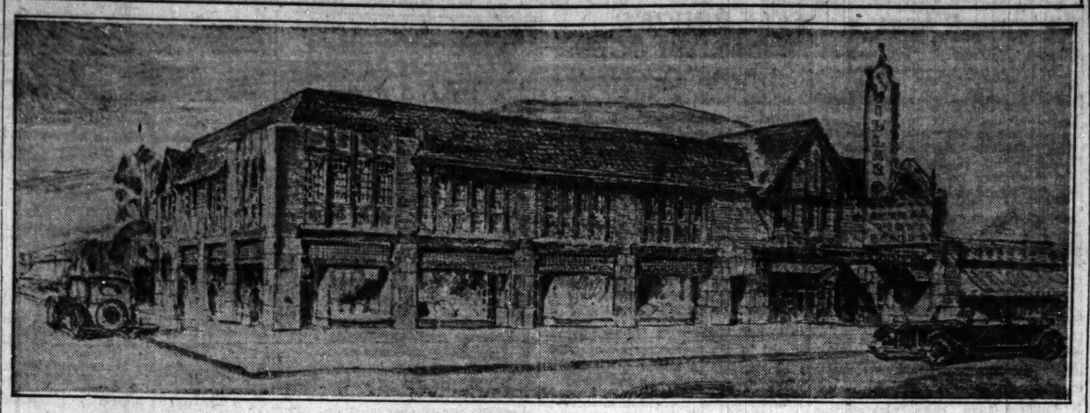
OLD ENGLISH PLAYHOUSE FOR DU PAGE COUNTY SUBURB



Villa Park has quit guessing which of the two promised movies actually is going ahead, for work has started on the Villard, a 1,000 seat house. Betts & Holcomb have designed an old English style theater. Details are given in another column.

DANIEL E. QUINN SELLS 65 ACRES TO SUBDIVIDER

Frank De Lugach, subdivider, bought from Daniel E. Quinn a tract of sixty-five acres lying between 103d street, 99th street, California avenue and the Grand Trunk railway. The property contains eighty acres, but Mr. Quinn retained all the 103d street and California avenue frontage. Mr. De Lugach will place his acquisition on the market under the name of Frank De Lugach Beverly Hillcrest. John R. O'Connor Co. represented the seller and M. A. Mills was attorney for the buyer.

START WORK ON PICTURE HOUSE AT VILLA PARK

Suburban Cinema to Seat 1,000.

Villa Park at last is going to have a picture house — in fact, the steam shovels actually started throwing dirt at the northwest corner of Myrtle and Kenilworth avenues. It's going to have 1,000 seats, with provision for an additional 400 if it's found the town and its neighbors can produce enough film fans to warrant expansion. Betts & Holcomb of Chicago have designed an old English style structure. Another movie project, announced some time ago, it is understood has been abandoned. It is stated the project will represent an investment of $130,000.

JAMES G. McMILLAN. [Wallinger Photo.]

The new playhouse will be called "The Villard" and will be owned by the Villard Building corporation, headed by James G. McMillan, president of the Wander company, Villa Park's outstanding industry. The other members of the corporation are H. D. Bargelt, president of the Villa Park Trust & Savings bank, and Roy V. Spalding, one of the owners and builders of Glen Ellyn's theater and also its Masonic temple building.

The theater has been leased to the Lynch Theaters corporation for twenty years at $12,000 annually. The lessees are hoping that many of the folk who simply can't exist over the Sabbath unless they see a picture, will flock from neighboring towns to Villa Park on Sundays, which have six day films.

Members of the American Legion have agreed to sell $60,000 in bonds of $100 denominations to residents of the town and for doing this the theater owners are to give the local post a building site in the next block to the south. H. W. Elmore, realtor and a director of the Villa Park Trust & Savings bank, has promised a free trip to Europe for the Legionnaire who sells the most bonds. The theater is to open on Nov. 1st. Hunter & Dreutzer are the brokers.

Walgreen to Open Store at Montrose and Kedzie

The Walgreen company has leased from Nathan Weiss the corner store at the northwest corner of Montrose and Kedzie where it will open a drug emporium. The lease is for twenty years at a term rental of $140,000. N. Lickerman & Co. were brokers.

CORNELIA-LINCOLN CORNER SOLD.

Lee W. Skome bought the eighteen flats at the southeast corner of Cornelia and Lincoln, from Marmal Dran for an undisclosed consideration, subject to a $40,000 mortgage. L. H. Gertson of the Cochran & McCluer company was broker for both parties.

News of the Architects

Charles F. Duke, structural engineer, formerly at room 300, 70 North LaSalle street, has moved to room 306, 184 West Washington street.

Business Block on North Clark St. Changes Hands

Charles Cleveland has sold the two story business block at 5333 North Clark, containing eight stores, five flats and a seventy car garage to S. Davidson. The lot is 154x154. Hansel-Coffman & Co. were brokers and will manage the property.

A ten story apartment building is to be erected at the southwest corner of Pine Grove avenue and Surf street by Dr. M. L. Blatt. H. R. Wilson & Co., are drawing plans for the structure which it is said will represent an investment of $1,200,000. There will be 171 apartments of two and three rooms each.

DR. M. L. BLATT. [Moffett Photo.]

Work has begun on the building for Bauer & Black, manufacturers of surgical supplies, at the southwest corner of 25th and Federal streets. It is of interest as being the first structure to be erected since the war began for the exclusive purpose of providing supplies for the government.

In connection with the extensive purchases of the Western Indiana railway in the South Canal district, John C. Fetzer took title from Edward H. Peters to 50x125 feet of property in 23d place 123 feet east of Canal street.

An interesting transaction of last week was the lease of the Jones estate property in South State street fifty feet north of Van Buren, directly opposite the Rothschild & Co. store. It fronts 98 feet 1¼ inches, with a depth of 100 feet, and is improved with a four story building. Herman E. Dick appears as the lessee.

To May 15, 1897; 30 Years Ago Today

Two transfers of the Pullman property at the southeast corner of 53d street and East End avenue were placed on record last week. The first conveyed the property from W. H. Jackson to P. R. Chandler and the second from this purchaser to George M. Pullman. In each case the consideration was $30,000. The conveyances were dated Nov. 3 and 11, 1880. At present the ground is vacant. It formerly was occupied by the Hyde Park hotel, which was destroyed by fire.

FARM AND GARDEN

Brilliant, Rare Flowers Resemble Birds and Bowls

Picture Section Shows Them in Their Own Colors.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

RARE flowers that take on the form of birds, kitchen utensils and the painter's equipment are shown in natural colors on page one of the rotogravure picture section in this issue of THE TRIBUNE. "There ain't no such animals," is the slangy remark often made by persons when they first see these interesting specimens of flowerdom. They are not often found growing with the common garden varieties, but are grown in greenhouses of private estate and in public park conservatories.

Imagine the fine paragraphs that must have been written on the explorers' scrolls when they first ran across these rare plants. Oriental explorers must have thought they were being kidded by an expert potter when they first found the pitcher plant with its pitcher shaped bowls of the Dutchman's pipe hanging to the tendrils at the end of the leaves.

An Insect Eater.

The pitcher plant is known as an insect eater. Small mice, cockroaches and dozens of other insects have been found trapped in the pitchers. Insects and small animals are lured into the trap by drops of honied juice on the leaves. They fall into the liquid in the bottom of the pitcher, where they are digested and absorbed by the plant. Absorbing the prey seems to aid in the nutrition of the plant, authorities claim.

The pitcher plants, known among botanists as Nepanthes, are to be seen in the greenhouses of city parks. There is a great collection of these plants at Garfield park in Chicago. Like the pitcher man these plants use lots of water and seem to do best where there is enough moisture in the air that drops of water dangle from the bottoms of the pitchers. In the Garfield Park Greenhouses they are swung in pots over vats of water.

A Plant Like a Bird.

The Bird of Paradise flower is a cousin of the banana plant. Nature has done a fine job of aping by producing a plant with a flower resembling the crest of the bird of paradise. The plant shown in the color roto section is about three feet high. It is the small member of the Strelitzia family. Botanists call it Strelitzia reginæ.

The highly colored blossom of the blood lily resembles the painter's brush freshly dipped in vermillion red. The whole plant when it blooms stands up like a paint brush carelessly stuck in the soil of a flower pot. A specimen of the blood lily, the paint brush of flowerdom, is shown among the rare flowers in the rotagravure section. Along with it is a color photograph of a rare hybrid orchid, Luminosa Aurea, a cross between Laelia Tenebrosa and Cattleya Dowiana.

Of the Nightshade Family.

The Streptosolen Jameson, shown in oval in the colored picture section, is a close relative of tomatoes, potatoes, and peppers—all of the solanaceae, or nightshade family. The plant naturally assumes a weeping attitude, making it of particular value in hanging baskets. It has coppery orange colored blossoms coming out on knitting needlelike branches. This shrub is a valuable plant for public and private conservatories and can be grown in large window boxes or big outdoor vases around homes, providing it is kept where it will get a sun bath frequently.

The principal handicap in using these plants is that they are hard to get in this country.

Nemesia, pictured on the rare flower page, is prized highly for its beautiful blossoms. Excellent specimens of this flower in bloom can be seen today or any time during the next week at the Garfield park conservatory.

The camellia is a shrub that has beautiful pink blossoms.

Serving a Purpose.

At the upper right hand corner of the color page of photographs are two interesting plants—the bottle brush plant on the right and an odd lily on the left (the caption under these pictures incorrectly shows the bottle brush plant on the left).

The lily on the left is of the Aloe family. Aloe plants were once used to break babies of the habit of sucking their thumbs. There will be specimens of this lily on display soon at the Garfield park conservatory.

Bottle brush plants bloom in Chicago in February and March. The bottle brush is an Australian plant. It is grown widely in the east but is not commonly found in the middle west. It is handled by some nurserymen. The plant is known among plant experts as Metrosideros, "heart of iron." These little shrubs send out brilliant blooms. There are three different kinds of the bottle brush plant grown in the West Chicago parks greenhouses. It takes time to grow them. The bottle brush is not commonly seen in the central west.

Three Types of Orchids.

Three distinct kinds of foreign orchids are shown at the lower left hand corner of the picture page. They are all orchids excepting the one in the center of the front row which is technically known as the Aphelendra Roezlii.

It is a Mexican plant and blooms here at various times during the spring and summer. It has to be grown indoors as far north as Chicago. This plant has bright orange colored blossoms and twisted leaves with a silvery hue between the veins.

The tall light blue blossomed orchid, standing back of the center plant, is usually in bloom from fall until March.

The Mexican orchid at the right of the orchid group has a deceptive odor. At first it is pleasant, but the second whiff is pungent and disagreeable. The blossoms of this orchid are small.

PEKIN'S PUZZLE GARDEN.

HERE'S WHAT A GARDENER CAN DO WITH A PAIR OF PRUNING SHEARS—Looks like a "lover's tub" in an amusement park, but it is a formal garden in Reuben Gent's front yard at 404 Chestnut street, Pekin, Ill. He has trimmed clumps and rows of Kochia Tricophylla, a Japanese plant, to represent about all the spots on a deck of cards and the characters in a mah jongg set. The garden is 30 feet square.

GARDENER TRIMS HEDGE INTO ALL SORTS OF SHAPES

GARDENERS who want images of their favorite barnyard pets in their doer yards can have them by planting shrubs and trimming the hedge to follow the lines of an animal's or bird's body. Long eared mules, contorted horned goats, double comb roosters, and images of frisky colts, calves, and pigs can be trimmed out of thick matted hedges.

Reuben Gent of 404 Chestnut street, Pekin, Ill., has trimmed his Kochia Tricophylla hedge, a Japanese plant, to represent about all the spots on a deck of cards and characters of a mah-jongg set. Mr. Gent says the plants come up in thick masses and have to be transplanted to follow the lines of whatever design that strikes his fancy. He plants the young hedge plants a few inches apart and when they grow up they form a light green hedge.

The sides and tops are trimmed off, which makes the hedge fill out at the bottom and form a solid mat. Mr. Gent says that when the hedge grows up it can be cut to resemble almost anything. He plans to make a big flower vase and a star shaped design. He finds that other foliage of the desired color can be put in and trimmed. His uncle makes a specialty of trimming the hedge to resemble animals. Mr. Gent tries out a new design each year.

In the front yard of his home Mr. Gent has the Kochia Tricophylla hedge planted in two designs, one eight feet square and the other one thirty feet square.

The plant is named after W. D. J. Koch, a botanist of Erlange. It is commonly known as mock or summer cypress, including two hardy annuals. The foliage is green in summer and turns a purple red color in autumn.

Bailey says that the seed may be sown indoors in April and the plants set out in May, or the seeds may be sown in open ground about May 1. This authority says "It is of easiest culture."

Experienced gardeners find that the plants stand up and look well in the fall after frost nips down most vegetables.

North Shore Gardens to Be Open to Public View

Arrangements are being made to open north shore estate gardens to the public once a month this summer instead of seven Saturdays in succession, as has been the practice in former years, according to an announcement made yesterday by Mrs. Samuel T. Chase of Lake Forest, Ill. An attempt will be made to select gardens at their best at various times during the summer.

Five Winnetka gardens have been selected for the first open day to give flower gardeners a chance to study the wide range of possibilities in May gardens. Mrs. Chase says the owners of the gardens to be opened next Saturday, May 21, specialize in bulbs and wild flowers, "and incidentally they are very beautiful this season."

The gardens to be opened next Saturday are those of Mrs. John W. Gary, Mrs. James Simpson, Mrs. John W. Scott, Mrs. Frederick H. Scott, and Mrs. John Stuart, all of Winnetka.

Dates of other open garden days will be announced later. Next month's gardens will specialize in June flowers.

Indiana Wheat Crop Reported Better than Ever

MINER M. JUSTIN, Indiana's official crop reporter, says in his recent report that Hoosier farmers will have 1,715,000 acres of wheat to harvest this season, 18,000 acres more than last year, despite the fact that 69,000 acres of wheat sown last fall have been abandoned in that state because of winter kill, floods, and other causes.

The wheat crop of Indiana was in better condition when a recent check was made than it was a year ago, and better than the ten year average.

Early planted corn is coming up in the southern part of Indiana. Some corn is up as far north as Columbus, Ind., and reports indicate it is in excellent condition.

Farmers have been making fair progress in preparing their corn ground recently in Iowa. Rains keep interfering, however, with farm work in that state as well as other midwest states, including Illinois and Missouri.

Iowa's oats are looking fine; winter wheat, grasses, and clovers are making a good growth, and the potato crop is practically all planted, according to reports.

Little corn has been planted in central Illinois. The ground is heavy and stiff. Rains continue to interfere with farm work generally in this state.

999 MICHIGAN IS NAME CHOSEN FOR EVANSTON CO-OP

To Have 12 De Luxe Apartments.

Number 999 Michigan avenue is the name chosen for a de luxe cooperative apartment building which is under construction at the southeast corner of Michigan avenue and Lee street, Evanston. With this name it ought to vie for fame with our own Number 999 Lake Shore drive and Engine Number 999, "running on Chicago line."

At any rate, McNally & Quinn, the architects, say the new building will rival anything in the co-op line in Chicago for luxury. It's to be three stories and English basement high and will contain six six-room apartments, three of seven, and three of eight, twelve in all.

Despite the fact that the structure will be low in height, there'll be an elevator at the service of the owners which ought to be pleasing for any with a goodly amount of avoirdupois.

The equipment will be of the de luxe variety. Among the old reliable mechanical refrigeration, cedar closets, and the like is a newcomer—silver sinks for the pantries.

Title to the 150x110 site recently was taken from Anson Mark by the Lee-Michigan Building corporation, of which E. L. Middleton is president. The builders are the firm of Middleton & Gonsalves of Evanston. George S. Ballard & Co. represented all parties as broker in the purchase of the site. It is stated the project will represent an investment in excess of $400,000. The First Trust and Savings bank of Chicago is underwriting a bond issue on the structure which is scheduled for completion for October occupancy.

SELF-DRIVING TRACTOR DOES WORK OF THREE

Lincoln, Neb., May 14.—Frank L. Zyback, a Grand Island farmer-mechanic, has perfected a driverless tractor. An electrical attachment for the ordinary machine controlled by an automatic stop and steering device is designed to do the work of three men.

The plot of ground to be plowed is furrowed once, the corner of the field rounded so that the tractor will have a definite course to follow. Sticking out in front of the tractor is a four foot rod on the end of which is attached a metal shoe. The shoe is placed in the first furrow and thereafter serves as a pilot.

Should the pilot swerve from a straight course the gasoline valve is shut off and the machine stops, a signal brings the farmer from parts unknown and the tractor starst off again on its task. When all but a narrow strip in the center of the field is plowed the machine automatically stops.

Thus all the farmer is required to do is to keep the machine oiled up, the gas tank filled and to guide the tractor around the field in making the original furrow. If given a large enough acreage the machine can work all night providing the gas supply holds up.

LAKE FOREST FLOWER SHOW OPENS MAY 29

Lake Forest's flower show will be held this year in the service buildings of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's estate at Lake Forest, Ill., on May 28 and 29. Mrs. Albert B. Dick Jr., Green Bay road, Lake Forest, Ill., who is chairman of the show committee, announces that the show will be open from 12 to 8 p. m. Saturday and from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m. Sunday.

Mrs. Dick says the Lake Forest flower show will be held under the auspices of the Lake Forest Garden club, primarily to illustrate the decorative uses and the best quality of spring flowers and flowering shrubs. The show is not limited to garden club members but is open also to visitors and exhibitors who are not members of the flower growers' organization.

The judging will be done Saturday morning, May 28, at 11 o'clock.

Members of the show committee are: Mrs. Philip Armour, Mrs. Kent Clow, Mrs. John Coleman, Mrs. Donald Douglas, Mrs. Robert A. Gardner, Mrs. De Forest Hulburd, Mrs. John Andrews King, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. L. T. McMenemy, Mrs. Aimet Millet, Mrs. William Mitchell, Mrs. Earl Reynolds, Mrs. Donald Ryerson, and Mrs. John W. Scott.

Come and See

our Free Home Exhibit at the address shown below. You see completely furnished bungalow. Inspect its modern kitchen, built-in breakfast set, and other up to the minute built-in features. There are many "Honor Bilt" homes in this city, completed and under construction, which we will gladly show you so that you can see for yourself the many money saving features of our successful "Honor Bilt" system.

Solid Construction With Less Labor

In the construction of "Honor Bilt" Homes, as in the building of skyscrapers, every modern means of rigid, permanent construction is employed; every method to eliminate waste, to save material, time and labor is strictly enforced. The steel beams of skyscrapers swing into place. They are "cut-to-fit" the same as the framing in our "Honor Bilt" Homes.

The "Honor Bilt" System assures solid construction with less labor, and enables you to build at the lowest possible price. The highest principles of building construction, as recommended by the United States Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C., are rigidly followed.

SAVE $500.00 to $2,000.00

More Than 37,500 "Honor Bilt" Homes Built Today

Our customers have invested over $100,000,000 in "Honor Bilt" homes. 25,400 have been erected by customers themselves. "Honor Bilt" homes are easy to build. Every piece of lumber is marked to correspond with numbers shown on the plans, which we furnish free; the smallest pieces are bundled and marked so as to save time in locating. With each house we furnish a booklet which explains and illustrates the simple directions. We ship you all the material for a complete house, including lumber, millwork, roofing, building paper, paint and varnish, hardware; also plumbing, heating and lighting fixtures. One order brings it all. Material we furnish is shipped to arrive at the job when that particular material will be needed. We do not furnish masonry materials.

The Best Easy Payment Plan —Low Interest Charge

All you may require is a Building Lot and a little money to help pay some of the labor. You may only need a building lot if you or your friends can do some of the work. Sears, Roebuck and Co. will sell you on easy payments all materials and advance cash to pay for most of the labor, and give you a long time to pay. A small payment each month as you would pay rent makes you the owner of a good substantial modern home in a few years. Your interest becomes less each time you make a payment. Our EASY PAYMENT plan has enabled thousands of families to get out of the renter's class and own their own home in a short time.

Highest Quality Material

The lumber furnished for "Honor Bilt" homes is bright and new, fine, dry No. 1 framing, clear Cypress for outside finish, and clear siding. Expert mechanics, modern machinery and good materials insure perfectly made millwork. Oak, Birch, Fir or Yellow Pine (as specified) for interior finish—the kind of material that will prove to be a little better than generally used in home construction.

Satisfaction Guaranteed

We guarantee to furnish sufficient material to complete the house you select according to our plans and specifications. We guarantee safe delivery. We guarantee satisfaction or will return your money promptly, including freight charges. This guarantee is backed by our entire organization with a capital of over $100,000,000.00.

Here is your chance to buy a complete high grade Modern Home at our WHOLESALE DIRECT FROM FACTORY PRICE! You will find that a Sears, Roebuck and Co. home makes a good investment, that it has a high resale value.

1—You Save Middlemen's Profits. We ship direct to you from our own producing mills, the largest building material factories in the world.

2—You Save All Architectural Fees. Efficient service, including complete set of plans, specifications and simple ready-cut plans. We also furnish inspector's field service. No additional charge.

3—You Save on Costs of Erection. "Honor Bilt" homes are furnished ready-cut—cut accurately and economically by Modern Machinery. By actual certified test we know our system SAVES AS MUCH AS 40% OF CARPENTER LABOR, and insures a better job.

4—You Save Waste and Time. We ship you all of the high grade material for a complete home, including plumbing, heating, and lighting. Sears, Roebuck and Co. is a safe place where you can obtain this complete service.

Insulite

Beats the Weather be it Hot or Cold

INSULITE is the one insulation material that combines the highest degree of insulation with the greatest structural strength.

INSULITE beats all weathers. By using it you get better insulation—saving heating money in winter and enjoying a cool house in summer—and you also get a greater structural strength.

It replaces other materials and in the double service it renders—providing remarkable insulation value and supplying a needed construction unit—it is not only economical at the start, but pays dividends year after year.

Ask your lumber dealer about INSULITE. It is a wood product, and he can supply you.

THE A. A. LEWIS PLAN OFFERS A RARE OPPORTUNITY TO SALESMEN.

In connection with our $10,000,000 building construction program we have evolved a monthly payment like rent financig plan which makes our proposition unusually attractive to the prospective home owner. The plan is so simple and the terms so liberal that every man who pays rent is a prospect, because the payments on one of our up-to-date two apartment brick homes, located two blocks from an "L" station in a highly restricted and zoned neighborhood, are due monthly in installments no greater than his present rent and the down payment is unusually small.

Now this means a lot to a salesman. The number of your prospects is unlimited. You find them everywhere ready to grasp this attractive proposition which frees them from the shackles of rent-paying and makes them independent home owners.

Salesmen with or without experience—come in and get the details of the A. A. Lewis Plan. You will find it well worth your while. See me personally.

AUTOMOBILES—GASOLINE.

STUDEBAKER'S PRICES ARE THE LOWEST!

That fact has been established by the great number of sales made by us to "shoppers"—buyers who look around first and then purchase where prices are lowest. Studebaker gives the most absolute protection—5 days' driving trial goes with each sale!

STUDEBAKER ROADSTER. This Duplex model has been refinished a beautiful blue and reconditioned so completely that we'll give it our 30 day guarantee. Mechanically it's smooth and powerful and the equipment includes built-in sliding curtains and many extras. $845.

FLINT TOURING. A beautiful sport car with collapsible top and a wealth of equipment that includes 4 wheel brakes, shock absorbers, 2 spare tires, windshield wings, bumpers, etc. Mechanically A1. A wonderful buy for the motorist who wants a low swung rakish car. Late model; $645.

CHRYSLER SEDAN. The very latest model Chrysler 50, driven only a few weeks. Opportunity to get absolutely brand new car at substantial saving. Has 4 wheel brakes and every essential extra. Will be sold immediately for $945.

HUPMOBILE SEDAN. This car was not driven over 20 per hour for first 1,000 miles; after that was oiled and greased every 500 miles. The fine appearance and performance of the car substantiate this statement. Extras are shutter front, heater, bumpers, spare tire, step plates, etc. $685.

PACKARD BROUGHAM. A careful inspection will prove that this 4 pass. Packard is in the best of mechanical shape. The finish and upholstery are beautiful. Equipment includes bumpers, step plates, trunk, spare tire, etc. Formerly owned by prominent attorney who gave it careful use. Bargain at $845.

NASH TOURING. Has little mileage and will give purchaser new car satisfaction. A beautiful car with powerful, smooth performance. Equipped with glass sides, 4 wheel brakes, spare tire, and other extras. Sales price, $585.

ESSEX COACH. A current model, run only 9,000 miles. Looks as though direct from the factory, and the balloon tires are like new. Equipped with shutter front, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Will not stay long at $545.

PAIGE SPORT TOURING. A handsome, classy car in excellent shape. Just refinished. Has bumpers, road lights, spare tire, etc. $245.

STUDEBAKER SEDAN. A 7 pass., with a wealth of equipment. Has spare tire, snubbers, Rilex bumpers, heater, trunk, etc. Mechanical condition is A1. $685.

MAXWELL COACH. Because the inside is very clean and the outside has been refinished this Maxwell is a bargain de luxe for $295. Extras are spare tire, spotlight, bumpers, etc. One of our best bargains.

DODGE COACH. Used exactly 4½ months and no one could tell it from a new Dodge. Finish is a handsome navy blue. Motor would satisfy the most exacting buyer. Extras are seat covers, spare tire, step plates, spotlight, etc. $725.

RICKENBACKER BROUGHAM. It's difficult to distinguish this car from a model direct from the factory. Finish is a beautiful two tone combination. Equipment includes 4 wheel brakes, bumpers, trunk, spare tire, spotlight, heater, etc. Today, $785.

CLEVELAND SEDAN. Run only 5,000 miles. Here has new car opportunity at used car price. Tires look absolutely unused. Finish is attractive two tone color. Upholstery luxurious. Equipped with spare tire, bumper and bumperettes, snubbers, etc. $785.

WILLYS-KNIGHT SEDAN. A 7 pass., has attractive original finish and the upholstery shows no wear. Runs like a top. Has heater, plates, spotlight, bumpers, spare tire, snubbers, etc. $585.

BUICK COUPE. A 4 pass. Master Six that's a recent model and looks as though right off the showroom floor. The finish is a beautiful blue and very tasteful body type brand new. Driven carefully for 4,000 miles. Equipped with 4 wheel brakes, snubbers, heater, spotlight, bumpers, spare tires, etc. An unusual bargain for $1,255.

CHEVROLET SEDAN. Really it is almost impossible to tell this distinctive Cher from a new model. The finish and upholstery are beautiful. Run only 900 miles and the extras are bumpers, spare tire, spotlight, etc. $475.

OLDSMOBILE SEDAN. Actually only used a few months, and the present handsome appearance and fine performance clearly demonstrate this fact. Equipped with trunk, bumpers, snubbers, step plates, spare tire, etc. $565.

HUDSON SEDAN. A late model with 5 good balloons, shutter front, bumpers, heater, step plates, and other extras. Mechanically A1. In very clean shape. $785.

Thousands Buy SAFELY At Bird-Sykes

A lot of cars are bought on impression, a short demonstration, and a big hope for the best. Our policy is to give you your money's worth of useful, serviceable, and satisfying automobile transportation. We want people to know what they are getting before they buy. Thousands of satisfied owners of "BIRD-SYKES REBUILT" cars attest this policy. You can take advantage of the most liberal time payment plan offered in Chicago. Our plan is flexible enough to suit every one's requirements. Decide now to buy safely. Check these values and arrange to see them.

JEWETT 6-55 SEDAN. This car presents the appearance of new and shows no dented fenders or other earmarks of hard service. Mechanically it has had our inspection and we will gladly guarantee it. This is probably the best conditioned Jewett in our stock today and we are sure its value will be immediately recognized by anyone who takes a demonstration. Included are heater, trunk, bumpers, etc., and the tires are like new. $875.

DODGE 1926 COUPE. Driven so little that it still has all the characteristics of a new car. Looks "young." Has beautiful leather trim, balloon tires, disc wheels, bumpers, etc. A car of this class in almost new condition, such as this, should fulfill all the requirements of any buyer, especially if he is interested in saving some real money. $650.

JEWETT 6-50 TOURING WITH CALIFORNIA TOP. This car is in fair condition. It would make a wonderful bargain for the man who likes to make adjustments himself. Mechanically it is highly serviceable, makes a good all-year car, and there is plenty of pep under the hood to satisfy you. $175.

JEWETT BROUGHAM 6-50 5 PASS. This is a model that is unsurpassed for smooth power, flexibility, and riding qualities. Besides it is trim, low hung, and extremely smart appearing. The finish is in perfect condition and the upholstery shows no signs of wear, not even on the driver's seat. Guaranteed mechanically, which means that the car can be used with the utmost confidence. Trunk on rear, excellent tires, etc. $495.

COLUMBIA SEDAN. Powered by the well known "9-0" Continental light 6 cylinder engine. Roomy 4 door car, with disc wheels, bumpers, automatic windshield cleaner, mirror, etc. You won't have to spend any money for tires—all excellent. All ready to drive. $300.

PAIGE 5 PASS. BROUGHAM. 6-72. This, of course, is a very late Paige model, and one that is very popular with professional persons and women who drive their own cars. It is so easy to handle one thinks only of steering. It was traded after small mileage and really shows no signs of use whatever. Thoroughly modern; brilliant performer and guaranteed by Bird-Sykes; $1,050.

AUBURN SEDAN. High class, well built car with plenty of power. Looks good. Its 5 tires are brand new; operates smoothly and quietly. You can't buy a value as good as this anywhere for less than $350.

PAIGE 6-72 5 PASS. SEDAN. We cannot describe this automobile in a way that will do it justice. It is a car that really should be seen to be appreciated. Tires, mechanical and coach condition are considerably above the average and there is much equipment that is new. Don't let the price we have on it influence your judgment, but come down and ride in it and you will be agreeably surprised and wonder how we can sell it at the very low price of $1,175.

DODGE 1926 SEDAN. Person contemplating buying a new one should see this today because almost new cars like this always quickly snapped up. Has 5 piece windshield, automatic windshield cleaner, balloon tires, leather trim, etc. Guaranteed mechanically. Only one person can buy it, so do not put off coming down.

PAIGE DE LUXE 7 PASS. SEDAN. 6-72. Here's a car that will meet the requirements of the most cautious buyer. Its condition is perfect, which means that the car has seen little service it would seem for new, and mechanically it is just nicely worked in and positively flawless in operation. We will gladly guarantee it. An extremely good value in a car that expresses individuality. $1,450.

BUSINESS SERVICE.

ESTABLISHING A DEALER SALES ORganization by traveling salesmen is now a slow and expensive; many years ago a manufacturer placed an order with us for all dealers' ads in baby carriages. It is due to this that a local merchant who had enterprise enough to advertise baby carriages on his own hook was the kind of a dealer they wanted in that town.

During 1926 years they increased their DEALER SALES 600%; this customer is now the largest manufacturer of baby carriages; they are still using our service; this plan is being successfully used by many very large manufacturers whose lines embrace almost everything that is sold by retailers.

Tribune Want Ads
smash the boundary lines of
"seasonal selling"

"We rented within two days."

"Our tenant moved four months before the spring renting season and we were very much in need of the money. The flat was empty two months before we tried a Tribune Ad. Then we rented it within two days, thanks to The Tribune."

MISS SARA SHOPPER (left), 1315 South Harding Avenue.

"Apartment rented same day."

"My dad was discouraged when our apartment remained vacant some time. Finally I decided to insert an ad in The Tribune, as it is my favorite newspaper. The result was most gratifying, as the apartment was rented the same day the ad appeared."

MISS R. WOLF,
727 Junior Terrace.

"Rented my neighbor's apartment as well as my own."

"I had an apartment to rent several weeks after the usual renting season. An ad in The Sunday Tribune giving the details, also rented my neighbor's apartment as well as my own."

MRS. ROSE HORTSMAN (right),
1050 Dakin Street.

"Six vacancies . . . rented in one day."

"I have an apartment hotel and Tuesday I had six vacancies. I called The Tribune and placed an ad for Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. Thursday night I had all of the apartments rented to desirable tenants. While traveling through the South and West this year I saw people reading The Chicago Tribune Want Ads, even though they were a thousand miles away from Chicago."

MARGARET GRAYBILL (below),
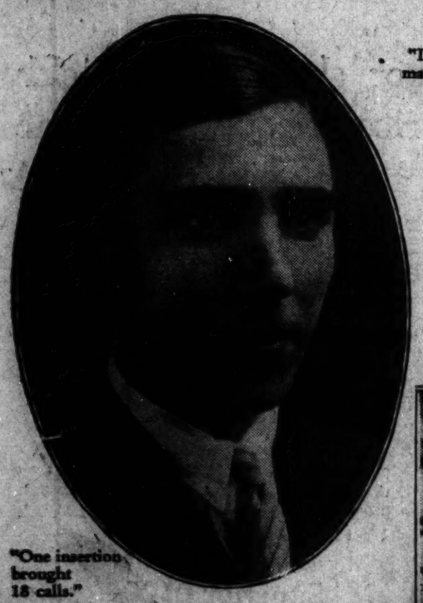
3301 West Adams Street.

"I had so many calls."

"I recently had an apartment for rent and ran an ad in The Tribune. I rented it immediately, and to very desirable tenants. I had so many calls, personal and telephone, that I decided, just for curiosity, to keep track of them. They totaled 18."

MRS. ELIZABETH DOOHAN,
4712 West End Avenue.



"One insertion brought 18 calls."

"Our six room flat had been vacant for two weeks, and there were no prospects of a tenant. We decided to use a Tribune Want Ad. One insertion brought 18 calls, and the flat was rented to the first applicant. The Tribune has taught us to avoid future vacancy troubles."

S. SEL...
2726 West D...

". . . we had 52 answers . . ."

"When our flat became vacant we advertised in The Tribune the following Sunday. The bell rang repeatedly that day and all that week, until we had 52 answers, and we regretted that we did not have a dozen flats to rent. We live in a suburb sixteen miles west, and the people came from Chicago and surrounding suburbs. Needless to say the flat was rented early the first morning."

MRS. G. A. SORRICK,
126 Willow Road, Elmhurst, Illinois.

. . . . . EVER notice how business in general is "breaking the bounds" of seasonal selling? Remember when they used to build houses only in the summer time? And sell furs only in the winter time? It's different now!

May 1st, for example, never marks the end of the apartment renting season as far as The Chicago Tribune Want Ad Section is concerned. Thousands of apartment owners and agents have proved that in this year, as well as in years past, well-worded Tribune Want Ads of adequate size will produce interested prospects regardless of the month of the year!

Thousands of NEW people are constantly moving to Chicago and many of them are caught en route by The Chicago Tribune Want Ad Section and directed to their future homes by its Apartment To Rent columns.

The eleven testimonials which appear on this page represent but a few of the many expressions of satisfaction written by users of Tribune Apartment To Rent Want Ads. These successful experiences, however, are to be expected from The Tribune, for it is the one Chicago newspaper that is used most constantly by both apartment owners and renters. Last year The Chicago Tribune published more Apartment To Rent Want Advertising than all of the other Chicago newspapers combined!

In addition to the valuable reader interest built up by The Tribune's constant leadership in this important classification—Apartments To Rent—two other highly important aids are available to users of Chicago Tribune Want Ads. These are, first, the largest city and suburban circulation daily and Sunday of all Chicago newspapers and, second, the largest group of ready-to-buy readers of all Chicago newspapers.

The buying ability of Tribune readers is evidenced not only in the display advertising leadership which The Tribune maintains in the various lines of high-priced merchandise, such as automobiles and high-priced clothing, but also in the Want Ad leadership which is maintained in Want Ad classifications involving cash transactions of larger-than-average size.

Want Ad leadership means that for buyers and readers, The Chicago Tribune Want Ad Section can be of greater service in producing results quickly than the Want Ad Section of any other Chicago newspaper!

For buying, selling or exchanging ANYTHING, try a Tribune Want Ad FIRST!

"We rented without trouble."

"We had to sublet our apartment at a time when there were a number of desirable apartments available in the same locality. We invested in a Tribune ad, and were overwhelmed at the number of high grade applicants. We rented without trouble to a discriminating family."

MRS. F. P. FORRESTER (left),
512 Deming Place.

"We were really surprised."

"It is sometimes necessary to advertise for tenants. The last time we ran an ad we rented the apartments the first day and received so many calls after that we were really surprised at the wonderful results. Our motto is 'If The Tribune can't sell it, the others can't.'"

MISS BELLE CHERNUSKIN,
4236 North Spaulding Avenue.

"I hope my experience will enlighten others."

"Late in the fall last year, before moving here, I advertised a five room apartment on the south side, and a single insertion rented it for $50. I hope my experience will enlighten others as to the valuable assistance of Tribune Want Ads."

Rare Flowers

NEMESIA, shown here in the vase, sends out one of the rarest splashes of delicate colors. These blossoms were produced in J. Ogden Armour's greenhouse at Lake Forest. The two camellia blossoms at the base of the vase were forced on the same farm. The camellia is a small tree or shrub, a hard wood plant.

THE BOTTLE BRUSH PLANT is shown here on the left, with its pink tinted blossom. The other is known as a screw pine. Both of these potted plants have interesting and unusual foliage, furnishing a contrasting green that makes their colors stand out. These are in Mrs. Robert H. McGann's Lake Forest greenhouse.

IN ITS WEEPING ATTITUDE this flowering, tree-like plant grows quite tall in this locality. This Streptosolen Jamesoni plant was 6 feet 4 inches tall. Its small stem, straight as a rod, is shown weighted down with blossoms strung on thread-like branches. This plant is among the unusual collection in B. Kuppenheimer's north shore garden.

OUT IN GARFIELD PARK conservatory, these insect-eating plants are used to devour pests. It means death for any pest to enter one of these pitcher-like receptacles, which contain a liquid ferment. The horticulturist's pet names for these two insectivorous plants are Nepenthes Atrosanguinea, at left, and Nepenthes Hookereana of Borneo.

THE BIRD OF PARADISE is one of the rare flowers in Mrs. Robert H. McGann's garden at Lake Forest. The plant is noted for its unique coloring. The name was given this flower because of its resemblance to the crest of the bird.

THE PAINT BRUSH OF FLOWERDOM is the Blood Lily shown here on the left. Haemanthus Natalensis is its garden name. The hybrid orchid, Luminosa Aurea, on the right, was produced by Charlesworth, an English hybridizer, who crossed Laelia Penegrosa with Cattleya Dowiana. These two plants were grown by August Koch of the West Chicago Park conservatories.

CHICAGO UNION STATION
TWO HALVES OF A GREAT CONTINENT
PAUSE TO ENJOY
FRED HARVEY SERVICE

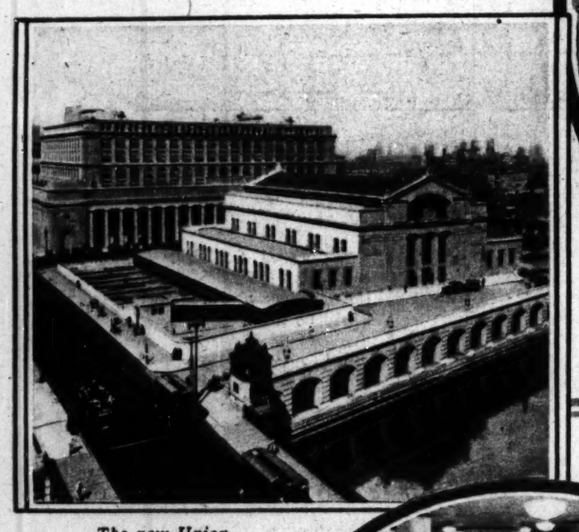
The quiet, club-like restaurant

The West Waiting Room of the station, gives easy access to the lunch room.



The new Union Station—served by four Fred Harvey dining-rooms.

The Main Lunch Room holds over 500 people and provides unequaled a la carte service.

The Cafeteria gives prompt, economical service of excellent, Fred Harvey food.

The Coffee Shop is an attractive corner for lunching or afternoon tea.

A BUSINESS man from New York and a family of five from Philadelphia . . . a Congressman from Washington . . . a cotton broker from Atlanta . . . San Franciscans going to Europe . . . lumbermen from Seattle going to Boston . . . a Minneapolis banker and a Kansas City cattleman . . . people, people, people. Tens of thousands of them pass through the Chicago Union Station every day. They pause here to enjoy Fred Harvey service.

When the Chicago Union Station took its place among the world's great passenger terminals, its restaurants and shops were placed under Fred Harvey management. That, too, was part of a well-considered plan for the needs of the traveling public. A quiet, cheerful restaurant offers club-like service; prompt a la carte meals at counters and tables in the large lunch room; a quick, appetizing, simple meal in the little Coffee Shop; and an attractive cafeteria for prompt and economical service. Variety of tastes are catered to. Prices to suit every purse.

The Fred Harvey reputation has been fifty years in the making. It all dates back to 1876—to that first station restaurant in Topeka, Kansas. Here was initiated a new standard of food refreshment for the train passenger. Today travelers the world over are familiar with the Fred Harvey dining service.

Fred Harvey kitchens and Fred Harvey dining-rooms are scrupulously clean. From "fruit in season" to the coffee the food is of the finest quality—in keeping with the Fred Harvey ideal. People remark the uniform flavor and goodness of the coffee—as Fred Harvey serves it. An expert knowledge of methods of brewing—here is the explanation of the enjoyment of the cup of coffee ordered from a Fred Harvey menu.

For forty years CHASE & SANBORN Coffee has been an inseparable part of the Fred Harvey service. Every day for forty years CHASE & SANBORN Coffee has been prepared and served in a way to give untold satisfaction to coffee lovers—the Fred Harvey way.

Foreign Men-o'-War

THE WORLD'S BIGGEST BATTLESHIP, Britain's new Nelson, presents striking illustration of the extent to which the United States has been outstripped in naval power by its failure to maintain the position authorized by the Washington treaty. The Nelson and its sister ship, the Rodney, displace 35,000 tons, have 45,000 horsepower, and steam at 23 knots. In tonnage, horsepower, and speed they overtower America's most powerful battleships. In armament, likewise, nine 16-inch guns carried in three triple turrets forward make them the most formidable fighting ships afloat. Note that the foremast is replaced by a tower containing gunnery control stations, navigating positions, and sea cabins.

FASTER THAN AMERICA'S SWIFTEST CRUISER is the new Kako of Japan. This greyhound of war and a sister ship have steamed at nearly 35 knots. In this original design six 7.5-inch guns all are mounted in separate turrets. The uptakes from the foremost boiler room are trunked back into the first funnel clear of the bridge, and the usual mast is replaced by a cone-like structure surrounded by bridges and platforms. Abaft the second funnel is the hangar, and two catapults are fitted amidships.

A TREATY DESIGN is the British cruiser Kent, displacing 10,000 tons and designed for a speed of about 32 knots. Note the curious bridgework replacing the customary tripod mast.

A NEW SPEED QUEEN OF NAVIES will be the Italian cruiser Trento, laid down in 1925, which is designed for a speed of 36 knots. Note the sloping bases to the funnels, which contain the uptakes from the numerous boilers required for her 150,000 horsepower. The 150,000 horsepower is unparalleled in history and far in excess of any designs even projected today by other world powers.

A "TORPEDO CRUISER" is the new Japanese Kinugasa, which includes twelve tubes in its armament. The Kinugasa and a sister ship of its type, displacing 7,100 tons, are heavily armed for their size with six 7.5-inch guns in three twin turrets. Note the oddly-waved deck line and graceful bows.

SACRIFICING PROTECTION FOR SPEED, the new French cruiser Tourville is expected to have a pace of 34 knots. Four other new French ships can hold their own with the Tourville, and this squadron of five could outrace any other cruisers on earth except two Italian and two Japanese ships.

Quaker Curtains Are Made For Your Home

Previously, the matter of choosing curtains was of small moment. Today, with Fashion's insistence that curtains must harmonize with the spirit of your home or apartment, the choice of curtains has become very important.

Do you live in a Colonial home, for example, or modern American, or Spanish, or English? Your curtains must carry out its spirit.

This rigid dictate of fashion gives you even more than the usual reasons for choosing Quaker Lace Curtains and Nets—because, obeying Fashion, Quaker curtains are designed and made for your home.

Eight Patterns Shown, But More Than 2,000 Are Available

Eight of the new Quaker patterns are shown on this page. They cover eight different types of homes and apartments, and are but an inkling of the Quaker available service to you.

From the complete Quaker Line, with its 2,000 and more patterns, the expert buyer at your favorite store has selected those exactly suited to your home.

And these curtains especially chosen by him for your home are the same Quaker Lace and Net Curtains that in quality, workmanship and finish, have led all others for more than a quarter of a century.

How The Lasting Transparency Of Quaker Curtains Is Assured

Only fine, long-staple yarn, much of it Egyptian, is used in Quaker Curtains and Nets. This means that the yarn itself does not thicken when water touches it. This special yarn is made in a tied (or knotted) construction. Thus Quaker Curtains and Nets assure your room the correct diffusion of light, not only when new but until actually worn out.

Go to your favorite store and ask to see the right Quaker Craft-Lace Curtains for your home or apartment. Meanwhile, send 10c for a copy of "Correct Curtains" so that you will have a thorough background on how fashion today regards correct curtaining.

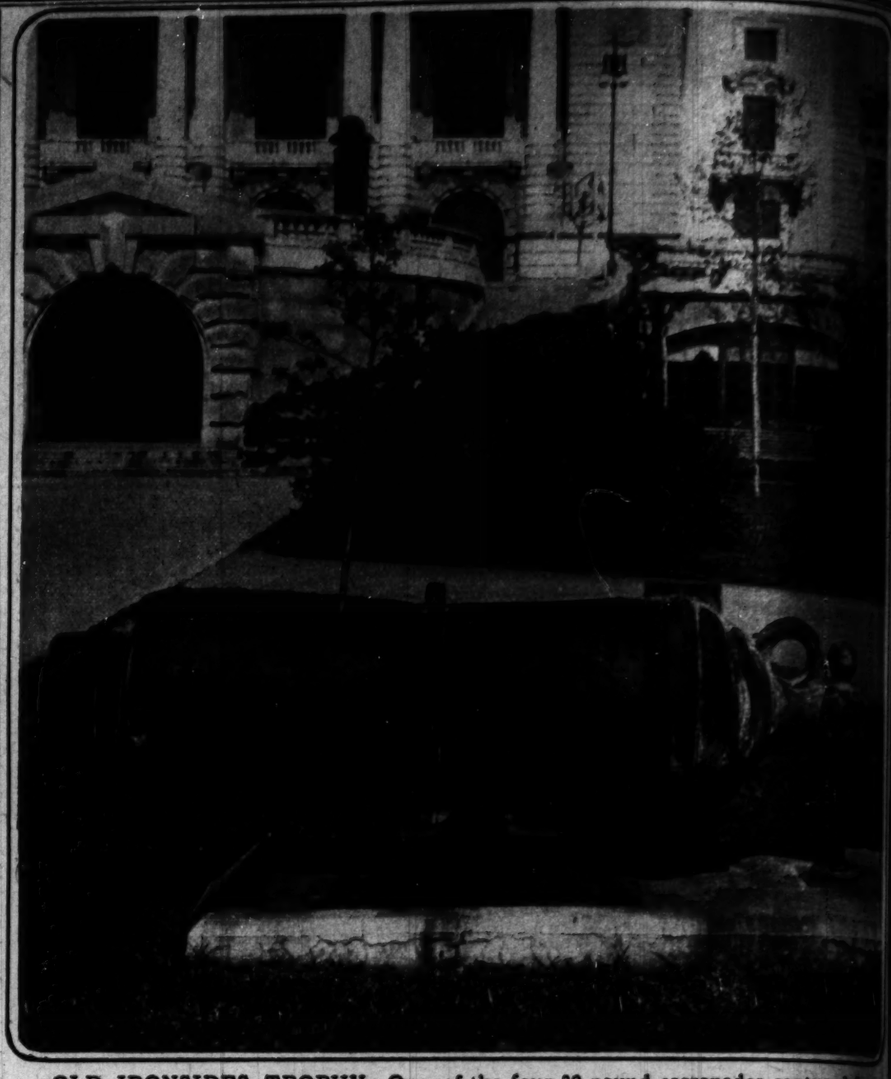
MODERN PLAYGROUND IN HISTORIC SURROUNDINGS—The new athletic field presented to the American University of Beirut, in Syria, by V. Everit Macy, the New York capitalist. The field, in a natural amphitheater, overlooks the Bay of St. George, named for St. George, who, according to tradition, saved the city of Beirut by slaying the dragon. Roman students played on the same site during the early Christian era.



OLD IRONSIDES TROPHY—One of the four 32 pound carronades captured from the British ship Cyane by the Constitution off Madeira on Feb. 20, 1815. In this encounter Old Ironsides engaged and subdued not only the Cyane, but also a British ship of war, the Levant, after a four hour battle. The Levant later was recaptured by another British warship. The flags of both Cyane and Levant are other trophies of this battle.

Where dinner is an adventure long remembered

Go INTO any of the great hotels or clubs in midday or of an evening when the soft lights twinkle on glistening silver, and you will see an old, old friend gracing the tables or being borne majestically on high by the waiters who move so silently to and fro.

"Canada Dry!" Somehow you know that no other ginger ale could be quite so much at home amid such distinguished surroundings. It adds an aristocratic, crowning touch to every meal and makes it something to linger over and remember.

Thousands upon thousands of men and women now drink this fine old ginger ale regularly at luncheon and dinner because of this very reason. They know that it gives even the simplest meal something of the sparkle and splendor of a dinner at a great hotel or exclusive club.

No – Ivory couldn't have taken the splinter out!

The tears in this amateur dress-rehearsal just before the Big Night have nothing to do with the play—they are quite genuine.

Just as the ingenue was running romantically towards the outstretched arms of the hero, she tripped and fell. Result: a long smudge down the front of her costly silk costume and a splinter in her hand.

"Oh, I don't c-care about the s-splinter," she sobs. "It's the d-d-dress. It c-can't be cleaned by tomorrow n-night."

"Oh, yes it can, Marjorie dear," comforts Sally as she climbs over the footlights.

"H-how?"

"Oh, with a little magic I have, called Ivory Soap."

And sure enough, it was!

To girls around twenty – this expert advice on the care of the skin is especially important!

IN childhood, girlhood and womanhood, complexions depend for their loveliness upon proper daily care. But the girl from fifteen to twenty-five must be particularly careful to guard her sensitive skin. For, between these ages, doctors tell us, complexions are often most susceptible to blemishes and acne.

But what shall one do? "Keep the skin safely, thoroughly cleansed," answers the skin-specialist. "Most skin-ills," he continues, "are the result of clogged and infected pores, which, in turn, result from improper skin-cleansing."

"Pure soap and warm water," says the Life Extension Institute, in its bulletin on "Care of the Skin and Scalp," "will prevent the clogging which so often permits infection to occur . . . . especially in people under thirty."

Young skins have marvelous powers of recovery—but why risk beauty at thirty by carelessness at twenty? Begin right now—today—to give your skin the only beauty treatment that doctors and skin-specialists universally endorse—daily cleansing with pure soap and water.

Wash the face with Ivory Soap and warm water several times a day. Don't rub in the lather too vigorously, it isn't necessary with Ivory. Rinse with warm water and then with cold. If your skin is naturally dry, add a bit of pure cold cream.

In supplying Ivory Soap for the gentle, safe cleansing of the skin, we are supported, not only by the highest medical authority, but by the experience of millions of women whose complexions are the finest tribute a soap could have.

Ivory Flakes meets this important safety test:

Before you trust your costly fine fabrics to any soap in any form, a doubt naturally comes up in your mind:

"Is this soap really safe?"

Ask yourself: "Would I be willing to use this soap on my face?"

A soap which is too strong for your face is naturally too strong for your delicate and costly garments.

Ivory Flakes is simply Ivory Soap in flake form. Of course it fully meets this important safety test. For Ivory Soap, pure, mild, gentle, white—has protected the faces and hands of millions of women since 1879.

Ivory Flakes offers you a real margin of safety for cleansing the very finest garments you own. Many women wash all their clothes and dishes with Ivory or Ivory Flakes, thus saving their hands and preventing redness and roughness.

Make Amazing Gray Hair Test

In 10 minutes natural shade begins to return. This test is free. New, colorless, water-like liquid makes this way safe and simple.

GRAY hair is proved unnecessary. A new safe way, called Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer, has been found to bring back natural shade—to remove the faded streaks and restore graying parts.

Over 10,000,000 women have used it as the sure way to avoid detection. They urge it because it's safe. Those who know will warn you not to use the crude, messy old-time dyes. This is clean and colorless. Will not wash nor rub off. You simply comb it through the hair.

Gray hair lacks color pigment. This way takes its place, and gives the natural effect. If hair is auburn, it will revert to auburn; if black, to black.

Test it free if you wish. Simply write for special outfit. Or go to nearest druggist. A few cents' worth restores color perfectly. Money returned if not amazed and delighted.

Tree ripened, rich meated CALIFORNIA'S finest PRUNES

MELLOW in flavor, these prunes which ripen on the trees until their store of sugar is complete. These are Sun-Maid Prunes, from the packers of the famous Sun-Maid Raisins.

Rejecting small, unripened or undeveloped sizes Sun-Maid selects natural medium sized prunes with small seeds and a plump, rich meatiness.

Cooking rounds them into delicious "plums," firm, tender-skinned; their juice rich in natural sugars. What a royal breakfast dish! How easily they may be made into desserts that tempt the whole family!

And, because they are tree ripened, they supply in fullest measure all the nutritive values that nature can store in prunes.

Ask your grocer for Sun-Maid Prunes, the finest of the California crop. They come in 1 & 2 pound purple cartons with the Sun-Maid girl, trade-mark of known merit upon them.

Why Half Clean Your Rugs?

Ordinary cleaners will remove surface dirt and some surface litter. But it is the imbedded dirt that wears out rugs.

This imbedded dirt must be freed before suction can draw it into the bag.

The New Hamilton Beach cleans by Triple Action.

Powerful suction raises the rug off the floor and to the wide nozzle. Motor Driven Beating Brush gently beats and vibrates the rug, freeing all imbedded dirt. Sweeping brush action loosens threads, hair, etc. Powerful Suction whisks everything (surface and imbedded dirt, hair, lint, etc.) into roomy bag.

Light in weight, low, and perfectly balanced, this cleaner is easy to handle. Its ball bearing motor requires no oiling—ever. Entire machine is "Built to Last a Lifetime."

Don't be content with a cleaner that removes surface dirt. Insist upon one that removes all deeply imbedded dirt—the New Hamilton Beach! Phone your dealer for FREE demonstration. Know what thorough cleaning means.

MARY LEWIS.

JULIA CLAUSSEN.

THESE NEW STARS WILL SHINE AT RAVINIA when the outdoor opera season gets under way late next month. Tina Paggi is a coloratura soprano who made her American debut with Fortuna Gallo, that New York impresario who has introduced many foreign notables to this country's opera. Mary Lewis is the lovely American soprano who has won stellar honors with New York's famous Metropolitan troupe. Julia Claussen made her first American appearance with the Chicago opera some years ago, coming from Stockholm, where her fame was already secure.

"For 3 years I was a slave to cathartics"

LUCILLE AND EDITH, children of Mrs. Lottie C. Chambers, on the Beach at Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

MRS. CHAMBERS WRITES: "For two or three years my two little girls had severe stomach trouble and boils. Certain things they ate invariably upset them. I tried medicines, dieting—but nothing seemed to help, except temporarily . . . I had noticed Fleischmann's Yeast advertised for such trouble and finally decided to try it. I gave them two cakes a day, and in three weeks the boils had entirely disappeared—and neither of them has had any since. As to their stomachs, they can now eat anything short of nails. I still feed them a cake of Yeast a day just to be safe."

"I AM PROMPTED to write you this letter of appreciation for the benefit which I have received from using your fresh Yeast. In painting portraits all day long a great expenditure of vitality is required. I find the use of your Yeast is a great benefit in restoring my energy, and in keeping me fresh for the work, and a-plenty left over for enjoyment of The Social Life."

Howard Chandler Christy, New York City.

"PILLS, TONICS, OILS — I spent many dollars on them with no results. After I had given a dozen of these remedies a fair chance I wasn't any better.

"I was actually taking a laxative every night—that was the state I reached as a result of chronic constipation, indigestion and biliousness.

"I often wished that I never had to eat, I felt such distress after every meal.

"Then I started in with Fleischmann's Yeast—more to please a couple of my friends than for any other reason. They argued that Yeast had helped many others—that it wouldn't do me any harm. I followed their advice three months ago and ate my three cakes regularly every day.

"Today I can honestly and truthfully say that my whole constitution has been marvelously helped. I absolutely forgot about laxatives after seven weeks! I once more really enjoy my meals."

John L. Porter, San Francisco, Calif.

THIS is the way yeast works—gently but surely overcoming constipation and its attendant ills. Almost before you know it you really feel like a new person!

Mysterious? — not at all. Yeast is simply a corrective food. Each cake consists of millions upon millions of living plants, grown in a nutritious extract of malt and grain. Unlike drugs, which merely stimulate the body to temporary, abnormal activity, yeast keeps the whole system clean—and active. It purifies the digestive and intestinal tract, checking the absorption of dangerous poisons by the blood. It gradually strengthens the sluggish intestinal muscles, aiding the processes of elimination.

One person in every third family is a user of this truly amazing food! Start today: make Fleischmann's Yeast a part of your regular diet. See how your constipation gradually disappears and with it that constant discouraging feeling of weariness. You can again enjoy a normal digestion, a fresh healthy skin.

All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy two or three days' supply at a time and keep in a cool dry place. Write for a free copy of the latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-791, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington St., New York City.

MR. JOHN L. PORTER, with his children, Marjorie and Jack, on the beach near San Francisco, Cal.

LEFT

"MY STORY should be a convincing one, as it is written by one who for twenty years had suffered from what was considered incurable constipation. Not to mention all its attendant ills. I had fits of depression, pains, tempers, headaches, sleepless nights. Physics, cathartics, I tried everything—except an operation. I had even tried Fleischmann's Yeast—but in an unsystematic fashion . . . After reading some of the published letters of Yeast enthusiasts I decided to give Yeast another and a real trial, and to use ordinary patience, as a part of the cure. Today I am a living example of the real cure for chronic constipation—three cakes of Yeast a day for eight weeks. I have grown to like it as a food. At night (I take it dissolved in a glass of milk) it makes a 'nightcap' fit for a king. I am a writer and can heartily recommend Yeast to all whose work requires rested nerves."

Mrs. Rex Barrett Hagan, Seattle, Wash.

One person in every third American family keeps well this new easy way

Eat three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast regularly every day, one cake before each meal. Eat it plain in small pieces, or on crackers, in fruit juice, milk or water. For constipation physicians say it is best to dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before meals and before going to bed. (Be sure that a regular time for evacuation is made habitual.) Dangerous cathartics will gradually become unnecessary.

JEALOUS OBERON

KATHERINE NEWLIN BURT

The Woman He Loved Wounded His Pride and He Sought Revenge—but How Terrible Was That Punishment, He Could Not Foresee.

I AM quite aware that the history is preposterous; let no reader thereafter accuse me of a deliberate attempt at mystification. I know that it is quaintly, even terribly inhuman, like the grotesquerie of an oriental fairy tale. Perhaps that is why I must write it down, to prove to myself its reality, as a child would like to touch the moon: there is moonlight in it, too, and an enchanting sort of disenchantment.

They were, to begin with, Drigo and his lady Christine, of the paradoxical tradition of the twentieth century, not unknown to other periods—that tradition of extravagant skepticism to which nothing is impossible. Drigo was a native Californian, descended from one of the old Spanish families and as beautiful in person as a don of romance. He lived on large rich oil, wine, and beast producing acres, a land flowing with milk and honey, and was master of an ancient house made, I suppose, of adobe, but it looked like gold, all set with gardens like those the young Aladdin visited to gather blue and white yellow jewels. Drigo, except when he tasted the fleshpots of San Francisco, spent his days on horseback or dreaming in the sunlight of a murmuring patio, where, when his vast moon—it seemed always to be his own—melted itself through the soft California air, he played and sang to a guitar: a good humored, easy, beautiful, and unthinking fellow when I first knew him, like a classic god.

But Christine, terrible Christine, belonged to the caste of New York's wealth and she was polished and pointed and nimble, like a silver pencil. She knew her shops and her music, her pictures, curios, and books; she knew her foreign tongues and cities, her brilliant people, Mr. and Mrs. Capital A, B, C, everywhere. She knew everything that may be known by five alert and well trained senses, and with her sleek, tawny head, bright fingernails, and fine eyebrows, was as perfect and incessant a small mechanism as the artificial nightingale for which a princess sold her birthright.

These two, Drigo of California and Christine of New York, met on a trans-Atlantic liner, the most banal possible medium for the conjunction of two such constellations, but it was a Mediterranean tour, and in an ageless sort of way they were both very young. In fact, that was their quality, a deep seated immaturity, which, with Drigo, betrayed itself in a boyish irresponsibility, a kind of magnificent spiritual carelessness, and with Christine, more subtly, in a strange, surprising innocence. She had been so busy collecting the appurtenances of sophisticated maturity that she had had no time to make their terrible mechanisms a part of her acquisition. There was something of crystalline infancy about Christine; she seemed to sit on the nursery floor surrounded by elaborate mechanical toys, which she could only finger, never put into effectual motion. Her eyes were beautiful with ignorance.

I think they loved first in Egypt, floating on the Nile and looking up to Pharaoh's childish architectural braggadocio: Pharaoh quite of the same cult as Christine, probably, and as efficient in his day and generation. The wanderers, Drigo carelessly listening, Christine carefully expounding, were married in Paris and spent their first six months in New York City. Then—and it must have been as though a whirling, musical contrivance had been broken—Drigo's wife found herself in his silent, golden house among its orange blossoms.

That was a sweet, still place. Drigo rode about it dreamily all day for miles and miles—he called it sightseeing—and in the evening, gazing at Christine, he played on his guitar.

It came to her suddenly. . . . "But, Drigo, you don't do anything!"

Of course, that verb with its synonyms, to do, to make, and to perform, and in all its tenses, was for Christine the conjugation of a life. As to this she was perhaps a trifle old fashioned, but she belonged to the old American tradition as well as to the twentieth century one. A man who did not DO was thereby insubstantiated, translated into moral nothingness. DO NOTHING was nonexistent, belonged to another dimension. You were manifest only by what you did—a very complete formula, in fact a faith, as vivid and as cruel and as efficient as Mahomet's.

"You must do something, Drigo!"

"Drigo, you must do something!"

I can see him lifting those glamorous, vaguely malicious eyes.

"Adorable signora . . . why?"

"You are wasting your life. You accomplish nothing. You have nothing to show for all your opportunities, your privileges. You are a drone, a parasite."

"Why not a phagocyte, my beautiful?" suggested

Christine stared fixedly at the figure writhing in Drigo's grasp.

He began to howl, later to wail for mercy.

Drigo, laughing in tune to his guitar, "a much nicer little animalcule."

But let him laugh or sing or sigh, she was at him by merciless day and night with her conjugation of the verbs to do, to make, and to perform, and in order to be an example to him and an inspiration, she did things herself. I believe that, quite unconscious of any contradiction in philosophy, she taught Yoga to a class of young Mexicans. She was aided in this undertaking by a Hindu gentleman she had imported from the Ganges via New York. He moved about Drigo's gardens in robes, rather hairy he was and not too clean, doing nothing, of course, but being psychically efficient in the manner of holy men, thereby impressing Christine, who, having exhausted "outwardness" and mastered, as she imagined, every possible detail of externalisation to its fingernails, was entranced to discover "inwardness," confessed to psychic experiences, and became, completely in the western manner, a missionary forthwith. Drigo could not interest himself in Yoga and he loathed the Yogi, whom he forced one evening, I've been told, with a playful Spanish ferocity, into a fencing lesson and dug him in the ribs with a foil.

But, little by little, that inimitable human rapier, Christine, pierced to her young husband's vitals and pricked a slumbering conscience so that he agreed that he was wasting his life and that accomplishment of some sort was a moral necessity. That was, however, as far as he got. He would not do anything about it, only it spoiled his digestion, riled his temper, and made him give up his guitar.

In short, they began to make each other miserable, as it is so easy to do when there is energy without sufficient outlet. They had no children. They grew more and more bitter, more and more hostile. They quarreled terribly.

AFTER three years Christine decided to sue for a divorce, as discreetly as it may be done with the aid and under the veil of wealth. To get advice as to the first steps toward obtaining it, she returned to New York. Drigo stayed in his rancho.

I went out to see him in that spiritually shattered golden palace. He was bitterly unhappy, restless and distraught.

"A man can't hold a woman, can he, Dan, against her will? I wish I might have been allowed to lock her up. A spoiled child . . . never knew the meaning of fear or of dependence. Proud. Proud. She was terribly bored with me, you know. That hurts my pride. I wasn't enough of a master, Dan."

He sat there in the lovely empty patio, trying to smoke, moving his shapely dark head to and fro against the golden wall. The moon blanched his face. I missed his laughter and his music. The guitar was broken. I believe Christine had smashed it in one of their incredibly passionate encounters.

". . . I loved her. . . . I do love her . . ." Drigo murmured. "This place is altogether haunted. I see her eyes. . . ." He passed his hand across his own.

"There's something all wrong about it, somewhere," he grieved, "some mistake. We were fundamentally so happy, Dan." He sighed like a tired boy. "We never really quarreled."

I stared. Hadn't they? I remembered their outrageous battles, when they had stood shaking, staring at each other, pouring out hot and cold poison from pale lips.

"She was bored with me. She thought I was too dull to understand her confounded mysteries. . . ."

His face became convulsed with fury. He stood up and began to throw himself about. "I tell you she is a sort of monster, that child . . . a beautiful little, shining monster, inhuman, like a fairy queen."

"Jealous Oberon," I murmured, and he stopped short, drawing himself up in hidalgo fashion. "I suppose you mean that d—— Turk," said Drigo, who was nothing if not literal. He had never been very clear about the Yogi, either racially or geographically.

"Give me something to do!" cried Drigo, holding out his brown hands. "I'll go mad here in this emptiness."

So, like a Jesuit or a jiu-jitsu artist, I took advantage of the weakness of his despair for my own purposes and got him to San Francisco, where he became furiously helpful in my mission. He gave fencing lessons to the young men in the evenings and taught music to young Jews. He was the most popular worker we ever had; he took all the virtue out of Christian endeavor in a way I have never seen equaled for skill, deviltry, and complete unself-consciousness.

But it did not make him happy, of course. Doing good never made any one happy. After all, happiness is emphatically a state of being, and sooner or later the black blood in his spirit worked upon him and, seeking its level, made him aware of . . . Joachim.

Joachim was mad. But none of us knew at first how mad. Like Drigo, we were fascinated by him.

Drigo first saw his narrow, supple back as it stood before our "Come-on" sign in the club window. He was attracted by Joachim's big stick-out ears and pointed head. . . . "Like Puck," said Drigo, "made me think of Puck." He said, "Come in, youngster"—for the back seemed that of a lad in his teens—"and I'll give you a fencing lesson. You need muscular tightening."

Joachim turned. Drigo admits that for an instant his blood was stopped by that perfect, vaguely oriental golden face. But when Joachim's jade eyes went sliding in their black slits, sliding and probing and dilating, he wanted to laugh and he yielded to the desire. The laughter made Joachim moisten his paling lips, his eyes grew black and opaque. A hand like a narrow iron ring gripped Drigo's wrist.

"You think I need muscular tightening, sare? Very good. I'll go in and fence with you."

Drigo went in with a numb left arm, but still inclined to laughter. The rest of us, even in the beginning, were not amused.

AS a frequenter of St. Timothy's Mission, of course, Joachim did not last beyond a fortnight. By that time investigation had confirmed my suspicions and his attendance at fencing lessons was discouraged. Not too soon. Already there had been a victim. There was a little girl employed as clerk. Later I visited her in the hospital and for nights her delirium haunted me with its repetition of "Take away his eyes . . . his hands . . . his eyes. . . ." I blame myself for not telling Drigo that story, for not even giving him the facts of that girl's disappearance, but there was a sort of innocence in Drigo, the purity of a boy who knows much evil but cannot, because of youth and natural cleanliness, make any comprehending use of it to soil himself . . . which made it somehow difficult for me to burden his conscience with a shadow of responsibility for such a sordid fate.

And all the while, though I did not know it, he was in touch with Joachim, saw him frequently, was still diverted by him, was quite unaware of the creature's hatred, of his half scared contempt, would have him to dinner and question him, and draw him out. Joachim, of course, must have liked good food and wine and the flattery of a handsome worldling's notice. He had his own mad ambitions, too, this Joachim.

My first awareness of the strange relationship was on that April evening when Drigo came to my rooms to announce his withdrawal from the mission. He had decided to go in for oil. Some Texas proposition had been made to him. ". . . Sounds exciting, different," said Drigo, fidgeting about my table, looking, with my green light striking up against his face, so altogether different from the young lover in a moonlit patio that my heart, which loved him, contracted at his aspect.

"I'll rot if I stay here. Mission work won't hold me out . ." he flushed, meeting my eyes valiantly, "of the mud. There's too much temptation, Dan, to make pies, you know. I'm tired of teaching masculine frailties to fence and play. I believe I agree with Joachim . . . better to do evil with all your soul than to do good with only one corner of it. . . ."

"Joachim?" I questioned blankly.

"That green eyed, Puck eared monster, don't you remember, that I corralled one afternoon last autumn? I've been seeing a lot of him." Drigo came over, sat on the table edge, hugged his knee, and chuckled like a bad boy, his weary face crinkling and sparkling again. "You ought to hear him talk, Dan . . . and, by the way, he's no oriental. At least his mother was—guess now!—Dutch. The father God knows, but Joachim was educated by a Chinaman, old mandarin who died suddenly one day after chop suey. . . ."

". . . which, no doubt, his adopted son had prepared for him," I pleased myself by thinking . . .

". . . and since then . . . inherited savings being spent . . . Joachim has lived by what he calls his Power." Drigo got up from the table, lighted his sixteenth cigaret, and prowled, while he expounded to me the philosophy of Joachim.

"The creature thinks he is an incarnation of superhuman, concentrated force, that he is WILL IN ACTION, the Essence of Performance. No one, it seems, can resist him when he turns on this force. Mind, you see, is of the same stuff as matter, another form or aspect or appearance of the same stuff . . . like steam and ice and water. The apparent miracle is accomplished when a man moves his hand. Once you admit that the hand, matter, has been moved by a purely mental power . . . will . . . why, you've admitted the miracle. It's no stranger, just the same thing carried a step further, when the same mind, or will, moves a mountain. You ought to hear him, Dan, he's a wonder. Just as easy, he says, to control another fellow's hand . . . especially . . . and the creature sort of opens and shuts his claws . . . especially another woman's. I believe he likes women . . . after his fashion."

I felt cold while Drigo laughed. I have seen a boy, unconscious of peril, teasing a poisonous, numb snake.

"By Jove, fit the fellow up with robes, hide his Puck ears, y'know, give him a sumptuous setting, and the women would fall down and worship him—in hordes they'd fall. Talk about your Yogis . . .! And he's got a gorgeous patter—Power—Accomplishment—Performance—sounds like Christine." And at that very instant, I believe, the terrible idea came to him, for he fell silent and grew still and plotted deviltry with his malicious, thin boy face between his hands.

If I had only told him then about that girl!

HERE and now my story must become incredible. This is the point where an adventurer pinches himself to prove he is not in a dream. For my own relief, a mental pinching process, I have tabulated the probable explanations. First, of course, Drigo's state of mind: wounded in pride and tenderness, therefore revengeful, ignorant of Joachim's evil, considering him still a Puck, a sort of fairy instrument for the punishment of his contemptuous Christine. He wanted, I suppose, merely to know that Christine had taken the absurd San Francisco street arab seriously, had started perhaps a class under his auspices. Later, to the mortification of her spiritual vanity, he could explode Joachim's pretensions—and Christine's—by a revelation of the fakir's true identity.

As for Christine, an orphan, as unguarded as a wandering sprite, she had become by temperament, training, and recent bitterness of experience, a chamber swept and garnished for the entertainment of Pucks—or devils—dressed as gods. Freed from faith, she was a slave to her credulity.

Ignorant of the bread of life, fed only on its mental sweetmeats, Christine had the appetite which the witch used to entrap her Hansels and her Gretels. Besides, like most cake eaters, she was a neurasthenic, a self-hypnotizer, suggestible by habit to an astonishing degree.

And Joachim had his power. There can be no doubt of its reality. Some maniacs are possessed of what seem like supernatural energies of volition, forces which normally are diffused become, in them, artificially and balefully concentrated. Besides, of course, he had his motives. He hated Drigo's laughter, his immunity, and he loved his own immense self-aggrandizement.

Joachim, disguised, transformed, temporarily enriched, with credentials in his pocket and two dark servants in his train, set out for New York with a mission of fairy malice to perform at Drigo's ex and a mission of pure devilishness to perform on his own. This Mr. Drigo had never taken seriously the mighty Joachim, it seemed. Very good. Joachim was serious. Perhaps by means of the [illegible] still beloved woman, the proud rich woman in New York, Drigo's humor might be made to dance to another tune, to the tune of a scorpion's whip of shame. Joachim knew the heart of Oberon, knew that in it Titania was still enthroned, that her purity and her dignity and her pride were dearer to Drigo than his own.

I think that no sooner had Joachim left his sight than Drigo had forgotten him. He had no very profound interest in the outcome of his prank, no great faith in its successful issue. He had not guessed half the credulity of Christine. Perhaps he was merely glad to be rid of a too persistent protégé. At any rate, when I saw him during his preparations for the oil adventure he never mentioned Joachim nor said a word about his own weakness. I had no hint of it, remember, or certainly I would have prevented its execution. My first real introduction into the unbelievable affair was when I heard from a San Franciscan florist the fate of Marawanagadi. This, of course, is not the name I have forgotten it.

This happened six months later on the afternoon of Drigo's return from his Texan expedition, in which I believe he lost a cool fifty thousand dollars and his faith in oil. He had wired me to meet him for dinner that night. He wanted to pour out upon me the vitriol of his resentment against the "damned exploiters" that had roped him in. When I came, having by means of a gift of flowers made peace with an aunt with whom I had broken an engagement, I had my own story to tell.

"Your old friend Joachim," I said, "has become a Hindu fakir and is living in mysterious magnificence."

"Where?" gasped Drigo, dropping his jaw and opening his blazing southern eyes.

"Here, in San Francisco. A Hindu servant stopped at my florist's booth and ordered a bale of orchids for his master. The florist told me that this happens daily. The master, he told me, is a Hindu gentleman, a prince of vast wealth and psychic powers. He has had an enormous success as a teacher in New York, has a following, and has come here to convert San Francisco. As it happened, I met him a few minutes later coming down from his apartment to get into a sumptuous limousine with a dark complexioned, turbaned chauffeur. The gentleman was robed in silky splendor . . . he had black pearls in the lobes of his ears. As he got into the car he knocked against the door and one of 'em—the ears, I mean—slipped out from its draperies and stuck forth, huge and red. I recognized it. The creature stuck it in and in doing so showed me his full face. Joachim's in all its splendor. He got into the car thereafter rather quickly. . . . What's the matter, Drigo?"

"N-nothing," stammered my host. "I wonder how he's managed to do it all on what I . . . And why the devil he's come back to San Francisco."

"The florist tells me," I went on, amused at Drigo's obvious annoyance, "that he has a prisoner in his apartment, a disciple of his mysteries, who

...n't move or speak without permission. It is heard to move at night."

"What damn filthy rot!" said Drigo. "Have some more champagne." And, above the changing humors of his face throughout our evening, during which, until very late, no further mention was made of Joachim, there remained fixed upon his sunburnt brows the scowl of angry boyhood. I knew that, for some reason, Joachim would be called to an accounting with his patron.

"Did you lend him money?" I asked.

This was when we were back in my rooms after the revue.

"Lend whom?" Drigo looked up from the piano on which he was playing the tango we had just heard.

"Joachim."

"O . . . damn him! No. I gave him some to use"—his pointed, faun smile ran into his cheeks, while his sulky eyes laughed angrily—"for a purpose. I set him up in Yogi practice in New York. Seems to have made a howling success, doesn't he? But . . . listen to this, Dan—la-lula-alu-lulla—nice swing to it. That's the way it went, isn't it? Damned if I meant him to come back to San Francisco." He sprang up abruptly. "Let's go round and call upon him, shall we?"

"We can free the imprisoned disciple, perhaps," I suggested, rather doubtful, however, of the pleasure to be gained by the visit and decidedly afraid of Joachim, who had always sufficiently impressed me.

"Imprisoned disciple be damned," said Drigo. "I'm going over his accounts. I think he's stolen a fortune from somebody. I'm tired of being everybody's fool financially. If he's so blamed prosperous as to order a daily bale of orchids he can pay me back. Come on, parson; get your cape and come along. Let's take our canes. We may have to do a little persuading. Joachim hates figures."

I WENT with him for fear of my own cowardice and because of some queer chill of apprehensive knowledge.

At Joachim's door we were told that "the Master was engaged. If we were disciples . . . ?"

"We are . . . not," said Drigo.

"Then, sare, I regret."

"How the devil would you know whether we were disciples or not, anyway?" demanded the frustrated revenue collector.

"You would have the words of power upon your tongue," said the servant, salaaming and skillfully glutting us out. As his dark, grilled door closed a whiff of choky perfume came to us and we heard a queer crying noise, like a bagged and tormented cat.

"The disciple," I muttered, and Drigo looked a little sick.

"Nasty sort of noise," he said. "Sounds like a drugged woman. I heard one once."

We went gratefully back to the gay city night.

But I was icy, hands and feet and heart, for there was something familiar in my memory in the voice that made the crying of a smothered cat. I could not recapture it, but there was a quality . . . where in God's name had I heard such a tone, liquid, crystalline, half tearful? The little clerk at the Mission desk in her delirium . . . ? Some child at play in a slum street . . . ?

My problem occupied me to my home and to my bed and through my dreams. It was twenty hours later in the Mission gymnasium when I remembered. At the moment I was not thinking of the horrid small preoccupation, my consciousness was thoroughly weary of it, so out it jumped at me from one of the deep pockets of subconsciousness. . . . The moon shone again for me into Drigo's patio. . . .

I jumped up from my desk in the quiet, small Mission office and shook myself as though a spider were on my mouth.

Afterward I went to the telephone and called up Drigo.

"I want you," I said, "to come round with me again tonight to visit Joachim. I'll get the password for us. We must get in."

"Funny!" said Drigo. "You won't need the password. I have a special summons from the gentleman. He guessed that I must have been one of the visitors his porter had dismissed last night. He wants, he says, to give us a demonstration of his Power. I'll come around for you, Dan, at half past nine . . . will have to cut away after a dinner party. . . ."

"Drigo," my voice cracked, "bring something more deadly than a cane. . . ."

"For heaven's sake," laughed Drigo, "the parson's having an attack of melodrama." And he hung up, still laughing.

We went to Joachim's number in Drigo's limousine, which we left with its chauffeur waiting at the curb. The apartment house was built about three sides of a garden, which one entered after pulling a bell chain through a high, grilled gate. The moon was full and the garden, rain soaked that afternoon, was weighted with dense sweetness: roses, magnolias, orange blossoms. The silent automatic elevator lifted us to Joachim's floor.

In his hallway began the magic: a violet light barred by the patterns of its suspended lantern shone upon a tall, purplish, naked figure who salaamed in silence, touched a spring which spread open the two parts of a secret door, through which we looked past two dark openings and a nearer room in turquoise blue, into a far chamber red as a drop of blood.

There at the end of the rainbow vista, on a sort of throne, sat Joachim in beautiful ivory robes the color of his face. Even from that distance his eyes looked green and incandescent. He did not bow or lift a hand in greeting, did not move in the least until we presented ourselves, doors closing back of us, before him. when he rose, took two steps forward, and lifted Drigo's right hand to his brow. To me he gave no sort of greeting, not even a glance of recognition. To be sure, I had not been invited.

We were told to sit on two low cushioned seats at his right and left and a little in front of him.

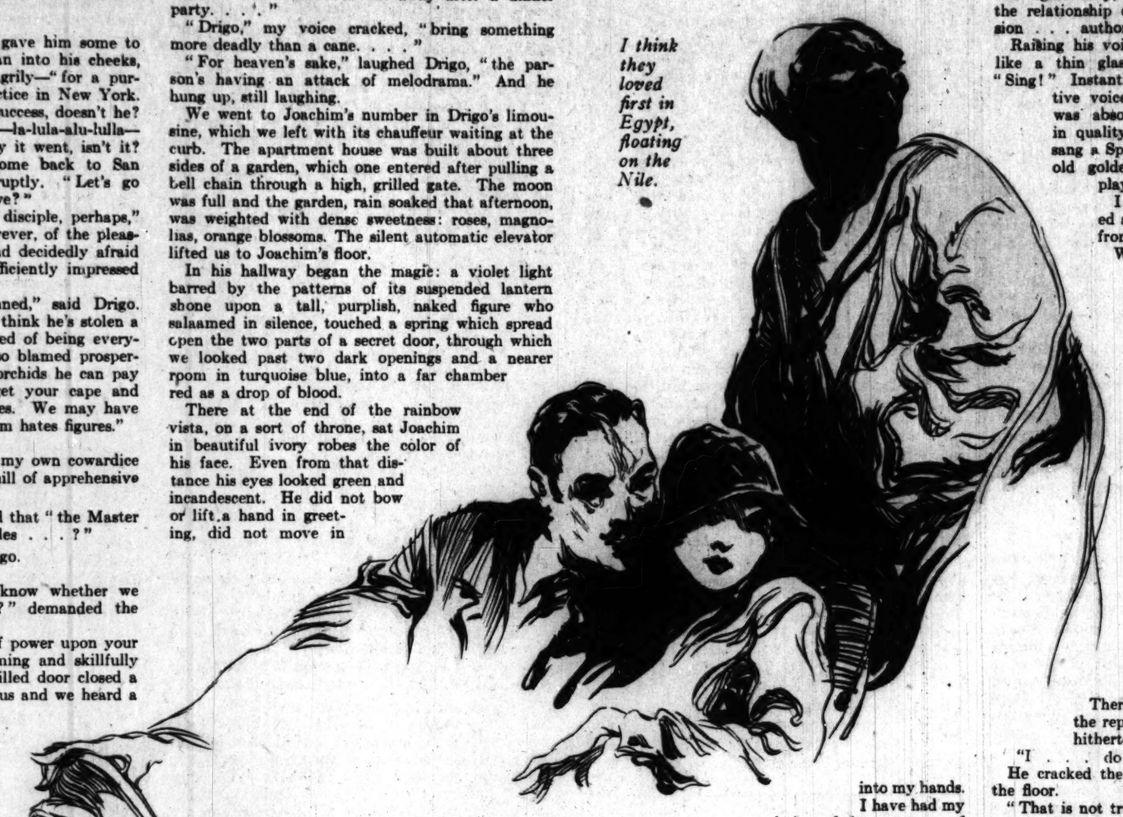
"My genius owes you, sare, its full development," said Joachim, showing his teeth between his perfect lips. "I have taken the talent which you lent me and have transformed it into many talents."

"You've certainly made some sort of turnover," murmured Drigo, grinning and blinking at the oriental splendor which surrounded us. "What'd you do—get a tithing from your proselytes?"

AN orange velvet curtain hung straight across one end of the room and on it my eyes rested, waiting, while they talked, Drigo at Joachim's feet turning this way and that to take in all the details of his extraordinary protégé's setting, and laughing amiably at every other portentous sentence intoned by the high priest of megiomania.

". . . I have released my power. Beauty and wealth have approached, have delivered themselves into my hands. I have had my choice of instruments, of vessels. . . ."

I think they loved first in Egypt, floating on the Nile.



"I bet your instruments are female morons," said Drigo vulgarly. I felt Joachim's nerves contract.

"I have chosen," he said in the vibrant, bitter tones of anger, "I have chosen. Only one of all my tools has had the fortune to be in resonance. It is her gift to understand my deepest meaning. She has the WILL TO POWER."

"Bully for her," said Drigo. "I trust we are going to meet the lucky lady."

"But do not think, my patron and my friend, that even the gifted one leaps into power full armed. It is a slow, long travail, a path of sorrow and humiliation even"—he sucked his breath—"even of pain." He drew out the last word—"of pay-ane."

"Poor little lost devil," muttered Drigo. "I suppose she thinks she loves him."

"There is no talk of human love between us," said Joachim. "It is a process of service and submission, the education of a will. To master Power and All Control, to become my equal, part of ME, which is a name for universal force, the soul and body must first become plastic in my hands." He leaned forward between us and worked his long, beautifully supple fingers together as though he kneaded flesh. "After individual Will is broken, a weary process, gentlemen, and the personal mind obliterated completely, utterly, to nullity, then begins the transubstantiation, the informing of this broken body and this nerveless will, the lifting up and electrifying, the reincarnation into—ME."

"Bring on your disciple, Joachim," said Drigo, smiling up at him in considerable and very obvious disgust.

Joachim settled back. He lifted from the floor beside him a slender whip and cracked it once. "A signal only," he murmured, "the symbol of the relationship of slave to master . . . submission . . . authority . . ."

Raising his voice to a weird, high, musical key like a thin glass sharply struck, he cried out, "Sing!" Instantly from the curtain a little plaintive voice like a young child's began. It was absolutely passionless, toneless, pure in quality and almost without breath. It sang a Spanish fandango, one that Drigo in old golden and silver nights had often played on his guitar.

I saw him whiten, the half disgusted and half amused smile draw away from eye and lip.

When the song stopped, which happened in the middle of a phrase when Joachim raised one hand—he made no sound that I could hear, no other movement that I could detect—there began the ensuing dialogue, Joachim's questions in the high, weird key, the answers even more eerie, like the voice of a dismembodied infant's soul.

"You are helpless as in the hour of birth?"

"Helpess . . ."

"You have no mind . . . no name?"

"No mind . . . no name . . ."

"What is your mind?"

"Possessed."

"By whom?"

"By Jo-a-keem."

"What is your name?"

"His . . . his . . . own."

"Where is your will, my child?"

There was a silence, startling because the replies had been so breathlessly swift hitherto. Joachim strained forward.

"I . . . do . . . not . . . know"

He cracked the whip furiously, smote it against the floor.

"That is not true. You know. You know. You know. Answer me now. Where is your will?"

There was a longer silence, broken by the slashing of Joachim's instrument and by that little smothered plaintive noise.

"I can't stand this," said Drigo suddenly out loud. "Pull away that curtain, you damned fiend, and let's see this child. It's the last time you . . ."

The queer sound lifted abruptly to a loud keening and stopped short.

"Hush!" Joachim laid down his whip. "She has lost consciousness. It is the last struggle of her personality, the last. She will not yet confess me owner of her will. She will not say 'My will is yours, O master.' The submission is not yet complete. But daily and by night I work upon the rebellious spirit. It is weakening. It must surrender. Then, indeed, I am master—master of body and of mind." He turned from us again, changing his voice. "Are you awake?"

A thread of sound replied, "I am awake."

"Put on your veil."

"I have obeyed."

"Crawl to my feet and ask forgiveness."

"I come."

He cracked his little whip. The velvet curtain drew apart. Against a hole of blackness stood a sort of metal cage the height of a tall man, the bars of which were white with phosphorescent paint. From its narrow opening now faltered the figure of a girl. She was covered from head to foot in a long veil which half revealed her terrifying slenderness. She moved weakly forward, holding her draperies gathered together at her breast in two small covered hands. Drigo had risen, pale as fear, and my heart was suffocating me. She came towards us, faltering, but without any pause, stopped just before us and in front of Joachim, and sank slowly to her knees.

JOACHIM rose, took a step, and stood between us, where he lifted his embroidered robe a trifle and thrust forth a naked, dark jeweled foot. That trembling, kneeling figure bent her head and pressed her veiled lips against his instep.

"Now," sang Joachim in triumph, "lift up your veil that he may see your face. . . ."

Kneeling back staring up at her master as though he were a light, she did his bidding.

Drigo's cry rang up as from the rack, "Christine! Christine!"

I had never before seen a face leap at one instant out of boyhood into the complete maturity of pain. . . . Drigo's face went through this terrible transformation in the one second before he threw himself upon the man.

Christine came close against me and I held her during the time of Joachim's punishment. As the whip rose and fell with vicious energy she quivered, her throat working as though it tried to reproduce a whimper already forgotten. She stared fixedly at the figure writhing in Drigo's grasp. He had torn off robes and turban so that Joachim's big red ears stood out from the pointed head. His mask of beauty was all awry with pain and terror under the biting reality of that sturdily wielded lash. The servants came in and stood about, laughing silently in the fashion of orientals.

Joachim tried to bite; I saw his teeth snap close to Drigo's wrist. He began presently to howl, later to wail for mercy. Christine's great eyes, the pupils enormously dilated by some drug, never turned from him. I don't think she really saw anything, as things are normally seen, nor did she recognize Drigo or me. She was entirely out of her ordinary senses.

We learned, many weeks later, that since her first voluntary submission in New York to a seance of initiation she had not been really conscious except for terrible flashes of agonizing fear. I imagine that she had been continually under the influence of a drug. The rest had been hypnotism, suggestion, starvation—God knows what further cruelties. I am sure, not only by what we had witnessed but by later evidence, that, in spite of drugs and fear and helplessness, her will had stood out against any final degradation.

Without any expression whatever in her eyes, she watched her master's chastisement to its end, when he dropped limp as a dead snake and lay huddled, half naked, bleeding, and grotesque amongst his silken splendors—and afterwards allowed us to wrap her in Drigo's coat and carry her down and out into the waiting limousine.

All the way home Drigo held her in his arms. His head, thrown back against the cushions, moved to and fro, his lids were pressed down against their tears, his face was convulsed.

There was an end to any proceeding for divorce. Drigo carried his broken and helpless wife back to the golden palace of their earlier delight and slowly, patiently, with the unshakable resolution of a man who loves in the fullness of maturity and with all the penitence of guilt, he nursed his Titania back to health and sanity. But never back quite to the old polished and perfected pride. Nevertheless, she still looks like a fairy queen in the moonlight of his patio when Oberon plays on his guitar.

THE OTHER DAY

Parlez-vous Français?

By Donald Ogden Stewart

AS we neared the shores of France there began to come back to me fragments of French that I had learned in my childhood.

"Wie gehts," I said to my wife, as we were standing against the rail watching the gulls that were escorting us through the English channel.

She looked at me inquiringly.

"It's French," I explained. "It means, 'How are you?'"

"O," she said.

"Another expression," I went on, "is 'Hello.' That means 'Hello'."

"I'll remember that," she said.

"And then there's 'Oui'," I continued.

She pushed back some hair which had blown over her face.

"You're quite a linguist," she remarked.

"O, I just picked it up," I said, with a faint blush of pleasure. "You know how it is."

"No," she replied. "How is it?"

"Well," I began, "at first my friends all laughed at me, because they spoke French and I didn't. Every dinner party I went to in Akron was just torture to me. There they were, chattering gaily about 'boeuf à la mode' and 'salle de bain,' and all those things I wanted to know about and I just had to sit there like a dummy. They called me 'le ignoramus,' and I guess they were right."

"There are more important things than French," said my wife.

"That's what I felt," I replied, "but they just laughed at me and went on talking about the latest 'mariage de convenance,' or something. So finally I reached a decision. I decided to study French myself."

"I don't see how you came to think of that," commented my wife, admiringly.

"Well, it just sort of came to me," I said, "and a few days later I bought a French conversation book and started to work. At first it was quite difficult, because several of the pages were missing, but I persevered, and at the end of two weeks I had mastered several of the more important phrases, such as 'Please, sir, where is the nearest canal boat?' or 'Waiter, this tripe is overdone'."

"Were you criticising something the waiter had written?" asked my wife.

"No," I replied, "but one of my difficulties was that in Akron they didn't serve tripe in the restaurants and there weren't any canal boats."

"That did make it harder," agreed my wife.

"Yes," I went on, "and what was worse, when I did finally find a restaurant where they served tripe, the waiter was a Greek."

"So you took up Greek," said my wife.

I shook my head.

"No," I replied, "I decided to go back to the book and learn the next two phrases."

"You were probably wise," she said.

"I was, in a way," I agreed, "because I didn't like tripe very well. But, on the other hand, the next two phrases weren't much of a help, either. The first one was, 'Listen, driver, this is not Napoleon's tomb'——"

"And the second?"

"The second was, 'You sing very pleasantly for a beginner'."

"What was the driver's reply to that?" asked my wife.

"I don't think that was meant for the driver," I answered, "but anyway, it didn't do me much good, because I didn't know any singers and I didn't want to take any chances with a stranger on account of the fact that my left eye was still very tender from that Greek."

"And your next step," suggested my wife, "was to take up boxing?"

"I thought of that," I replied. "In fact, I thought of a lot of things—and I will admit that for a while I was pretty discouraged and even thought of giving up any idea of really getting anywhere in Akron society. But I remembered the story about Robert Bruce and the spider——"

"Was he in Akron society?" asked my wife.

"No," I replied, somewhat distressed at her ignorance. "He was a Scotchman."

"O, I remember," she said. "The one about the Scotchman and the Jew—only, the way I heard it, it wasn't a spider—it was a golf ball."

I waited patiently until she had finished.

"Robert Bruce," I explained, "was a very famous Scottish chief who was very discouraged——"

"About being Scotch?" she asked.

"O, I remember," she said. "The one about the condition of his country and his army, but one day he watched a spider trying to make a web and the spider was discouraged, too——"

"You're breaking my heart," protested my wife.

"Well, it came out all right," I quickly said, "because the spider finally succeeded in making the web and it gave Bruce new courage and he went out and defeated the English——"

"And the spider turned out to be Lon Chaney," said my wife. "I've heard that one, too."

Several gulls detached themselves from the convoy and swooped down, with fierce, greedy cries, into the foaming wake of the ship.

"Please go on, dear," said my wife. "You know that I'm interested in anything pertaining to your early struggles."

"Are you really, dear?" I asked, and her reply was a reassuring smile.

"Well," I continued, "my next problem was to get a spider——"

"What for?" she asked.

"So that I could watch it and feel encouraged," I replied.

"O," she said. "Did it have to be a Scotch spider?"

"I asked them, in English, if they would care to dance."

"Luckily, not," I answered, "and I got a very good one and before long I went back to my study of French conversation with renewed zest and within a month I was able to converse for from half to three-quarters of an hour on any one of a number of topics, such as 'closing the door' or 'what time is it,' or anything like that."

"That must have been interesting," commented my wife.

"It was fascinating," I agreed, "and then came the test. One day I received the following invitation on a handsomely engraved card, and I knew that my time had come:

'Mme. F. Lambert Cronkheit demand le plaisir de l'assistance de
M. Stewart
a une Soirée de Gala faire honneur a le Akron Fire Department et Mme. Luella Bowman.'

"Well," I continued, "you may imagine how proud I felt when I was not only able to understand the invitation, but could even reply to it in the same language. And the week before the party I studied my book every spare minute of the day and even learned some of the past and future forms of verbs in case anything should go wrong with my other sentences——"

"The future of the verb, 'to be' ought to fill in nicely," agreed my wife, "when there were any embarrassing pauses in the conversation."

"Exactly," I said. "So I worked feverishly, and at last came the night of the soiree. With trembling hands I set out."

"Did you take your spider with you?" asked my wife.

"No," I replied, "but I did take my book. The party was in full blast when I arrived, for it was already eight-thirty and the large hall at the Firemen's club was full of gay women and handsome men. They laughed when they saw me, and I heard several of them mutter, 'He can't speak French'."

"The beasts," said my wife.

"I DID not say anything," I continued. "I only smiled. Several young ladies of my acquaintance went by, and I asked them, in English, if they would care to dance. Each one, in turn, gave me a withering look and replied, 'Mais non,' and walked on."

"Darling, you never told me this," said my wife, squeezing my hand sympathetically.

"Still I kept silent," I went on. "I was biding my time. All around me firemen were using words that I now knew by heart. Phrases came to my ear that I could have answered had I been inclined—questions like, 'Where is the pen and ink of my grandfather?' or 'Do you see four apples and eleven potatoes?' I smiled, and repeated the answers to myself, for I had learned them more than three weeks previous.

"And then at last came my chance—and quite unexpectedly. Out from behind a nearby rubber plant popped Mrs. Cronkheit, the hostess. I clenched my fists in my palms and then, after taking a deep breath, I walked firmly up to where she was standing. She saw me coming, and with a slight sneer she greeted me.

"'Bon soir, Monsieur Stewart," she began. 'Est-ce que vous bien amuses ce soir à cette Soirée de Gala que je donne pour faire honneur à les Firemen de notre ville de Akdon et aussi à le meme temps la cousine de mon mari, Mme. Luella Bowman, qui est une femme très charmante et très original et que etait à Paris deux fois?'

"She stopped, and every one around waited with amusement to see what I would do. One or two even tittered.

"And amid an almost breathless silence I stepped forward and looked my hostess straight in the eye.

"'Oui," I replied.

"You could have heard a pin drop. Couples stopped dancing and remained transfixed to the floor. Mrs. Cronkheit staggered back and turned pale. And with a cool smile and a slight bow I offered her my arm. 'Voulez-vous danser avec moi?' I asked, and after a moment's hesitation she accepted. I had won."

I finished and stood for a moment in silence, gazing out at the ever increasing crowd of gulls. Finally my wife broke the silence.

"I'm very proud of you, dear," she said, and I could tell that she meant it.

"It was nothing," I replied, and, after a moment, "Shall we talk about something else?" and with that I lighted a cigaret and we dismissed the subject from our minds.

MAKING A MAN

by H. GRAHAME RICHARDS

Love, Hate, and Whisky on a South Sea Isle---Read What Happens When a Beautiful Girl Slaps a "Fighting Fool."

IN FLANAGAN'S BAR on the beach at Waipu, Sandy McAlister was causing general amusement by his half sober attempts to balance a pyramid of tumblers on his forefinger. After a strenuous day laboring beneath a blazing sun, men are easily disposed to laughter. There were many there who laughed openly, although secretly they disapproved of the lad. For, indeed, McAlister was but little more than a lad, still lacking perhaps his twenty-sixth year. Yet there were men on the island—men grown gray with experience of the southern seas—who already regarded him as a back number. Waipu, they said, had "got" him.

There is an insidious disease which attacks all white men who first come to this island, rising like a bouquet of palms from out the crystalline blue of the Pacific; where the sun smiles eternally upon golden sands flanked by coral white or pink; where nature is so wantonly prolific that one has not to labor even to eat; where the soft throb of the ukulele and the manifest content of drowsing natives glamor the senses and mock the urge of ambition. Ordinary everyday humdrum work becomes almost impossible. The world is so far away, its prizes so remote, so inappropriate to the immediate surroundings, that they are best forgotten.

Like a blight this temptation to slothfulness descends upon all white men who come seeking to wrest its natural riches from Waipu. Grim necessity strengthens some to deafen themselves to the temptation. They are the pioneers, lords of the land. Others succumb without a struggle. They are the remittance men; or, if there be none at home to send remittances, they sink to the depths and become beachcombers, those tramps of the shores whose distaste for work is a physical pain.

Since landing in Waipu eight months before, Sandy McAlister had done no stroke of work, had known no completely sober day. Bright eyes had become bleared; cheeks, once health flushed, were mottled and sagging. In precisely the same way the estate his father had labored so hardily to win from the jungle was reverting rapidly to the jungle. All of which was pitiful, but no other man's business, as McAlister would promptly have told you.

The tumblers fell with a crash, half of them being shattered to pieces on the wooden floor. The onlookers applauded ironically. The boy swore laughingly and flung a five dollar bill on the bar, demanding more glasses and a drink. Having gulped down the latter, with drunken determination he commenced his self-appointed task all over again.

"I remember," remarked a man half sitting, half sprawling in a chair against the wall, "that the first drink he had in Waipu was with me. It was a stiff one, too! In fact, he doesn't appear to have got over it yet. Joe"—he nodded to the grinning black barman—"you should be paying me a handsome commission these days."

"Sure, Captain Langthorpe," answered the black with mock gravity, "I'll ask the boss about it."

There followed a perfunctory laugh at this sally, a laugh which died to silence. A sudden tensity in the atmosphere impelled every one to turn and look instinctively toward the door, beyond which the stars, blazing in their courses, wheeled through a heaven of velvety blackness. Inside the doorway a girl stood, white of cheek, staring with disgust and horror-filled eyes, her hands hard clenched. McAlister alone remained unaware of her presence fatuously persisting with his trick. After a moment's pause the girl strode directly across to Langthorpe and halted before him. And now her eyes were aflame.

"So you think it an achievement publicly to boast and joke about—having brought a mere boy to this condition!" she exclaimed passionately. "To break a mother's heart—to—to—O, you utter beast!"

With a snap like the report of a pistol her hand met his cheek. The silence that ensued now was one of awe and sheer consternation, amid which the crash of falling glass passed scarcely noticed. Men looked furtively from the girl with the heaving breast and flaming eyes to Langthorpe, whose whitened cheek showed the imprint of her fingers more and more plainly each second. The blow could hardly have hurt him, the man who had fought Bully Haines to a standstill, who had wrecked some of the lowest dives on the coast with his bare fists alone. But his anger was known to be as terrible in its swiftness as in the coldness of its intensity, and some of the onlookers were momentarily afraid. Quite unnecessarily. For Langthorpe sprang to his feet, hat in hand, lips smiling.

"You must excuse our manners, Miss McAlister," he explained, indicating with a gesture the men still seated. "Ladies in this place are as unexpected as snow in August. Believe me, you read more into my careless remark than was ever intended."

She turned from him abruptly. "I am not concerned with your intentions, Captain Langthorpe. The results are sufficiently disastrous." There was a half sob in her throat which caused one or two of the spectators to shuffle uncomfortably. "Sandy" she proceeded swiftly, "I wish you to see me home."

The boy, standing in a circle of broken tumblers, had remained stricken, watching the scene with staring eyes and slackened jaw.

"But, Ray," he began feebly, "you must be mad! Langthorpe is the finest, whitest man——"

"Will you or will you not take me home, Sandy?" she interrupted harshly.

He turned toward the door reluctantly, leading her away. The silence continued for some moments after their departure. Then Langthorpe, without a word or nod, strode across the room and in turn vanished amid the darkness. Behind him a buzz of conversation broke out.

"Whew!" exclaimed Paget, the planter, raising his glass. "There go Langthorpe's chances forever and ever."

"You think he possessed a chance?" asked another from up country.

Paget nodded. "I would have backed him to win before tonight. And why not? He is young, good looking, strong as a lion, and about as game and as white as a man can be. Moreover, he is making a pile rapidly. What more could any girl ask?"

"To attribute that young fool's downfall to him is grotesque," exploded another. "Nine days out of ten Langthorpe drinks nothing but ginger beer or Schweppes."

"I suppose Brazer will marry her now," observed the American doctor, reflectively. But this remark evoked a general and indignant protest.

"If he did I would shoot him on sight," swore Paget, murderously. "That man is yellow. Moreover, I know some of his exploits down in Sydney. He—I tell you it would be criminal."

The old doctor said no more, gloomily reflecting that Brazer was almost a millionaire and that a million pounds can condone a power of criminality.

EUGENE BRAZER, an Australian of doubtful origin, a planter of undoubted success, but questionable methods where contract labor was concerned, thought himself lucky and inwardly thanked the fates for being propitious. Slowly riding from up country through an early morning filled with sparkling, golden sunshine, he had quite accidentally chanced upon Ray McAlister seated on a rock amid the undergrowth, while her horse browsed contentedly in the background. Every line of the girl's slender figure bespoke dejection as she sat, chin on hands, looking down upon Waipu from dark ringed eyes.

Brazer studied her closely before she became aware of his presence, and a reddish glow began to smolder deep down within him. It was not merely that this girl was more beautiful than any other woman he had ever known, fresher with the virile bloom of Scotch highlands and heather, but there was a cachet about her which he found at once illusive and piquant, foreign to him, as was necessarily the reserved graciousness of a true gentlewoman. When he had met her for the first time, months before, he had vowed to himself that he would marry her, by fair means or foul. Since then he had certainly not made considerable progress, but neither had any one else, so far as he could gather, and time was his servant. With an unfeignedly joyful greeting he dismounted and seated himself beside her.

"You are in trouble," he greeted her boisterously. "I saw it a mile away and rode fast. There is not room for trouble and you on the same island. Now confide in me and let me teach you to smile."

She was in the mood—a rare one with her—to talk, and needed but little encouragement.

"Like all the world, you must know something of my father's story," she began sadly. "You know how, after the bank failure which ruined him, he came here with the remnants of his inheritance to build up another fortune. What you do not know is that his life here was an almost intolerably bitter exile. He loved passionately his wife, his children, his country. Only greater than his love was his determination that his loved ones should never want, that his children's early days should be passed as his had been. So he came here, alone and heartsick, and wrought how well you know. Then he died, when his hands were already grasping success."

"No better man ever trod the stones of Waipu," assented Brazer quietly. "He taught us and helped us to grow coffee and rubber, and if I am wealthy today, it is your father I must thank."

He felt he was acting splendidly, and was sure of it when her soft fingers touched his hand in mute gratitude at this tribute.

"My brother was studying medicine at Edinburgh. My father's last command was that he should come immediately to Waipu and carry on his work where death had made him lay it down. It was a wrench for all of us. My brother loved the profession he proposed to adopt, but he abandoned it and came unhesitatingly." She ended abruptly and paused a long while, during which Brazer drew circles in the soil with his riding crop.

"Breaking with his profession seems to have changed him completely," she proceeded after a while. "There is my mother at home, old and sad and with certain financial obligations to meet, but he appears indifferent. There is the girl to whom he is engaged—he does not even write to her now. Since he landed here he has done nothing but drink and idle. The jungle has swept over the fences and strangled the coffee crop. It is strangling the young rubber. The last of the black laborers has been paid off and has gone back to Honolulu. The bungalow itself is rapidly falling into ruins." Her voice died away on a note of sheer hopelessness.

"It is difficult to know what to advise," he commented thoughtfully. "Most men who come here feel a craving for the sweet do-nothing, but they cure themselves. After eight months, your brother's case becomes immensely serious. If he could be induced to settle down to hard work and no drink for one month he would be safe. He must be made to work."

"But how?" she cried, flinging wide her hands. "I have gone on my knees and begged him to stay away from the town. Paget, the doctor—every one has spoken, advised, urged him. O, when I think of my father laboring through years of loneliness for no better end than this, I could hate the boy, although he is my own brother!"

"Have you consulted Langthorpe in the matter?"

She started at the name, while her white cheeks suddenly crimsoned. "I heard Captain Langthorpe boast that he had started my brother drinking, and I publicly slapped his face," she exclaimed, tensely.

Had she seen the exultancy in Brazer's eyes, she might well now have paused. But her own gaze was downcast.

"Had you only been able to make up your mind to marry me," he said, half regretfully, "I would now be one of the family and competent to exercise a more forcible supervision of your brother's activities. No, I am not going to propose again, at least at the present moment," he added hastily as she moved. "What I am concerned with now is to help you. The first step is to get your brother away from the temptation of Flanagan's; the second, to make him work the poison out of his system."

"If you achieve that," she murmured, "I think there is nothing I could refuse you."

Furtively he surveyed her with glittering eyes. "A story comes back to my mind, a story of twenty years ago. A sailor landed on one of the islands and married a chief's daughter. He quickly became a squaw man in the complete sense of the word; that is, he was always idle, always drunk. He treated the chief's daughter as something worse than a slave. She endured his increasing cruelty for years before she finally revolted. The vengeance she enacted then was both appalling and unique. One night this squaw man, Anderson, fell into a drunken stupor after brutally thrashing his wife, Tana. When he woke in the morning it was to find that he would be dumb for the remainder of his life. Moreover, his body had been stained with the juice of the seto root and his hair dyed black, so that his own mother would have mistaken him for a native. That afternoon Tana's father included him in a draft of contract laborers who were going for a three years' spell to the Solomons. Those were days when planters were virtually a law unto themselves, days before government commissioners had learned the art of intolerable interference. Whatever Anderson suffered he afterward kept to himself. The point of the story is that on his release the man came back to Tana, his wife, a changed man. He never drank again, and it was he who first experimented with tobacco growing on the plantation above Anderson Point."

She pondered the story a while with knitted brows. "You mean, if my brother were forcibly sent away to some plantation or other, detained and compelled to work for a time, it would—but such an act would be criminal! Who would take such a risk?"

"If for your sake, I would!"

SHE turned to him impulsively, forgetful for the moment that secretly she had never fully trusted the man; that she had always read a woman's warning in his too brilliantly colored, thick lips, his shifty dark eyes, and unnaturally tinged cheeks.

NEXT SUNDAY'S SHORT STORY:

"Miss' Jean's Man"

by H. de Vere Stacpoole

Long years ago her lover had kissed her and left her to make his way in the world; and now, in the winter of life, he had come back . . . A beautiful story breathing the pastoral charm of the English village.

"You would risk that for me?"

He nodded. "We would, of course, take precautions to reduce the risk to a minimum."

"How?"

"As every one knows, I want all the extra labor I can find at the present moment. You have a boy—let us call him Doumi—whom you can do without for the moment. Therefore, for a due and proper monetary consideration, you contract this boy to me for a month or so. There is a woman on my plantation who, I assure you, will successfully convert your brother into Doumi. Then we will contrive to let at least a month elapse before we discover the truth! You see, it will have all the appearance of a practical joke."

She was restlessly twining her fingers, vague doubts mirrored in her face. In the two months she had been on the island she had not learned much of its hidden life undercurrents, for men did not speak overmuch in her presence. What she had seen for herself had lent an impression of great happiness and contentment. Laborers laughing, joking, or singing in the fields; dancing to the ukulele in the glowing firelight at night. She knew nothing of the recent hurried visit of a commissioner to investigate the deaths of two of Brazer's natives who, it was whispered, had died after terrible floggings. She had not seen men grow grim faced on hearing that more of Brazer's "boys" had suddenly succumbed to pneumonia.

"I hate to think of my brother working side by side with natives," she explained, obviously torn by doubt.

"Yet most of the pioneers in these islands have done that, time and again."

"But people would know that he had set out for your place and vanished."

"Yes, that wouldn't do at all," he assented. "But the natives know of a sleeping potion. If you contrived to administer it in his whisky one night, when he awoke the next day he would find himself Doumi, a contract laborer on my plantation, twenty miles from the coast."

Leisurely, but insistently, he overcame her scruples one by one. He brought her to regard the project as nothing more than a practical joke, certain to be productive of both amazing and desirable results. She visioned to herself the ultimate gratitude of her brother; the plantation her father had died for blooming once again; the smile in a mother's eyes in Scotland; the joy of a sweet girl in Edinburgh. When they finally parted, every detail having been perfected, she had agreed to place both herself and her brother completely in the hands of one of the most unscrupulous scoundrels in the southern seas.

Grim, bleak, and dour, Langthorpe sat astride his horse, drawn directly across her path, and blankly refused to move. Considerably more than half afraid, she glanced covertly at him and then away. Looking as he did at this moment, the man seemed capable of anything. And she was not a sufficiently skilled rider to attempt to escape by speed alone. Was he going to thrash her because of the blow she had struck him, she wondered uneasily as he glowered at her? Secretly she had decided days ago that he was fully entitled to pursue some such course of violence, that she thoroughly deserved nothing better at his hands. Only now, when the receipt of her deserts seemed imminent, her heart failed her.

"Will you kindly move aside and permit me to pass?" she asked haughtily for the second time.

"No, I will not!" he answered succinctly, and also for the second time. Then he replaced his hat.

And all she could do was to sit helpless and impotent in her saddle and stare at him.

"On three occasions lately I have attempted to speak with you," he began, with set determination, "and on each occasion your avoidance of me has been an insult."

"Equal only to the insult of your attempt," she murmured.

She saw him flinch at the unexpected riposte, but he was not to be turned aside. "You overheard me say that I gave your brother his first drink in Waipu. That is the truth. When he landed here malaria was already gripping him. Moreover, he was half raving from neuralgia; had been awake with it four successive nights on the way up. The ship's doctor handed him over to me and asked me to keep an eye on him. I dosed him with whisky and quinine and sat with him while he slept away that first night ashore."

She smiled a little. He was re-seeking her favor, then, despite the fact that she had grossly and publicly insulted him! But he had frightened her, and that peculiar feminine imp which lives with all, even the best of women, demanded instant vengeance.

"The French have a saying, 'Who excuses himself accuses himself,'" she observed pointedly, and saw in his face how shrewdly she had pricked him.

"I thought when you knew the truth you would have the grace to apologize," he growled.

"Indeed! Then now you will recognize me to be entirely without grace!" She inclined her head mockingly. "You must, however, place an exaggerated value on my good opinion to have deemed it necessary to force this explanation upon me."

"I value your good opinion more highly than that of any woman in the world," he unexpectedly answered, with a frankness which at once lowered her batteries even as it did her eyes, while a deep flush dyed her cheeks. Before she could recover herself he proceeded. "I have forcibly detained you today in order to speak of another matter. People here are growing restless and uneasy regarding your brother's disappearance. He has not been seen for the last ten days. It is known he could not have left the island by sea. You have stated definitely that he is neither ill nor at your bungalow, 'The Outlook.' So one is left blankly wondering."

He saw the indignation flaming in her face, and added hastily: "Where, as out here, men are overshadowed by common perils, they learn to take what at home would be considered an impertinent interest in another's whereabouts and well being. Danger, rather than curiosity, dictates that interest."

"I think my assurance regarding my brother's safety should allay such curiosity," she answered, resentfully.

"It would, if you knew the ways of man, woman, and beast out here. But you do not, cannot, know."

"Thanks!"

He smiled grimly. "There is a method of communication between the natives of these islands which is swifter than the telegraph. Over those invisible wires rumors have been flying. Tauba, my boy, told me last night that your brother was being forcibly detained on Brazer's plantation—and with your consent."

"And if it were true?"

She saw the man's face grow granite hard and his eyes begin to blaze. A thrill of indefinable fear seized her. Twice he opened his lips to speak, but restrained himself. At last he said quietly: "If it were true it would demonstrate your ignorance of the island and its ways. For no sane or merciful person would ever dream of entrusting even a dog to Brazer's tender mercies. The man is an outcast among men. The gold he has won is dirty gold, stained with the blood of wretched natives he has flogged to death. He works his boys beneath the lash, and his name is anathema among the natives from here to New Guinea. Only by trickery is he able to contract labor; and those who, at the end of their term, refuse to sign on again die of pneumonia or accident. He dare not let them go out into the world to advertise his methods."

There was an icy chill at her heart; she was stricken and swaying in her saddle. But she could not, would not credit so monstrous a revelation. Yet she must be away by herself to think, or she would break down. With a desperate effort she faced him.

"I think it better you should know that in all probability I shall marry Mr. Brazer," she said steadily. "Now, will you kindly let me pass?"

He drew his horse aside violently, letting her go without further word. The man was too brave to voice his own pain. For he loved this girl, had loved her from the first moment he had sighted her on the deck of the Southern Star, looking almost fairylike in the sputtering glare of the deck arc lamps. And he was of an age when, the ephemeral passions and crowding fancies of youth having departed, he was little likely to be mistaken in his feelings. In those first moments it seemed that her words had closed the book of life for him. Yet instinctively he turned to carry on, urging his mount down into Waipu. He was a man of many interests in these days—Lloyds' representative, agent for Barrance & Wells, banker, general trader with half a dozen pearl fisheries under his hand. There were manifold duties to absorb him and dull his ache until Tauba returned—Tauba, the black boy he had sent hot-foot up country to investigate.

And Tauba, the faithful, stole soft-footedly into his bedroom at dawn of the following day.

Ray had thought through a burning day and a stifling night until her brain reeled. She had cried out in the silence that it was an infamous lie, that such things could not be on an island which seemed a veritable smiling Eden. She knew, as every woman would, that Langthorpe loved her, and tried to convince herself he had spoken in a frenzy of jealousy. But always Brazer's smiling face, with its pink cheeks, its too scarlet thick lips, the shifty, wavering black eyes, leered at her out of the golden sunshine or velvety darkness. At such moments she wanted to scream. "A practical joke," he had said. Yet she had seen his brother as a native laborer—there was the contract duly signed and attested, there was Brazer's gold in her father's safe. Who was there to gainsay? No man knew he was taking over a white man as a native?

The merciless jaws of the trap had closed on her; what was to be the result? Brazer had warned her that she must not approach his plantation until toward the end of the month. Otherwise there might arise some whisper of connivance between them. That would ruin everything. Only now was she able to perceive the true significance of the man's fiendish plausibility. When the dawn broke to the clamor of the waking boys, at the time Tauba was relating his incredible tale to Langthorpe, she was mounted and riding astride.

THE sun was high. Brazer beheld her coming and swore wickedly beneath his breath. He had not regarded the time as ripe for a throw of cards, but he was not to be caught napping. Hurrying to the house to put himself to rights, he issued brief but concise instructions to his head boy. Then, gloved and booted, he rode down to the coffee fields to meet her. Those fields were silvery white with the coffee bloom which comes in a night and vanishes as swiftly. There was no beauty in the world for her that morning, though.

She curtly silenced his flowery expressions of pleasure and delight, and said: "I have come about my brother."

The strained white face and dark ringed eyes had already conveyed their message to him. The denouement was not to be delayed.

"Your brother?" he echoed with knitted brows. "I do not understand." Did he come up here?"

Her hand went to her throat at that. "Perhaps you would prefer to speak of the native boy, Doumi," she said in a voice little more than a whisper.

"A lazy, shiftless lad that," he commented, shaking his head.

"I will buy him back at double, treble the contract price you paid for him."

Her pathetic, almost frantic eagerness forced a smile from him.

"I hate to disoblige you, but, honestly, I am terribly short handed at the moment."

"But a lazy, shiftless lad is no help to you. Please!"

He chuckled. "I have a medicine which galvanizes the most lazy of living beings into busy laborers."

She understood only too well, and shivered visibly.

"Let us get out of the sun, however. I will take you to see this Doumi."

They crossed the coffee field transversely by a bridge over a stream and entered a new grove of rubber trees. Here half a dozen laborers were at work cleaning the ground and tree boles under the supervision of a hideously scarred, giant black who wielded a tangle of knotted cords in his right hand. She could hear his hoarse voice, the whistle of the cords, the moan of a laborer, even before it was possible to see exactly what was happening. Brazer had had the scene well staged.

They halted in a glade in the center of which Doumi lay helpless, his hands fastened behind him. Ray, with an irrepressible cry, would have flung herself from the saddle, but Brazer's iron grip held her powerless, the while he beckoned to the head boy. They exchanged half a dozen sentences in the native lingua, and then Brazer turned to her, feigned seriousness in his eyes.

"I am sorry this should have happened at the moment of your arrival. This Doumi has not only refused to work, but has struck my head boy. If such a mutinous act were overlooked discipline would fly to the winds. He must be punished."

He uttered a swift command. Two of the native laborers dropped their machetes, raised the prisoner, and in a trice had him fastened upright, his arms secured around one of the tree trunks. The head boy's eyes gloated; he passed his tongue over his thick lips in evil anticipation. Sick with horror, half fainting, Ray could not find the voice even to cry aloud.

"I hate to punish one of your boys," Brazer regretfully assured her. "Yet unless I do so, I can hardly keep him on this plantation to spread discontent and rebellion. His mutinous act, however, has quite altered the situation. Henceforward he is likely to prove more of a nuisance than a help to me. Therefore, I am prepared to return him to you—if you will agree to one condition."

"Delighted"

When Roosevelt accompanied "delighted" with his famous smile, it set a stamp of approval on whatever so pleased him! Just such approval vivacious Miss Helena Weichert, 351 East 65th St., New York City, gives when she says: "I'm simply delighted with the wonderful way Black and White Cold Cream is improving my skin—softening and refining its texture, plumping out the least suspicion of hollows in my neck, and preventing chapping and roughness. This exquisitely textured cream is so soft and velvety itself it seems to pass these good qualities on to my complexion and to make it lovelier than it's ever been before."

You'll be delighted, too, with the soothing touch and the beautifying effect of the rich, nourishing Black and White Cold Cream, which you can get from dealers everywhere, along with the other Black and White Beauty Creations, at the popular 25c and 50c prices.

BLACK-WHITE

THE SENTIMENTALISTS by DALE COLLINS

" Y' been looking for a thrill. Now I've give it to y'—and it's got yer!"

THE STORY IN RESUMÉ:

THE gun running brig Hirondelle, owned by the swashbuckling Cap'n Whelan, delivers a shipment of rifles to a Malay chieftain in one of the Dutch islands in the South Seas. As the vessel is anchored in the River Panjermassa, awaiting dawn and the tide, Cap'n Whelan, who is celebrating his fiftieth birthday with libations, hears a bump against his ship and finds a drifting native canoe containing a white baby. Investigation by the mate, Mr. Carrington, reveals that apparently there are no white people within hundreds of miles. Cap'n Whelan decides to keep the youngster, and puts to sea, taking four goats to furnish milk for the foundling. Mr. Carrington has seen strange signs in the stars. Tina Murray, who lives by her wits, waits in the city of Macassar for the coming of Billy Bowden, an admirer. She is rescued from highwaymen by Albert Shaw, a sailor, and rewards him with jewelry. Amused by Cap'n Whelan's appearance in the lounge of her hotel, Tina determines to engage him in conversation.

INSTALLMENT III.

Beauty and Beast.

THE impulse having come upon her, Tina promptly crossed the lounge and sat down quite naturally in the chair opposite Cap'n Whelan. They might have known each other for years.

"Good evening," she said.

Cap'n Whelan looked up out of his thoughts, startled. His veined eyes goggled. Ladies left him alone. He heaved his body over and considered her, truculently and cautiously. Girls were not among his interests.

"What d' y' want?" he grunted, inflating his cheeks.

"I want to talk to you." She gave him a tiny smile, not too bright—just a casual, friendly smile.

"Ah!" said Cap'n Whelan. He took up his glass and drank, his soft eye meeting upon it and sucking the gin down. "Who are y', anyway?"

"My name's Tina Murray."

Cap'n Whelan was a blunt man who spoke what was in his mind. "Are y' a ——?"

Tina did not smile now; she chuckled. The monster was a collector's piece.

"Yes and no to that question, really," she said, with a mock air of weighing a nice question, and then, seriously: "I should rank among the professionals, but I've cheated up to date. Perhaps I'd be a better girl if I had paid the price." She spoke with candor, and her eyes looked straight into Cap'n Whelan's. He was overcome. The handkerchief came out again, and he mopped vigorously.

"I be damned!" he mumbled into it.

Tina was happy now. Her boredom and her doubts had vanished. The night had made her feel the need of a confidant. Here was one—safe because he was so preposterous. Not that she was afraid of the truth. Men very seldom believed it when it reflected on the teller. Instead, they built up flattering structures of logic to explain why it was false and with what end in view. They often showed great ingenuity.

"And you are——?"

"Cap'n Whelan of the brig Hirondelle!" Cap'n Whelan seemed rather surprised to hear himself answering this young woman's questions.

Tina clapped her hands, delighted.

"O, it would have been a horror if you'd been just a business man. When do you sail?"

"Tomorrow." But he had weighty matters on his mind. "Y' say y' are not a ——" he began.

"Do I look like one?" Tina interjected. She set her face calmly and showed it to him—the olive skin, the clear eyes, the smooth brows, the firm mouth.

"No," Cap'n Whelan admitted.

Tina was never afraid of that test. She had looked ever so much like Mr. Heathershaw's niece. There would have been no trip with him if she had not. He was the soul of discretion where his reputation was concerned. "No," Cap'n Whelan reiterated, wagging his head thoughtfully. The drops of sweat spattered on the table. "But why are y' talking t' me?"

"Because I want to. Because I was lonely."

"Ah!" He could think of nothing better to say. "But wotinell are y' doing here at all?"

Tina sat back, crossed her legs, and rested her chin on her clasped hands.

"At present," she said calmly, "I'm living on a rich man's expectations. He's been paying my board, giving me presents—and hoping."

Cap'n Whelan drank hastily.

"I thought," he said into the glass, "y' said y' wasn't?"

"O, no. I said I wasn't yet. You won't believe me, you know—nobody would except the girls like Tina, you know—but I've come all the way from England with a man—he paid my passage and all—and I've cheated him and passed him out."

Cap'n Whelan could only stare for a second.

"No," he said, after a pause, firmly. "No! Yer a liar."

"O, pooh to you," Tina smiled. "What do you know about it?—you big baby! You know as much about sex as I do about brigs. Why, I tell you there's nothing too absurd or impossible to happen when sex is mixed up in it. You ask the doctors. This new man who's on the scene, I've cheated him to date!"

Cap'n Whelan's interest was completely ensnared now. He was fascinated, his slow mind in a fog.

"BUT how d' y' do it?"

"A man traveling first class P. & O. can't assault his own niece—it'd be a scandal."

"O-h-h," said Cap'n Whelan, sinking back in his chair, relieved, "he was yer uncle?"

"Only for the voyage. I had a dear old lady in my cabin who was seasick practically all the time. I kissed uncle occasionally when there was no one about, but really there are very few opportunities when the boat deck's reserved for navigation. The situation was—er—delicate, but not too difficult. He was quite sweet, and he knew the value of anticipation."

"My opinion, y' ought to be ashamed of yerself."

"I'm not. If men are fools, so much the better for Tina!"

"But what brought y' to it? Who was to blame?"

"I was. Don't you believe men ruin girls. It's just a dirty excuse." Her chin went up defiantly. "I don't believe in excuses. What I do, I do!"

"I can't make y' out," complained Cap'n Whelan. "Y' ain't like the ordinary run. Why are y' at this business?"

"No excuse. Daughter of talented but poverty stricken parents. Not trained to anything, and the only talent that they handed on to me seems to have been sex. Have had jobs, but they were deadly dull, and in the end it always came back to the same thing. Somebody in charge began to take an interest—felt I was wasting my time. It seemed only sensible to capitalize my gift on a proper basis. But, mind you, I hate sex. It's an odd thing. You'd be surprised, cap'n, how many women who are attractive hate sex, and vice versa. Very unfair—but there it is. By some trick I'm a kind of mouse trap for men. The only trouble is the trap's got a heart. Two men found out. The others—the ones it didn't love—were much easier and could be held indefinitely. It wasn't even necessary to bait the trap. They knew for themselves, being so cunning, that the bait was there and easy to get. They were greedy mice, who got nothing—save caught."

"Ah!" Cap'n Whelan remarked again, deeply. He cogitated upon the parable. Tina wondered how much of it he understood. His face was unreadable in its welter of flesh. She was not surprised to find herself talking like this to a stranger—and to such a stranger. She was never surprised at anything she did. There was not time enough for that.

Cap'n Whelan drained his gin and wiped his mouth on the back of his hand. He considered her, bulging the fat of his chin and neck together.

"I suppose," he remarked, "y'd be one of these modern girls really."

"O, no, Cap'n," Tina protested, "I'm not as bad as all that!"

"One thing: yer honest." He called a boy. "What will y' drink?"

"Don't, thanks."

"Smoke?"

"No."

"A mighty shrewd head on y'!" he said approvingly, and ordered his gin. Cap'n Whelan was a good business man himself.

"Pays. Look at me——!"

HE obeyed. A rare thing happened. A smile, if a somewhat grudging smile, was born about his wet mouth and went climbing over his face like a merry mountaineer. New creases appeared, and those which ran down from either side of his mouth quivered. There was something about this darned young woman——! "Y' look like a bit o' a kid," he said. "And yet so shrewd, too!" The sweat poured from him.

"I am," said Tina, apparently to both his judgments.

"This cove what's keeping y' now. Where's he?"

"He's up country. Comes back tomorrow."

Cap'n Whelan's eyes contracted cunningly, so that they looked porcine.

"I bet y' weren't so honest with him as y've been wi' me, that don't matter?"

"O, yes. He came out with us on the boat. He knows the whole story. The funny thing is he'd marry me tomorrow if he could."

"Good God!" ejaculated Cap'n Whelan, being no courtier.

"I mean he would if I brought him up to it—and he was free. That's always the catch about the men like him who want to marry you; they never are free. They're always living apart from wives who won't divorce them. It's a pity. One might do worse than marry Billy, for security's sake. But if you gave Billy's wife grounds for divorcing him—compelled her to—why, at the same time you'd give Billy the best grounds for not marrying you."

Cap'n Whelan considered this statement. As a hard man who knew his world the soundness of the reasoning appealed to him, though he took some time in puzzling it out.

"A good head on y'!" he reiterated.

"Look out, cap'n," warned Tina, with a smile.

"No," said Cap'n Whelan, gravely. "No, not me. I don't go on women. I don't go at all on 'em. Y' couldn't get me, and what I like about y' is yer got enough sense t' know it."

"I admit that," Tina answered, because it was the truth. Also, she most certainly did not want him. It was a tribute to her powers that Cap'n Whelan—who had all the vanity of other men—accepted the innocence of her attitude to him and knew he was in no danger of being cheated.

People were beginning to drift into the lounge: Dutchmen, half a dozen members of a touring theatrical company, a couple of American oil men. All looked curiously at the oddly paired couple.

"Hullo, what's this the little mystery's got hold of now?" asked one of the Americans.

"A whale, I'd say," his companion hazarded. His eyes screwed up appraisingly. "I'll say she's cute," he announced. "Watch me for the next day or so."

"I'll be watching," said the other, and, taking off his horn rimmed glasses, polished them, as if in anticipation. He had failed to classify Tina, and he was fond of riddles.

"Why trouble the American Express to export you to Italy to see Madonnas? Get the way her eyes are watching that old whale—like she was looking right down into him. Wasteful, I'd say. What's the matter with little Ira?"

MAKING A MAN ---------- By H. Grahame Richards

"I will agree to any condition," she cried feverishly, hoarsely.

"The condition is that you become my wife within twenty-four hours."

For the moment she was stricken dumb, and before she could reply her brother spoke. "You will refuse, Ray. I have heard all about 'the practical joke,' lassie, and I don't blame you overmuch. The loathsome beast used me as a pawn to get you into his power. But you must not marry him." His voice rose in accents of distress. "If you do, I swear by the memory of our father I will kill the man with my own hands. I am standing with you, Ray, not to overshadow, to blight my whole life by making a murderer of me. Things will come out right."

His words ended with a groan as Brazer motioned with his hand and the knotted cords cut cruelly into the bare flesh. Ray cried aloud and wildly helped her mount in an attempt to ride down the chief, but Brazer's iron grip was on her bridle. Again the head boy raised his arm, but paused. There was a great crashing amid the trees and into the glade dashed a reeking, foam flecked horse, bearing Langthorpe. Either he had discarded coat and sun helmet or had not waited to don them, for he wore nothing but duck trousers and a shredded shirt open almost to the waist. His actions were so swift that she followed them in a dream. He flung himself from the back of the still moving horse and came to a halt directly beside the blankly staring head boy. Without an instant's pause, his right fist shot upward to the boy's chin and the black dropped like a billet of wood, unconscious and with a broken jaw. Then he seized a machete, and in an instant had freed the grotesquely blackened Sandy. Afterward he swung on the balls of his feet, and faced Brazer. The latter's right hand was now in the pocket of his coat; the scene appeared to be causing him amusement.

"And now, Sir Galahad?" he asked insolently.

LANGTHORPE laughed in his throat. Ray stared and stared, scarcely able to recognize him. Down in the settlement she had heard men describe him as a "fighting fool," had seen their faces glow as they recalled his bloody battle with Bully Haines. But she had never fully appreciated all they intended to convey. She understood now from his face what berserk rage meant; it made her afraid.

"Jim!" she cried impulsively, "Don't! Don't! Sandy is free; let us go."

Even in those moments he realized she had called him "Jim," and exultancy added fuel to the white flame of his fury. But he did not remove his eyes from Brazer.

"For seven years I have waited an opportunity to beat you to pulp with my hands," he said tensely, "you yellow dog! This island is not big enough for both of us. Get out of that saddle."

Brazer still smiled, though his eyes were a snake's. He made no movement, but from his right hand pocket flame suddenly belched. The bullet creased Langthorpes' shoulder as he sprang. Then his hands were on his man. Tall as was Langthorpe, his opponent was equally tall and many pounds heavier. Yet he came out of the saddle like a sack, breaking a stirrup leather as he was smashed to the earth. The revolver fell unheeded from his hand, and Sandy, dashing forward, picked it up. Like a cat Brazer came to his feet, smiling no longer. In his day he, too, had commanded the reputation of being a terrible fighter on the waterfront of San Francisco, but he was a foul fighter, as many a heel marked face on the southern seas could testify. Tearing off his clothes, he did not retreat nor seek to guard himself from Langthorpe's first blows, though one met his mouth with a nasty smash. Suddenly he swung his right out and upward in a blow starting from the knees. It met Langthorpe's abdomen far down below the belt; sent him reeling backwards, his face blanched. But that one foul blow warned him and determined the ultimate issue of the fight. For Langthorpe no longer sought to mix it with the man, but relied on footwork, in which he was expert. And he worked a trick he had acquired in the roughest of all schools.

Every blow he struck was directed to the same spot—the man's left eye. Brazer, cursing at first, finally fell silent, then began whimpering from sheer pain and impotence. If he could only have got his hands on Langthorpe he felt he could have ended the fight in seconds. There were lumber camp tricks straightforward fighters never suspected. Although his blows, occasionally landing, sent Langthorpe staggering this way and that, the man seemed built of rubber and steel and was a glutton for punishment. Already Brazer's left eye was closed and useless; it would be weeks before he could use that member again. Moreover, the pistonlike regularity and accuracy of those blows began to shake the man's nerve; he felt as if the next blow would draw a scream from him.

Then Langthorpe concentrated his attention on Brazer's right eye. Soon the latter, temporarily more than half blinded, lost all control and balance. He began rushing desperately, arms flailing wildly. Now Langthorpe devoted himself to body work, dealing crashing blows which Ray thought she would never forget to her dying day. Sickened and fainting, she turned her back on the scene.

Brazer's nerve finally gave way when he realized that Langthorpe had no intention of knocking him out; that he was only seeking to inflict the maximum of punishment possible. Before the realization he sank to the ground supinely. Langthorpe gripped him by the shoulders, dragged him to the tree where the dazed head boy sat nursing his painful jaw, and fastened him up as Sandy had been fastened.

"When Brazer authorized a black to whip you, a white man," he panted, "he committed a crime for which they would hang him out of hand down in the settlement. As he is no more than a filthy halfbreed, I prefer to serve him a dose of his own medicine."

He spoke harshly to the head boy, obviously explaining something. Perhaps it was that never again would Brazer have the power to molest him. At any rate, the boy came to his feet with alacrity, eagerly, while the other boys in the neighborhood crept timidly forward to gloat as fifty strokes of the knotted cords fell mercilessly on the writhing back of the man who had made a ruin of their lives. When it was over Langthorpe flung the groaning man across the saddle of his own horse and set off for the settlement. He spoke no word to Ray, who followed meekly, accompanied by her brother. The next day Brazer, broken and disgraced, fled forever from Waipu, quite unconscious of the fact that in permitting Sandy McAlister a glimpse of the realities of life he had made a man of the boy—a man who was destined never again to waver.

. . . . . .

The swift sunset was touching with crimson and saffron the blue-gray peaks inland when she stole along the veranda and stood within the opened French windows of Langthorpe's room. He, busy bathing and plastering his hurts, stared at the slender little figure in filmy white as at a vision, so silently had she come.

"I am so ashamed I could not rest," she murmured. "The memory of what I did to you positively hurts me—here." She placed her hand to her breast. "Isn't there something you could do—couldn't you beat me and then forgive me? I do so want to be forgiven!"

He came and stood right over her. "It was a cruel blow you struck me," he remarked, whimsically, "because it crushed my heart."

"Ah, no, no!" she protested, her two hands seeking his bandaged one.

"Yet I might contrive to forgive it under certain conditions. You called me 'Jim' today!"

"You heard—even at that moment?"

He nodded, smiling. "Why Jim?"

She lowered her head a little. "You have been that to me in my mind since the day after I landed."

"I never thought much of the name before," he assured her, "but when you say it, it somehow sounds different. And I like it very much. Therefore, if you sincerely wish me to forgive you, you will henceforward call me Jim and promise to be very nice to me."

"But I am not a very nice person, am I?"

"The question is, do you promise?"

"I promise."

"Then begin immediately by placing your arms around my neck and saying, 'Jim, dear, although I think it absurd of you to believe me to be the most beautiful and nicest girl in the world, I will, as you insist, marry you.' Repeat that word for word!"

She did.

TEMPTING MENUS FOR THE WEEK by Jane Eddington

The Sandwich Is But a Sally at Hunger

IMPATIENCE and fear of the frown of the goddess Luck bred the sandwich. The very nickname of the peevish Earl of Sandwich shows this. It was Jemmy Twitcher. And professional sandwich eaters are quite generally twitchy people who think they are saving time by substituting a few swallows of something, in three layers or more—you can hardly bite into more—for knife and fork eating.

But the sandwich, fortunately, has many connotations besides that of being a snack for the twitchy clan, though it sometimes seems as though it would take all the wiles of the blossoming meads of spring and summer to give it the poetical associations which it deserves when æsthetically devised and served on silver and linen. Afternoon teas, to which it is so essential, cannot do this, for just note the greedy lady there, fairly twitchy with greed. With her first bite half the sandwich disappears—it was the finger type and not narrow. Her hunger quieted a bit, or else choked, she does not put all the rest into her mouth at once, but bites the remainder in half, and so on twice more—four bites in all, though eight would have insured a more polite bearing on her part, to say nothing of showing hygienic good sense. There is an etiquette in bites, as well as a dental technique.

The Earl of Sandwich, ordering his piece of meat between two slices of bread, is said to have invented half a dinner or a whole emergency meal. We are always a bit sorry for those who have to have a whole sandwich dinner, for it can hardly be anything else than a rather desolate one. Sandwiches prepared for such are usually but an excuse and also inexcusable.

There is entertainment in the fact that we can find 101 varieties of sandwich, and that without going to Denmark, where they are said to eat sandwiches morning, noon, and night and to quote the wholesale prices on them in the morning papers. Danes have passed on names to us for sandwiches which we do not need, having ourselves displayed great ingenuity in devising this composition and eating it not only in emergencies and at picnics but even at midnight. Somehow or other, only type names seem to cling to it in general, and not the geographical nor the fanciful cognomens. In fact, it belongs socially to the Equinoctial of Queubus, which Leigh Hunt said was "some glorious torrid zone lying beyond three o'clock in the morning," which pleases us with its meaninglessness, but then who knows what Shakespeare did mean ("Twelfth Night"), and is it not hard to make a final definition of the sandwich as to time, place, and zone?

CUCUMBER SANDWICHES

1 cucumber
Mayonnaise
Toasted bread sandwich

Peel and slice cucumber thin. A quick egg bread, cut thin, is delicious, and no butter is needed with the mayonnaise. One cucumber is enough for a good number of sandwiches, and it should be well chilled before peeling it, and sandwich should be prepared just before being served. It is a favorite English sandwich. Nasturtium leaves may replace the thin slices of cucumber. To season the cucumber piquantly, sprinkle powdered broiled bacon over it and the mayonnaise.

California Assorted Sandwich

5 slices of bread
Egg yolk, cooked hard
Deviled ham
Marmalade, nuts
Chopped raisins, sirup
Creamed butter
Cheese
Lettuce

Cut off the crust from thin slices of bread and spread with a little creamed butter. For one slice of bread mash the egg yolk and mix it to a creamy consistency with mayonnaise and a little of the cooked white. On another put a little deviled ham on lettuce On another orange marmalade sprinkled with chopped nuts. Chopped raisins, mixed with sirup, on another. Cheese filling for another. Use for a girls' luncheon party.

Fancy Chicken Sandwiches

1 cup cold cooked chicken
3 ounces sweet butter
1 tablespoon cream plus
Some grated cheese
Salt and paprika
Dot of dry mustard

This set of ingredients may be worked together according to one's taste after the chicken has been ground or pounded to a smooth mass and blended with the butter, cream, and cheese. Parmesan cheese or grated Herkimer (more of the latter can be used) adds piquancy to this sandwich filling. After adding it to the paste of chicken and cream it may be necessary to wet up the mixture further with a bit of cream, getting something that is as smooth as butter, which the cream helps it to be. It can be worked through a strainer to make it smoother yet. Instead of the paprika a few grains of cayenne pepper can be used, and instead of the dot of dry mustard a little more than a dot of prepared or French mustard can be used.

Put this mixture between the thinnest possible slices of bread—white or oatmeal. It can be piped on open sandwiches like tiny discs, or stars, or strips. A garnish that goes well with these sandwiches, or to border the mixture on open sandwiches, is a purée of pimento blended with butter. Or pimento cut in strips and dipped in French dressing is also good. Roasted chicken is fine for sandwiches. With half a cup only, seasoned as described, one can make a considerable number of æsthetic sandwiches. These should not be compared with sliced chicken sandwiches, which are something else again.

Granted you are one of those ...ollyhock-swaying-in-the-breeze ...ypes, then you may go straight ...ahead and you may wear these ...otivated crêpes and chiffons ...until you haven't any room left ...in your wardrobe for anything ...else.

I have said repeatedly that ...he small floral print, chosen so ...enthusiastically by Chanel this ...spring, has received the great...est amount of fashionable re...pute.

Nevertheless, the more mi...nute motif is far from running ...of with all of the trophies of ...fashion. And when it comes ...to the afternoon and evening ...gown, the chiffon or crêpe wi...h ...small floral pattern is by no means bereaved of its ...following.

Now there are some brand new aspects of the ...printed situation. One of these concerns the en...semble. During previous seasons we considered ...that we were doing the correct thing by the after...noon if we topped our figured frock with a plain ...colored coat lined with the frock material. This ...season we continue to use the same style formula. ...But the newcomer in the field of the printed en...semble is achieved by making both coat and frock ...of the same material.

Many of these all-printed ensembles have a ...straight line coat that comes nearly or quite to the ...hem of the gown and in this genre of costume, ...so appropriate for the daytime wedding or any ...elaborate afternoon affair, Chanel has scored a mas...terly and widely imitated model. In this ensemble she makes a collarless and unlined coat of the flow...ered chiffon and lays tiny tucks downward from the unfurbished neck line.

Another type of printed ensemble which makes use of the same theory demonstrates the more tailored phases of our summer mode. The idea of completing a frock of printed crêpe with a jacket of self material has been applied by the French couturiers to a number of charming models of the type which one may designate as the country club sandwich. That is to say, they fill in—do models of this type—all the manifold hours of the resort day.

In the same breath with which one speaks of these tailored ensembles one refers to three piece costumes that give a similar effect. Suits of figured crêpe with blouse of monotone crêpe are, in fact, much in the fashion picture.

Illustrative of the charm of the jacket ensemble is the Paris inspired model at the extreme left of our page. The medium employed is a crêpe with small figures in soft coral distributed over a light beige background. The frock places a softly bloused bodice over a skirt which shows box plaits both front and back and the jacket is interesting, not only because of its revers and tailored belt of the monotone coral crêpe that lines the jacket, but also because of that curving fold of self-material set into the jacket to simulate a bolero.

When we come to the second model from the left we find the printed costume in that graceful and feminine mood which it assumes to greet wedding reception, afternoon bridge or summer garden party. Here is a chiffon printed, not in the parsimonious blooms dictated for less dressy occasions, but in roses big enough to satisfy even a Californian.

In color this frock is delightful, for the background is powder blue and the design is in black. The latter tone is sustained in a vestee of black lace completing the blue underslip. The costume is completed by a matching hair hat banded in black and trimmed with soft pink roses.

As to the detachable cape which so cunningly conceals the deficit of sleeves, this is a feature which, like the bolero, finds a willing accomplice in the figured crêpe or chiffon. In this case you see it collarless and adjusted smartly on the shoulder with one of the ubiquitous bows.

In the evening certainly we are never out of prints, and the dance mode exploits a thousand variations of flounced, bedraperied, caped, and bolerped ideas developed in prints and chiffons of the most exquisite tints. Some of these models make use of not a single touch of extraneous fabric. Others, on the contrary, join forces with either lace or plain fabric. Lace most especially!

Our central sketch is one of those dinner and dance models that cement the friendships between printed chiffon and black lace. This model employs merely a plain black lace skirt gathered to a long, curving bodice of chiffon that dips down in the front to correspond with the half moon yoke of black lace. The chiffon shows lovely soft tones of yellow red, green, and brown on a blonde background, and the green that is the predominant note is echoed in one of those narrow tailored belts which are a novelty of the season.

So far as the girdle is concerned Dame Fashion seems to fly to opposite extremes. Either she indulges herself in a very wide fold about the waist, or she makes one of those stingy tailored belts. The former largesse is indicated in our right hand creation, an afternoon model where small white flowers appear on a black ground. Here we find the wide girdle operating in connection with a skirt yoke to which are attached finely plaited sections of the crêpe. The collar of white chiffon, plaited and quite ruff-like in its effect, is bound with black ribbon and more of this ribbon falls from the back in two streamers.

As to our fourth sketch, this bears a message of the many different tones which the present day designer frequently blends in one costume. Over a plain red crêpe is posed a printed crêpe in tones of beige and blue. Although not indicated here, the crimson note is sustained in tiny buttons placed down the side of the bodice and from elbow to wrist of the fitted sleeves. The hat of beige is also bound in red.

Observe in this model the graceful circular movement of the skirt with its flaring drapery raised to show the red crêpe foundation.

The all-printed ensemble, which is one of the novelties of the spring, is shown at the extreme left in its tailored interpretation. Placing a jacket of patterned crepe over a frock of the same material, the designer scores a contrast through revers and belt of monotone crepe.

Next, the practical and charming coat-dress idea is presented in flowered chiffon, adding a detachable cape of self-material.

The dinner or dance frock, combining black lace and chiffon, is next shown in a model including the narrow tailored belt of plain crepe.

Fourth, an afternoon model of printed crepe, combined with monotone crepe, shows you a new trick in circular skirts.

Last, a black-and-white printed crepe features a collar of white crepe and a yoked skirt with plaited flounce.

FRENCH DRESSING

⅓ cup Mazola
1 teaspoon Karo, Blue Label
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 tablespoons chow-chow
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika

Beat well and serve with any vegetable, fish or cheese salad.

MAZOLA MAYONNAISE

½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon Karo, Red Label
1 egg
3 tablespoons vinegar
1½ to 2 cups Mazola according to thickness desired.

Put the seasonings in a small deep bowl, beat in the egg, add the vinegar, stir until mixed and gradually beat in the Mazola, using a wheel egg beater. Start with one-half teaspoon oil—when the mayonnaise has begun to thicken, add it a tablespoonful at a time. When done, beat in one tablespoon boiling water.

A Pleasant Thought

There was nothing the matter with Ira, except that he was of no interest to Tina. Cap'n Whelan, at the moment, was. He had escaped from her by the simple process of retreating into the mountains of his flesh. She hesitated about trying to draw him out again, but her curiosity was piqued. She could hold a man's interest when she tried; she had tried with Cap'n Whelan and had imagined that she was succeeding admirably. But in a moment he had slipped away from her. He sat now, forgetful of her presence, looking down into the heart of the steely gin in his glass as if therein he consulted an oracle. She saw him thinking of his own affairs with infinite effort, the heavy cogs of his mind grinding together. Tina knew when to be silent, even if silence was an effort. She waited, admiring his grotesque repulsiveness and appreciating every detail. Her eyes were fascinated by the sweat where it met on the wart on his chin, hung a second, glistening, and then fell, making a widening black circle on his coat. She found herself counting the drops. The lights shining on his wet, bald head seemed to penetrate through the open pores and set a glow within. Whatever was the monster thinking of?

CAP'N WHELAN leaned deliberately forward, put both elbows on the table, and looked across at her, sliding the lids up and down over his round eyes. He was very serious.

"Me," he began, "I don't believe yer cut out for this. I don't reckon yer as happy as yer make out."

Indignation appeared on Tina's face. So all his brooding only produced this? She could stand most things, but patronage, sympathy, and pity were gifts she didn't want from any man. Her business was her own affair.

"Thank you, cap'n," she said coldly, "but nobody ever does what they don't want to. That's only another excuse. As I've told you, I don't go in for excuses. I do what I do with my eyes open. Leave it at that!"

With a slow, heedless gesture Cap'n Whelan dismissed this statement and her anger as of no import whatever. He had made a resolve and went forward to his point with heavy surgings, like the incoming tide on a day of thunder.

"Never mind all that—listen t' me." Tina's indignation increased, but she felt that it was useless to express it. Cap'n Whelan would go on. He paused, considering her in an abstracted way, his mouth sucked in like a crater. "Listen, how'd y' like to cut all this and come away wi' me in th' brig?"

Tina's eyes went wide with surprise, disgust, and annoyance. She had been wrong about the monster, after all. He was like—but even as the idea flashed into her mind she realized that it was wrong—all wrong.

And Cap'n Whelan was rumbling on: "No, you know it's not such. I got no time fer women. And I'm not a fool, me! D'you think if I wanted to buy a girl I'd go out after a dirty little cheat like y'? Not me! But, I sez, outside o' that this girl ain't no cheat, and she's got a good head on her. I know. I want t' give y' a job—four pound a week and yer keep. Comfortable fer y'!"

He sat back in his chair, his stomach ballooning up, his arms extended awkwardly on either side in a gesture which emphasized how eminently reasonable and attractive was this proposition. Tina had met her match. She liked giving surprises, she accepted those that came, but this surprise left her breathless. She wanted to laugh hysterically. A strange sensation came upon her. She felt as if his great mass was oozing about her, gripping her in an enveloping way, as a fly is caught in treacle. She was not afraid, but amazed. Desire she knew and could manage all too well, but this peculiar demand which Cap'n Whelan wrapped about her was outside her experience.

"What could I do on a brig?" Involuntarily her voice struck a higher note than usual.

Cap'n Whelan sat there, immovable, confident.

"I'll tell y'. Y' could kinder be a mother." The man who was usually as slow as a worm saw something in her eyes. "Ah," he said in stolid triumph, "that gets y'—just the word, don't it?" Tina felt a clutch at her heart, almost one of panic. She had thought of him as a colossal flesh pot, and yet he knew things—this Cap'n Whelan. His voice went on, troubling and unescapable as the sounds of distant gunfire. "Y' keep listening t' me. Hell of a hole. I got a kid aboard, my kid, adopted, name o' Samuel. Little 'un, so long." He held his podgy hands about six inches apart. "Needs mothering. No job f' me. He ain't going right—don't thrive. They say: Give him t' the convent at Singapore, put him in an orphanage. T' hell with all o' that. He's mine, catch on?—mine! He stays wi' me in the brig!" His bloodshot eyes defied her to deny that this was right. "I'm going to get somebody aboard the Hirondelle 'll mother him. Hard t' get. Respectable women won't take the job. The other sort laugh at me. Ugh! Useless, anyhow."

He paused and inflated himself with a long breath. His fat hands met, closing that part of the discussion as one closes a book. Then he bent forward again and pointed a stump of forefinger at her.

"All right. Now, y'—y' ain't respectable, y' got nerve, y' shrewd, and y' like being different—y'. Job y'd be happy in. Brig, queer places, joking about, damn' fine kid. All right. Respectable don't worry y'. Y'd come if y' wanted to. All right." Another point was made beyond discussion. "Now I say t' meself: Here's the girl y' looking fer. Too pretty, really; but head on right. Could trust her, or anyway it'd be a good bet. Always sack her if she started silly play, but get her now quick, before she goes on wi' any more of this business. Get her!"

He crouched, his round eyes watching her. The red tongue flicked out about his lips. Tina thought: He's the frog, I'm the fly. She did not know what she wanted to say.

"Supposing—supposing you can't?" she demanded, but the words sounded strained in her own ears.

"I got her," said Cap'n Whelan simply. The moment was his. He was inspired by the greatness of his need. Ideas came to him now from nowhere without any effort. "Listen t' me," he swept on. "No man before was unselfish when he wanted y'. No man never before asked y' to be the mother o' his babe." He halted to let these points sink home. In some fashion he had become dignified and impressive. His body had ceased to matter. Tina did not see him; she only heard his voice. "Y' can crack hardy, but them things get y'—more'n if I were a fool and offered y' thousands fer the other. Y'—yer only a kid what's been kidding herself. Y' been looking fer a thrill, but mail boats and all y'aven't got it. Now I've give it to y'—and it's got yer!"

He ceased. His silence was as assured as his voice. Tina felt numb, soothed. The will of Cap'n Whelan possessed her. It was comforting—so restful after the years in which she had played a lone hand with what should have been glorious independence. This was like being hypnotized. She was happy. He wanted his way with her as all men did—but a different way. And she wanted to give, to mother this ungainly creature and his baby, Samuel. She had been mastered by arrant sentiment and she knew it—but what else did women live by? And the women of her kind were the greatest sentimentalists of all. Taking risks, chasing shadows, impulsive, greedy, generous. They gave and they withheld unreasoningly—the animal in them. They sold nothing and gave everything. A job for her—comfortable—on a brig. She looked at him. He had gone blurred and misty, and still sat silent.

Tina nodded.

"I'll try it," she said.

Cap'n Whelan had known she would. He showed no excitement, but merely nodded in turn.

"Yer engaged," he said briskly. "Four pounds a week, yer keep, of course, and a cabin t' yerself. Sacked if y' play up, but yer all right. Brains. Quick on the uptake. A fool 'd have been frightened o' me—in t' other way. But y'—y' know so much y' know when there's a difference. All right. Get yer things together. Hurry! We'll go straight aboard. I'll send the boys up fer yer gear Sailing tomorrow morning for Netherlandia. All right."

He dismissed her, waving her about her business.

"Well——!" thought Tina. There was nothing else to think. Subconsciously she was in revolt to find her crazy acceptance of his crazy proposal treated in such a casual fashion. But there did not seem to be any protest she could make. Cap'n Whelan was ordering another gin. She left him and walked across the lounge unconscious of the amused and interested glances which followed her. It must be like this to be drunk. You could move, but you didn't quite know what you were doing. She was in her room. Clothes were strewn about in a careless fashion. Tina never troubled about her clothes; she ruined them. Mr. Heathershaw's trunks were there. She bundled in hats and shoes and stockings and dresses and underclothes and wraps in tangled masses. The room was quiet and hot. The Queen of the Netherlands watched the proceedings from a frame on the wall. Tina worked in a kind of frenzy, humming snatches of song.

THERE was a knock at the door. In answer to her question the hotel boys trooped in, very anxious to assist. Cap'n Whelan did not mind paying when he got what he wanted. They picked up the first of the four trunks and carried it off. She saw them go with a sense of surprise, feeling that she should order those calm Malays to put her things down and not go marching off with them to the unknown. But she did not speak. She packed more hastily. It was finished. She went to the mirror and patted her hair into place.

Her eyes were a surprise. They were queer, dilated, deep. She looked down into them, trying to see her soul. But their depths defied her.

"God, Tina," she remarked, "this time you have torn things!"

Her reflection nodded confirmation.

When she turned away the last of the bags had gone. The room was a place untenanted. She left it without a glance. A small gold powder box inscribed, "To Tina—love—J.," and a pair of silver backed brushes presented by somebody else remained behind her. The boys found other treasure trove—stockings and hats and a bag with some money in it. But Tina was never one for such details. Bareheaded, in an expensive evening cloak and gown, she went down the marble steps to the hall where Cap'n Whelan waited, bulging, mopping, hat resting on stomach like a growth.

"Ah, all right," he said. "Shove off. Luggage's following on a cart. Car at door. C'on!" He turned and rolled away across the lounge. Tina followed in his wake.

The Americans were among the enthralled observers.

"Can you boat it?" asked Ira. "Caveman stuff. The great big whale has swallowed her like she was Jonah."

"Maybe her father," the other retorted. "Lord knows." He felt sad—as if he had lost something.

Cap'n Whelan and Tina went down the steps leading to the pavement, beneath the overarching palms. The brightness from the lounge flooded out about them. He led the way to the car through the jostling throng and got in, subsiding in the corner with a satisfied grunt. Tina's foot was on the step.

A voice said, "Teen——?" in greeting and question, a voice sharp with astonishment and dismay.

She swung about. Cap'n Whelan remained in his corner.

Billy Bowden stood on the edge of the pavement. His face had gone drawn and white. He was off guard, not master of himself, staring. To Tina, in the gutter, he looked taller than ever. She saw there was dust on his perfectly fitting clothes, and thought: he's come back by car—that's why he's dusty.

"Teen——?" he repeated.

She must not stand dumb like this.

"Hullo, Billy," she answered in a little gust. "I thought you'd be back tomorrow."

"I know," he said on a tense note. "I'm sorry. I thought you'd be glad to see me—that I'd give you a surprise."

"You have," said Tina.

There was a little pause. Billy Bowden's eyes searched her calm face, craving an explanation. Cap'n Whelan sat motionless. People watched from the lounge, wondering and guessing. The street crowds drifted by. Tina remained still, her hands clasped before her, looking a child.

"Billy," she said, "I've cheated you like I cheated him. You lose after all. I'm going away."

"With that?" demanded Billy Bowden, incredulously. He jerked his head at Cap'n Whelan, his expression turning to one of nausea.

"Yes." The absurdity of all this swept over her, bright and cooling like a summer shower. She began to laugh. "You'd never understand, Billy, if I explained all day. You couldn't even credit it. I'm going away to be a governess"—she hesitated for a moment—"and I gave Mr. Heathershaw's brooch and your ring to an absurd little lamp trimmer from a tramp ship last night."

After all, it wasn't to remain a secret, but she could not resist the temptation to demonstrate to Billy Bowden that she was Tina, the bewitching, the incomprehensible. In any case, the shop by the docks did not seem so important now. With aloof interest she watched the trick succeed. Billy Bowden flamed up to the mystery of this—her mystery. He was losing his self-control, and he didn't like that. His mouth was trembling at the corners, if he only knew it. In that second he was absolutely hers, and she could have had anything she wanted from him. He had never desired her so much before. He would have paid any price to strip her, mind and soul and body, and discover what in the name of heaven and hell she was. But, thought Tina from a long way off, Billy Bowden was too ambitious. He was never going to have the chance. He could never have done it.

"Billy," she said, "there's the hotel bill. I'd forgotten. These things never interest me." She was smiling at him, slowly.

"I fixed it," boomed Cap'n Whelan, gruffly. "Get in."

"O!"

Billy Bowden stood like a man in a dream, hands in the side of pockets of his coat and thrust forward at her, head thrust forward, mouth still trembling at the corners.

"Thanks a million times for all you've done," said Tina. She looked up at him. "If I fail, Billy, as a governess or if I want to come back—may I?" She lifted up her face to his in sweet inquiry.

There were curses on Billy Bowden's lips, but he was silent. He looked down into her eyes for a long second.

"Yes," he said, as if the word choked him.

"Thanks and good night, Billy," said Tina. She gave him a friendly parting nod and stepped into the car. He stood watching her as if expecting a reprieve, a last moment explanation. The car moved off. Tina looked straight ahead. Billy Bowden remained on the edge of the pavement. The driver changed gears badly.

"T'fellow, I suppose?" asked Cap'n Whelan.

"Yes," said Tina.

"Ah!"

They said no more. Tina was interested to find that Billy Bowden had gone completely.

The car went on. The streets were left behind and they entered the bazaar, finding a slow path down the narrow way, which was thronged with hot humanity. To Tina the bazaar was a wall of spinning, weaving color—an enchanted wall, for on one side of it lay the hotels, the mail boats, the cities, the Billy Bowdens and the Mr. Heathershaws, the shops and the hated routine; and on the other the unknown: brigs, queer places, babies, monsters without a threat. On the one side the world of today; on the other that of the old mapmakers, who with their guesses had contrived such a much more fascinating world of "Here be dragons" and "Great wealth of rubies here." Joy reawakened in her, and, this being so, she could admit for the first time that joy had lain dead since Martin went away. All in between had been a pursuit of forgetfulness.

They passed on to a long road, shadowy and still. Great white godowns—like fat paunched merchants—were ranged along it, well fed with the produce of the east. When the warehouses came to an end ships were revealed lying along the docks.

Cap'n Whelan, who had remained puffing at his pipe as if exhausted by his earlier eloquence, spoke gruffly to the driver. The car slowed down and stopped beside the wharf. There were no ships here, only darkness.

"Boat's waiting," he said, and got out. Tina followed him, and stood on one side while he paid the fare. The car swung round, bathing her in light, and then it became no more than a red dot fleeing back for the rank outside the hotel. To Tina it seemed a long journey. Cap'n Whelan led the way across the dock to steps descending into the night. He swore and kicked something, which became the figure of a man jumping up and rousing a fellow sleeper. Cap'n Whelan gave commands shortly. The figures vanished down the steps and they followed. The place smelt of slime. Tina felt her way cautiously, and, coming to the bottom, discovered a boat there. She took Cap'n Whelan's extended hand. It closed over hers, soft and wet. Then she was sitting on the side thwart, Cap'n Whelan hulking blackly in the stern, and the Malays were rowing, grunting at each stroke.

Cap'n Whelan chuckled suddenly and slapped his knee. He had thought of another joke. He was becoming quite a humorist, and the thought pleased him.

"Just as well y' don't believe girls is ruined," he said. "Be a good place for ruining, eh?"

Tina could see the curves of his shoulders shaking.

"Perfect," she agreed, and laughed, too. The silly old monster! She would have laughed at anything at the moment.

"T' Hirondelle!"

Tina followed the line of the outstretched arm. She saw a silhouette ship, blacker than the night. Her masts rose thin as spears, the riding lights glowing against the stars. Rigging made fine tracery. She seemed quiet and dead, like a phantom ship which would vanish with the dawn. Tina nodded to Cap'n Whelan. She did not want to say anything. Her heart was fluttering. She felt as if she were ten years old and having terrible adventures in the black stable loft.

The gentle crunch of wood on wood made the Hirondelle real. Her side rose above the dinghy. Cap'n Whelan stood up, and the boat rocked as he stepped out. He helped Tina up, and they ascended the short ladder to the deck. It was dark and silent, but Cap'n Whelan's shadow showed the way, swaying from side to side. They descended into the black pit of the saloon. Tina stood uncertain at the foot of the companionway.

Cap'n Whelan was at home now. He moved with sure steps across the place and opened a door. A warm oblong of light appeared, against which he stood outlined in sepia. He spoke to some one within. Then he turned to her.

"All right," he said. "Come on. Mr. Carrington's ashore. Drunk, I suppose—gambling—fool. Left Nagashima in charge of Samuel." His voice softened on the name. "Kid don't look himself, but that ain't his fault, poor little tyke." His voice was touched with tenderness. "See fer yerself."

The ship was very quiet. Tina crossed to the door and looked into a tiny cabin. She had a vague impression of stacks of baby clothes neat from the shop, tins of baby food ranged about, and a baby smell in the air. She realised that a Japanese was sitting in the corner. But what she saw was Samuel, lying naked in the bunk, his skin covered with heat rash, his thin limbs flung out, his eyes closed. Three quick running steps took her to him, and he was in her arms. The little body was soft against her flesh, her right breast molded into it. Samuel nestled to her. She felt the beat of his heart against her. Joyous thrills of pain ran through her, setting her a-quiver.

Tina stood erect, her head up, her cloak flung back, her white arms about the babe. The light of the oil lamp was soft and mellow. She looked out beyond Cap'n Whelan into the darkness of the saloon. Her eyes were shining like stars, and a crinkling smile bent up the corners of her mouth.

The Americans should have seen that picture. Billy Bowden, Mr. Heathershaw, and the rest would have discovered the Tina they had fumbled blindly for and missed. But the only onlookers were the smooth faced Nagashima and Cap'n Whelan. The master stood in the darkness, goggling in. He did not know quite what he had done, but he was glad in his fat heart. Cap'n Whelan would show them; he got what he wanted.

TINA had fallen in love for the second time in her life—and seriously in love. In three glorious days the infant Samuel had won her heart.

She was alone with him in the cabin. This was the hour dearest to her. The night had brought coolness and a breeze which set the dresses hanging on the hooks whispering together. The timbers of the Hirondelle creaked gently, and the soothing chatter of the sea stole in through the open ports, which were purple disks thick with stars. The lantern, turned low, gave off a faint light. A smell of talc powder and scented soap pervaded the cabin. It was a little home. Already she felt as if she had never lived anywhere else.

Throughout the heavy, humid heat of the day Samuel had been peevish, but now he lay peacefully on the bunk, his drowsy blue eyes looking up at her in quaint inquiry as if he had some important matter he wished to raise, but was too content to trouble about it. He was fed and bathed and happy. Tina, kneeling on the floor, crooned over him. He gave her his red gummed smile as the long lashes fluttered down and were lifted again in an effort to remain awake.

Tina, swept away by a sudden welling of love, bent impetuously and kissed his round little stomach, snuggling her face upon it. Signs of the rash still showed, but the skin was fresh to her mouth and the body sweet, without a trace of the fever which had burned it.

"Ah!" panted Tina, eating him hungrily with her lips, "why aren't you mine? Why aren't you all mine?"

The hushed cry came from her heart. She crouched there, her face still resting on him, her hair tumbled forward, her arms pressing him to her with fierce gentleness. Why wasn't he hers? Why, for her, only the bitter-sweet of foster motherhood? This babe whom she adored dependent on her now for his very life, but she had not given him life. It had come out of nothingness and existed and quickened in another woman's body. A pang of jealousy shot through her. She hated that mother, the unknown mother, with unreasoning, instinctive hatred. The gods had been so good to the creature—had given her Samuel—and she had appreciated the gift so little that she had let him be abandoned him. Whatever the explanation behind the coming of Samuel to the brig, Tina was confident that the mother was entirely to blame by neglect or selfishness or sheer brutality. That vile woman——!

And here was she worshiping—burnt up by love which hurt—yet she had not gone down into hell to carry Samuel to the sunlight. He had not lain beneath her heart, nor had she known his tender lips. Her firm breasts tingled at the thought, pulsed. But she was only a governess. If Martin had come back—if Martin had come back! A governess—that was the bitterness of it.

But there was sweet, too. At least he was for Samuel now—to cherish, to weep over, to laugh at, to suffer for. Hers! She lay very still, her cheek scarcely touching him, her pulses moving to the music of his heart. Tears were upon her lashes.

THE NEW WAY to Shape the Cuticle

The cuticle shapes the nail

"Remove the dead cuticle .. Supply the missing oils"

YOU can have lovelier hands than ever before. Northam Warren, the authority on the manicure, has added this new perfection to their care.

This new step gives the beautiful curve at the base of the nail that makes it almond shaped, gives aristocratic length to the hand, reveals the pretty half moons.

It is the wonderful new Cuticle Cream or Oil for use after every bit of ugly dead cuticle has been wiped away with Cutex Cuticle Remover. Not just ordinary "cuticle softeners" they actually feed the missing oils to this tiny rim of skin. What a difference either makes. No more rough splitting cuticle, no ugly white rim. The cuticle becomes charmingly smooth and pink. It is no trouble at all to train it to the beautiful curve that gives perfect ovals, lovely half moons.

Massage either one in after removing the dead cuticle with Cutex. To restore badly neglected cuticle, rub the Cream or Oil in every night.

Try this new way to shape the cuticle. Send 10c with the coupon for the miniature set containing samples for 6 manicures. Northam Warren, New York, Paris, London.

TO HAVE lovely oval nails and half moons, all dead cuticle must first be removed. Do this with the safe antiseptic—Cutex Cuticle Remover

THE CUTICLE unnourished by the oils that keep the rest of the skin soft becomes smooth and beautifully curved when Cutex Cream or Oil supplies these oils

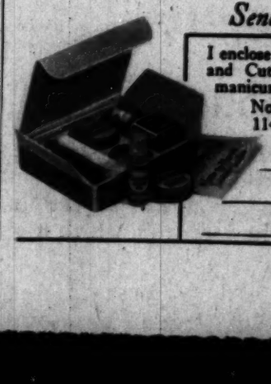
Send 10c for the new way today



I enclose 10c for samples of Cutex Cuticle Cream, Oil and Cuticle Remover, with other essentials for 6 manicures.

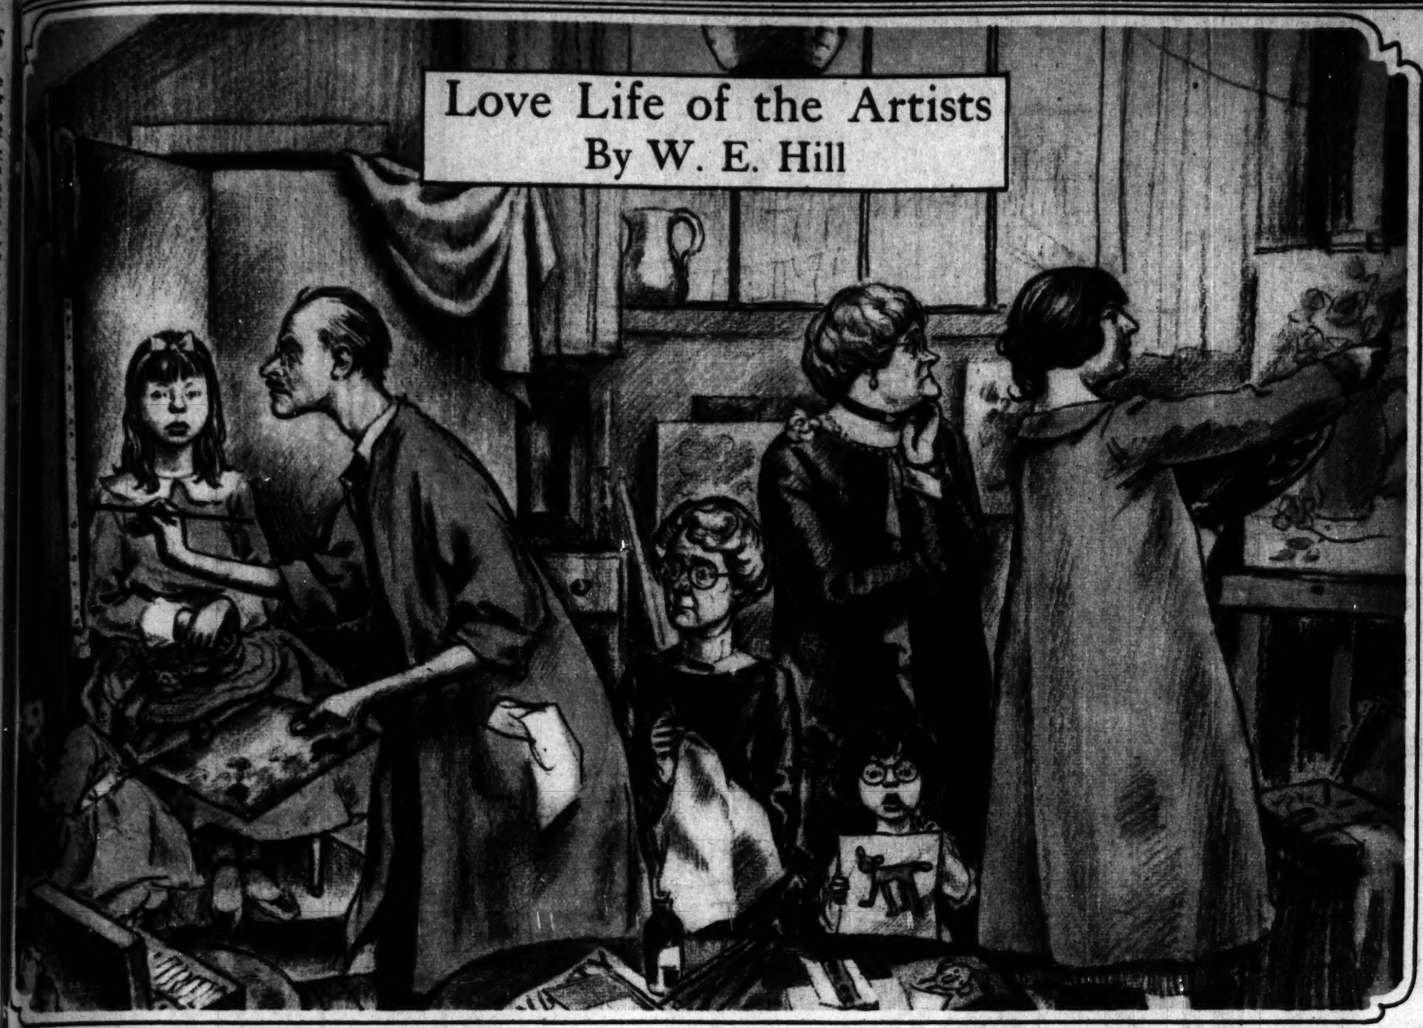
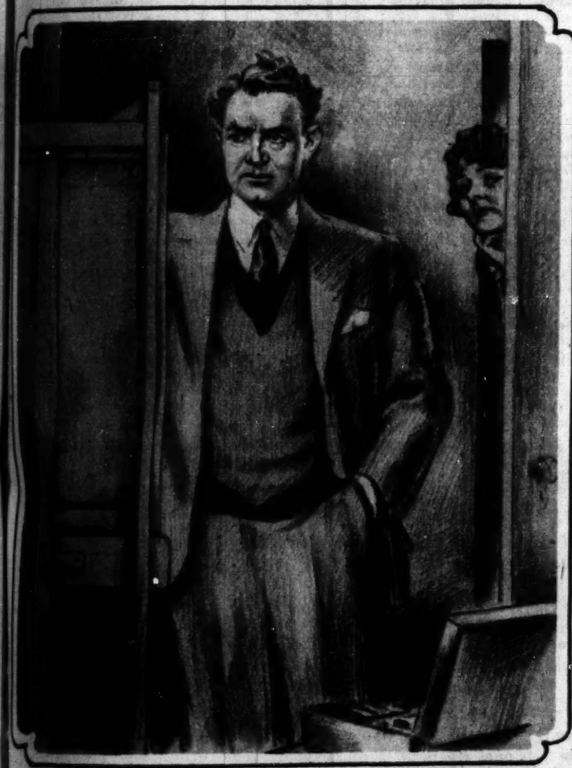
Love Life of the Artists
By W. E. Hill



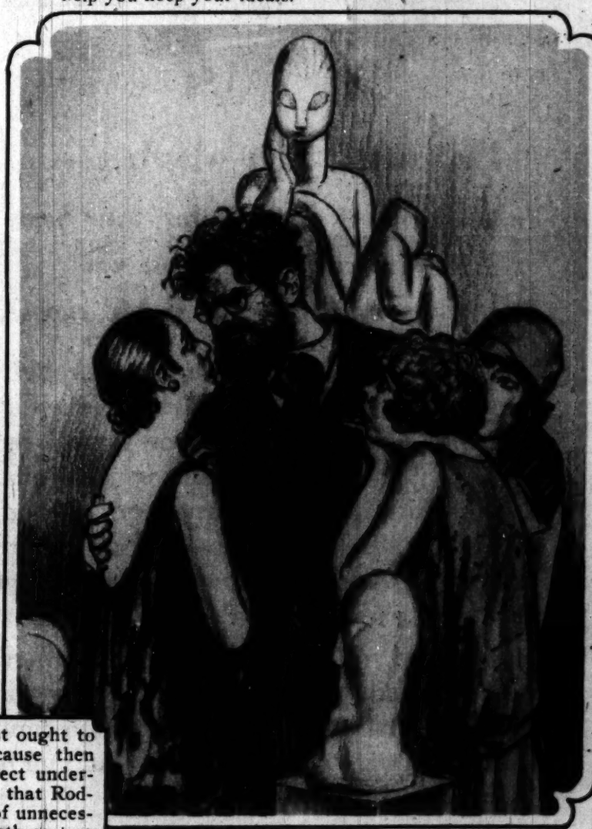
The Linseeds, Harold and Tina, are thoroughly congenial. What one doesn't paint the other does, and many a happy morning they spend, surrounded by their four charming children, in their studio apartment. Occasionally, owing to the fact that art patrons are few, it becomes necessary to augment the family circle with Harold's and Tina's respective mothers. They help share expenses and the children don't mind a bit doubling up with grandma at night. Eda, the eldest girl, is posing for Harold this morning, while Tina's mother looks on. "Did you make Eda's left eye bigger on purpose, Harold?" she asks. Tina is doing a still life for the academy and Harold's mother is watching.

Next to actors, pianists, and underwriters, no young men alone in a big city inspire such tremendous maternal feeling among what the public prints refer to as society matrons as do artists. "Let me," these ladies say, "be to you as Leonardo's Mona Lisa was to him. Let me help you keep your ideals."

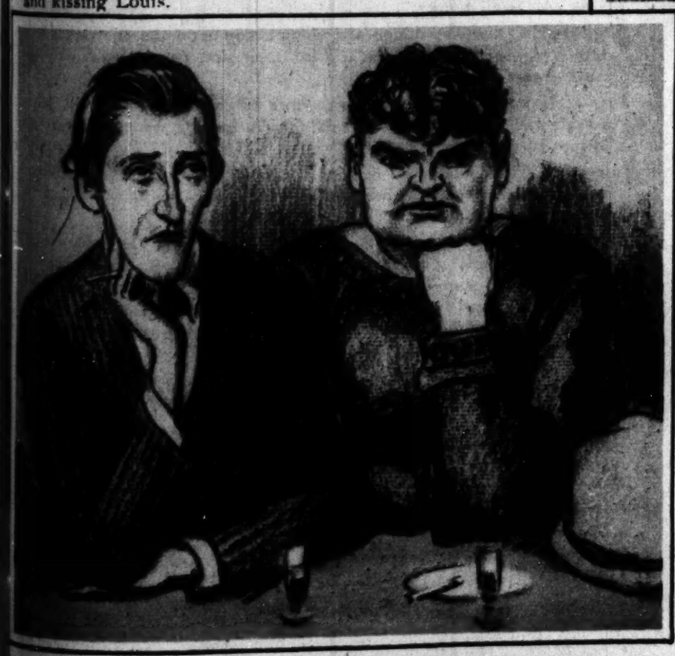


Louis does magazine covers. His little wife, Mabel, lends a jealousy motif to an otherwise perfect love nest. Mabel is always peeking to make sure the model isn't hugging and kissing Louis.

Some say that an artist ought to marry an artist. Because then only can he have perfect understanding. Certain it is that Rodney and Rose do a lot of unnecessary bickering. A month or two in an art school would have done a lot for Rose, who just can't understand why Rodney should begrudge her "one little banana" from his still life group.



Ernest is a philanderer and his love life is very scattered. Like Clara Bow in the movie, Ernest seems to have "it." Three or four sweet young things are always falling in love with Ernest and begging to pose!



For years Rollo and Phyllis have been sweeties in a purely platonic way. There are times when Phyllis would like to get married, and then Rollo has to convince her all over again that freedom is a very precious thing. Rollo does candy boxes for a gift shop and Phyllis is assistant proofreader for the Inter Plastic Arts Monthly. Rollo is breaking Phyllis of the coffee habit. "It gives you," says he, "a false sweetness that is a lie to your inner nature."

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Edward and Isabelle are art students. They have been going together since the beginning of the fall term and they hate so many things in common that they are very congenial. They would be engaged if it weren't so Victorian.

Irving does those society portraits abounding in pearls and white satin. He believes in combining, where possible, his love life and his business acumen. While passionate, his affairs of the heart are always directed where they will do Irving the most good. He has just told Mrs. Saul Sandpiper how paintable she is. "You have," he explains, "tonal qualities that Fra Angelico would have wept over. Romney would have ached to paint you in a garden. How I should love to do you in just that dress, Louise! I may call you 'Louise,' may I not?"

Don't wait until next winter

... get the facts that will rid you of heating worries now!

Let us tell you whether—

An oil burner is practical for your home

How much it would cost you

Which type of burner you should choose

YOU (and your wife) have been through a winter of slavery to a coal furnace. Of course you have wished for oil heat — its dependable, unvarying comfort and efficiency. You are tired of the dreary morning and night routine of shoveling coal—shaking a furnace—carrying out ashes. Next winter, you say, you will have done with furnace drudgery forever.

But when you think of actual oil burners, your mind is filled with doubts. So many different kinds are manufactured. So many conflicting claims are made for them. . . ."Would oil heat be practical in my house?" you ask. "Which type of oil burner is best suited to my use?". . . Naturally you listen alertly to the oil burner discussion of your friends. But their pros and cons cannot answer your individual questions.

Here is the offer of authoritative, helpful information

Your home is different from other homes. Its differences must be thoroughly considered by engineers before they can tell you the most efficient heating method you can use. Fill out the coupon at the bottom of this advertisement and mail it in to us. With the information that it will give us, our engineers will advise you authoritatively as to which type of oil burner, if any, you should install in your home. They will do this without the slightest obligation to you.

We want you to know the facts about oil burners. And because of our recognized prestige and experience in the oil heating industry, we are pre-eminently qualified to give you these facts.
